"Hampton Court, the 27th September 1632.

"Sir,—It hath pleased Sir Robert Gordon, my noble and speciall friend, to call me to an action of double honour in joyning me with his Majestie as an assistant and witness to the christening of his chyld. I owe the gentleman so much respect, and for this particular favour so many thankes, that nothing but his Majesties service and urgent affaires should have hinddred me to wait in person upon him at that solemnyties, had it bein to go to the remotest part of England; and as I hope that this will excuse my absence, so lykewyse I entreat it may serve to make an apologie for the boldnes I take to desyre You, Sir, to act, and better, my part in that ceremonie with his Majestie's deputy . . . . Carlile."

Sir Robert's mother was Lady Jane Gordon, the divorced wife of the Earl of Bothwell, and thereafter wife of the Earl of Sutherland. There is a very interesting letter from her to her son Sir Robert. Also her 3d marriage contract with Ogilvie of Boyne, dated 1599. Being a member of the Roman Catholic Church, she, on various occasions, was persecuted on account of her religion; and towards the end of her days, she was excommunicated. In 1627 Sir Robert, in consideration of the sentence being relaxed, undertook, by a formal bond to the Bishop of Caithness, that his mother "sall outterlie forbeir and absteine "frome recepting of preistis and Jesuitis, and frome "heiring of mass in tyme cuming." It seems likely that his own reputation for orthodoxy suffered from his adherence to his mother, and in 1646 the Presbytery of Elgin granted a testimonial in his favour, setting forth that "since his residence amongst us heir "in the presbytery of Elgin, Sir Robert Gordon hath "bein a main advancer off the true religion, and a "great forderer and helpe in what concerned this "present reformation; and is weill affected to the "church and peace off this country, and hath yeelded "full and constant obedience to all publick ordinances "off the church."

A document of a like purport was signed by the lay friends of Sir Robert Gordon in July 1646, which, after various statements like those in the preceding testimonial, adds: "And in speciall Wee (the Commander and "officeres off the Garison of Spynie) can not but "acknowledge the said Sir Robert Gordoun's assistance "and willingnes to helpe us during thir sturres, and "whilst wee were besieged bee the enemy: And Wee "do all hereby declare that whatsoever hath escaped "the said Sir Robert, proceeded from the violence off "the enemy residing in his bounds, threatening dayly "both his own and his tennants ruine with fyre and "sword, Which Wee do earnestly and humbly recommend to the consideration off the honourable Committee of Parliament. Among the subscribers are "Alexander Sutherland of Duffus, John Grant of "Ballandalloch, Ninian Dunbar of Grange, Walter "Innes of Auchluncart."

Among the papers is "The latter will and testament "of me Sir Robert Gordon of Gordonstoun; wrytten "and subscryved by me at Gordonstoun the ellewinth "day of July jaj sex hundreth fifty four yeris."

He appointed his wife ("whom I hawe ewer found "lowing") to be his executor, and the Earl of Sutherland to be "owerseer" of his will; and he particularly recommended his wife and children to the care of Sir Robert Innes of that ilk, the Lord Brodie, Sir Robert Farquhar of Mounie, Colonel David Barclay (his son-in-law), Robert Gray of Arbo, and Maister John Hay, Commissary of Murray, his worthy friends.

He made the following bequests:—

"Item, I do leawe to my sone Lodowick and to his heyres male my order of Knight Baronet, with some dyamonds upon it; and if he please he may carie it upon a small golden chayn about his neck, als weel as upon a ribbon."

"Item, I doe leawe to my grandchyld Robert Gordon (Lodowick's sone), and to his heyres male, as a small token from me, my sasaphas coope edged about the mouth with silwer, and my table men of whalebone; and I do appoint them to be kept for him by his grandmother so long as shee liwes."

"Item, I do leawe to my grandchyld Robert Barclay my silwer peices and purspennies, as a small token from me, and I do appoint his mother to keep them for him so long as shee liwes."

"Item, I do expect that my wyff will leawe her great Dyamond Jewell (with King James his picture upon it) to my sone Lodowick and his sone Robert Gordon, as a memorie to the house, which I do entreat her to do, seeing it was her umquhyle mother's will that it should be so: unles shee be forced to sell it for the payment of our detts."

Sir W. G. G. Cumming, Bart.

"Item, I do also expect that my wyff will giwe to our grandchyld Robert Gordon (Lodowick his sone) and to his heyres male, as a token from her to the house, the bed and furniture of tent stitch wroght upon grein cloth; with the curtains, valance, coopboord, cloith, stooles, chair, and coutch apperteyning thereto; all wrought by my mother in law Dame Geneweiwe Petaw."

"Item, I do recommend the building of the church of Drenie to my wyff and to my sone Lodowick; but particularlie I do recommend the building of a share therof to my wyff; for seeing wee hawe taken down the old church of Kinneddor it is reason that wee help to build another."

Sir Robert Gordon was married in 1613 to Louyse Gordon, only daughter of John Gordon, Dean of Salisbury,—a union which accounts for the occurrence of a set of documents in the charter room.

John Gordon, who was son of Alexander Gordon, Archbishop of Athens and Bishop of Galloway, is represented as having been a man of great learning, and a constant maintainer of the privileges of the Church of Salisbury. He was married to Genevieve Petaw, daughter of Monsieur de Moylett, first president of the Court of Parliament in Britany; she died and was buried at Gordonstoun.

One of the papers of this series is the contract of marriage, written in French, between Sir Robert Gordon and Louyse Gordon, dated 23rd February [1613]; she was brought up with Queen Henrietta Maria.

Another is the will of John Gordon, Dean of Salisbury, dated 16th September 1618. In the commencement he returns thanks to God for his many mercies, among which he specifies "that he made me to bee instructed "and taught from my youth up in scholes and colledges, "as well in Scotland as in Fraunce, in all good disci-"pline and liberall artis and sciences, and in the know-"ledge of the Greeke and Hebrew languadges and other "orientalls, and by that meanes called me from the "Invocation and adoration of creatures inferiors to the "Saide holy and blessed Trinitie practised in the now "Romaine Church and other doctrines, "transubstantiation, and adoration of the hostia missalis "exercised therein, and hath called mee to the reformed "Church of England, Scotland, and Ireland, protesting "by me before the Eternall and Almightie God and "before the celestial powers, Archangels, Angels, Cherubims, and Seraphimes, and all other his ministeriall "spirites, that by the grace of God and the assistance "of his holy Spirit, that I shall constantly persevere "and continue unto the separation of my soul from my "body in the doctrine of Salvation now preached in the "said church. I give allso thankes to the said holy "Trinitie who after I had bene Gentelman of three "Kinges chambers in Fraunce, to wit Charles the 9 and "Henry the thirde and foverth in the flower of my "adge, and thene was assailed with many corruptions "as well spirituall as temporall and many daungers of "my life, that my said lord and saviour did miraculously preserue me and deliuer me from all the saide "daunger, and called me by King James my "soveraignes gratiousnesse to this habitation in England "and to this holy ministrie, being then of 58 yeares of "adge . . . . And that I may leave to posteryty all "the bookes that I haue written both in Latine and allso "in Inglish in matters of Religion, praying ernestly "Sir Robert Gordon of Sudderlan, my soone in lawe, "that if God shall call mee to his heuenly Kingdome "before I may publishe the said bookes, that he will be "carefull of them that they that are in Inglish be published in Scotlande, and these that are in Lattine "beyound the seaes, so that the great and long labores "and paines that I by the grace of God haue bestowed "in composing the saide Bookes be not lossed. Now "because the Apostell Heb. 9 v. 27 hath taught me and "all Christians that Statutum est hominibus semel mori "post autem hoc judicium, it is ordained to men once "to die and that after that is judgement, I belieue constantly and firmly Christ saying in St. Johns Gospell "chap. 5 v. 24, qui verbum meum audit et credit ei qui "misit me habet vitam eternam, et in judicium non "venit, sed transiuit a morte in vitam, he that heareth "my word and beeleueeth in him who hath sent me "hath everlasting life and shall not com into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life, and therefore "seing that God hath given me an assured and stedfast "faith that the eternall father hath sent his eternall "sonne in this world for to redeeme from Satan, hell, "and condemnation all faithfull beelievers according to "his eternall forknowledge, purpose, election, predesti-

The dean of Salisburie was a writer in verse as well prose. Two of his productions occur in a contemporary hand, which may be his own. The title of the first is as follows: "Quod Papa jus regna transferendi et dandi " usurpans est Vicarius Satanæ."

The second is thus "englished" by the author:—

" When Neptun saw in Adrian surges stand
Venice, and give the sea laws of command:
Now Jove said he object thy Capitoll,
And Mars proud walls, this were for to extoll
Tiber beyond the Main, both Touns behold;
Rome men thoul't say, Venice the Gods did mould."

Sir Robert Gordon was the first of the order of Baronets of Nova Scotia, created by King Charles I. in May 1625, and the charter in his favour under the Great Seal is preserved. By it he had a grant of " all the sea " coast at the south west part of land upon the eastmost " side of that bay called Port de Mutoune (in Nova " Scotia), and from thence going southward three miles " along the coast, and from thence passing northward " from the said sea coast into the mainland, anent those " three miles, till the quantity thereof extend to six- " teen thousand acres of land being always three miles " in breadth . . . . and all erected in a full and " free barony, called the Barony of Gordon, with power " of Regality."

Sir William Alexander (afterwards Earl of Stirling) had been constituted His Majesty's Heritable Lieutenant of New Scotland, and on the 4th of June 1625 he in that capacity executed a deed, which narrated that " albeit " that Sir Robert Gordon, Barronet, Gentleman in " Ordinarie of His Majesties Privie Chamber, as prin- " cipall, and Sir Alexander Strachan, Baronet of Thorn- " ton, as cautioner for him, be their band bearand date " herof, are obleist to pay and deliver to me my aires " or assignies whatsoever the soume of Three thousand " merks, usuall money of the Kingdome of Scotland, as " principall soume, upon the eleventh day of November " next to cum, ... nevertheless for the reguard I " have to the well and furtherance of the plantation of " the said countrie, and whereby they may be the better " encouraged to plant and cause inhabite their own " particular bounds within the said countrie, I bind and " obliss me and my forsaids to warre and bestow Two " thousand merks money forsaid of the said Three " thousand merks, after it beis payed to me or my for- " saids, towards the setting forth of a colonie of men " furnished with necessaire provision, to be planted be " me, my aires, or our deputies, within the said countrie, " be the advise of the said Sir Robert Gordon and the " remanent Baronetts of Scotland, adventurers in the " plantation of the same, or so many of them as shall " meete and conveene with my aires or our deputies " within Scotland, and that at our meeting we appointed " for that effect to be at St. Johnstoun the xxvii day of " August next to cum, or at any other meeting to be " appointed be us at that time, and that the time of the " setting forth of the said colonie shall be likewise con- " descended upon be their advise."

By a subsequent deed, dated at London, 2nd July 1625, Sir William Alexander, in consideration of sums of money paid to him granted to Sir Robert Gordon a tack for nineteen years of " all and haill the Admiralitie of all " the sea coastes, ports, and harbours of all lands and " bounds pertaining heretablie to the said Sir Robert " Gordon within the said countrie of New Scotland." In return, Sir Robert became bound to pay " yearlie, " during the space above written, within St. Giles Kirk " in Edinburgh in Scotland, upon Whitsunday-Even, " the Soume of fyve merks usual Scottes money."

Robert Barclay, the grandchild of Sir Robert, to whom, as has been seen, one of his bequests was made, was the son of Colonel David Barclay of Ury, and became celebrated as the author of an "Apology" for the Quakers, and other works written in defence of that body. His mother was Katherine Gordon, Sir Robert Gordon's eldest daughter.

William Pen who acquired the territory of East New Jersey in 1681, became associated in a business partnership connected with it, of which the Earl of Perth, Robert Barclay, and David, his son, were members.

In 1683 one of Pen's original partners disposed of his share to Sir John Gordon of Durno, advocate in Edinburgh, and among the papers is a letter written to Sir John by Robert Barclay, the apologist.

It is dated " Ury the 4 of the 1st Month 1684. Dear " Cousine, I suppose thou has wrott ere now to London " to thy brother George, and proposed to him to bring " down his veshell here to cary passengers to East " Jersey. I doubt not but he may make as good a " venter that way as any he can propose, and knows " how to project a retourn for himself. There will not " want passengers, besids those that fills another ship to " be hired, and one that is goeing from Glasgow with " Manyward, which will be the best way. And besides " those George may carry upon thy brother's accompt " and thine's, iff he want, it is but getting men from " Strathnaver, to carry over at a venter, which is as " profitable a commodity as he can trade in; the sooner " something can be done the better."

A letter from Gawen Laurie, Deputy Governor of East New Jersey, to a correspondent whose address has been lost, is also preserved. It is dated 26th March 1684, and gives many curious descriptive details of the province. " It is," he says, " beyond what I expected, situated in a " good aire, which makes it healthy, and ther is a great " conveniency of traveling from place to place through " the province in boats, from a small cannoe to vessells " of 30, 40, 50 and in some places 100 ton . . . . . " The soyle is generally black, in some places a foot " deepe, beareth great burthens of corne and naturally " brings forth English grape after two years plowing. " The ground is tender and the plowing very easy.

" The trees grow generally not thick, but in some places " 10, some 15, 20, or 30 upon an acre; this generally " but in some particular places they are 100 on one acre " but rarely. The trees are very tall and straight, the " generall sort are oak, beech, walnutt, chesnutt, gum-" tree, cedar, white wood like our poplar tree, and " makes sufficient boardes; and in some places there is " abundance of firr trees. Wallnutts, chesnutts, and " acorns lye thick on the ground for want of eating. " Peaches, vines, strawberries, and many other sorts of " fruit grow commonly in the woods. Ther is plenty " of oysters, fish, and fowle. Pork is two pence per " pound, beef and venison one penny per pound, a whole " fat buck for five or six shillings, Indian corn two and " six pence per bushell, oats twenty pence, barly two " shillings. Wee have good brick-earth and stone, for " building, at Amboy and elsewhere. The countrey " farm-houses are built very cheap; a carpenter with a " man's own servantts builds the house; they have all " materialls for nothing, except nailes, their chimneys " are of stone. They make their own ploughs and carts " for the most part, only the iron-worke is verry deare. " The poorer sort set up a house of 2 or 3 roomes them-" selves in this manner: the walls are of cloven timber " about eight inches broad, lyke planks set on end in " the ground nailed to the raising which they plaister " verry warme; they build a barne after the same man-" ner; and these cost not the landlord above five pounds " apiece; then to work they go: two or three men will " cleare in one yeare fifty acres, in some places sixty or " more; they sow corne the first yeare, and afterwards " maintain themselves, and the encrease of the corne, " cows, horses, hoggs, and sheep comes to the landlord. " . . . . Our English people are far better hus-" bandmen than the New England men that setle heer. " Servantts work not heer so much by one third part " as they doe in England, and I think, feed much better. " . . . . When they are out of their tyme they " have land for themselves, and generally turn farmers " for themselves. . . . . Send over some hundred " men, countrey fellows that can plough, sow, reap, " thresh, and looke after cattle, &c., and I will sett thee " out a brave plantatione, but thou must send some " goods to stock it withall. I desire thee to encourage " some of our friends, especially the proprietors, to send " servantts to stock some land. . . . . There is one " man, who since I came hither, sold his plantation " for fifteen hundred pounds; the whole was 1600 or " 1800 acres, whereof 120 were cleared, but on which " he had a house, barns, orchard, and garden planted. " . . . . The Scots have taken a right course, they " have sent over many servantts, and are sending more; " they have lykeways sent severall poor familys, some " for seven years, some for ten years, allow halfe the " encrease to their landlords except the milk which the " tenant has to himselfe. . . . Now I have laid " these things before thee, I desire thee to impart them " to some of the proprietors and other friends, that they " may consider the same. I am thy loving friend, " GAWEN LAURIE."

There are, besides the letters already noted, letters written by George Earl of Caithness, 1619; James Lord Frendraught, 1661; Alexander Earl of Murray, 1675. One signed "Lauderdaill," addressed "To my " Lord Balcarrass at St. Andrews," is dated "Tower, ye " 14 of Decr. [no year]." James Earl of Murray, 1644; Lord Duffus, 1678; Earl of Seaforth, 1627; Earl of Balcarras, 1651; Alexander, Master of Elphinstone, 1618; news letters from London to Sir Ludovick Gordon, 1650, and later dates; Earl of Dumfermline, 1616; Earl of Forfar, 1682; Lord Berridale, 1623; Earl of Buchan, 1619; Lord Reay, 1638.

Among the miscellaneous papers is a Report of the Commissioners appoynted for tryall of the Minte of Scotland at Edinburgh, 4th August 1682. It is subscribed by G. Gordon, Lord Chancellor; Queensberry, Atholl, Montrose, Perth, Southesque, Tweedale, Geo. McKenzie, R. Gordon, and others.

Among the papers at Gordonstoun is an extensive series of miscellaneous documents and correspondence which belonged to Sir Robert Farquhar of Mounie; Sir Robert Gordon's eldest son Sir Ludovick married the daughter and co-heiress of Sir R. Farquhar.

This gentleman, originally a burgess and magistrate of Aberdeen, who received the honour of knighthood from King Charles II. 1651, was a prominent actor in the civil strifes of the period, having acted as Commis-sary depute for the North, under the Covenanting leaders, and thus the centre of a varied correspondence with the public men of the day, and agent in raising levies of troops, and supplies of money, for the armies of the Covenant.

His papers contribute many authentic materials for a picture of the stirring scenes in which he moved, adding as well notices useful for local and family history. There are letters from the Earl Marischal, Major General Bailie, Major General Monro, and communica-tions of various sorts, addressed to Farquhar by the Committee of Estates.

Several detailed accounts of the monies received by him in public loans and levies, with his expenditure for the Covenanting forces, are among the papers, and furnish many useful details.

Sir Robert Farquhar, while a magistrate of Aberdeen, was taken prisoner by the local cavaliers, and carried first to Strathbogie, and then to Auchindoun, where he was confined for a time.

A letter from Sir Robert Gordon, sent to him at Auchindoun, is preserved, with a draft of a letter which he addressed from the same place to the Marquis of Argyll, detailing the circumstances of his imprisonment, but acknowledging that he had received kind and courteous treatment from his captors.

In a Petition addressed by him to the Council of the Protector, he details his many public services and exertions "for subpressing the common enemy in Scot-land," and the no less numerous trials to which he had in consequence been exposed, whereby he had been all but ruined; and concludes with a prayer that their Lordships "might be pleased from their Christiane " compassione and equitie, to design some present expe-" dient upon the whole nation (altho' it were for some " months or years space whereby it should be but little " sensible to the people) for a stock of credit, and mean " of subsistence to him, his family and relations, " rather than that they should utterly perish, for sup-" plying so many thousands in their Lordship's interest " in their great necessity."

One of the letters is from "Mackye, M[aster] of Rey," eldest son of Lord Reay, and is addressed to Sir Robert Farquhar as the writer's "loving foster father." It is dated "Copinhome 6 October 1628," and states that the writer and his brother have hitherto been at a Dutch school, "and now haueing at last obtained of the King " of Denmarks Majestie to giue us frie intertinament, " his Majestie hes derecked us to an Universitie called " Soare, quhilk is eight duch myle laying from this " toune, and there we three geat frie meat and chamer, " our father furnising the rest off our necessaries."

Farquhar has preserved among his papers an order by General Monck, dated at Dundee, 7th October 1651, against the enforcement of unlawful oaths, and de-nouncing all who should tender or take such oaths without order from the Commonwealth of England as public enemies; also copies of public letters of the day.

One of these is from the Protector Cromwell, dated Edinburgh, 25th October 1650, and is addressed to Colonel Strachan. Another, from the Protector to the General Assembly of the Kirk, is dated Musselburgh, 3rd August 1650.

A letter signed by General Monck, and dated Dalkeith, 27th October 1656, is addressed to "The High Sheriff of " the shire of Cromarty." He transmits printed copies of "A true Narrative of the late Success of the Fleet of " the Commonwealth on the Spanish Coast," with directions to send one of them to each of the parish ministers within the shire of Cromarty.

A letter, written by Farquhar to Sir Robert Gordon in August 1644, gives the gist of a letter which Lord Burleigh had received from the chancellor. It contains the following reference to Montrose: " My Lord Montroes " is denyit to have any comand over the Inglische, " because it is said to him they can hardlie trust him " who was not trew to his own natione."

In 1627 Farquhar accompanied Sir Donald Mackay (afterwards Lord Reay) to Germany, when the latter commanded a regiment in the service of Gustavus Adolphus. One of Farquhars papers is an account of the money disbursed in Scotland and Holland for Mackay, from 2nd January to 22nd March 1627. It is remarkable for the number of entries for wine and other drinkables. On embarking at Leith there is paid " for ane rubber of Frensche wyne, 21*l.* 12*s.*; after- " wars for fyve pynts of seck, 4*l.* 10*s.* Left with the " Master of Crawfurd and Captan Mackenzie when we " went to Nimmikin, the 6 of Februar 20*l.* For Spa- " nisch wyne thair 1*l.* 2*s.* Our supper in Bremmell " 13 of Februar 8*l.* 2*s.* Payit seing the kirk thair 4*s.*, " drink-silver 8*s.* Payit seing the kirk and stepill of " Dort 12*s.* Payit in syned-hous for wyne and breid " thair 12*s.* Our supper in Roterdam, 15 of Februar, " 6*s.* Drink-silver thair and for beir, succar, and nut- " muggs 14*s* Payit in Delff seing the saltpiter made, " and seing the spinhuis 80*s.* Supper in Harlem, and " wyne and fire 6*l.* 14*s.*, and drink-silver thair 12*s.* " For ane new sword to his Lordship in Amsterdam " 15*s.* Payit for mending and washing the Colonell's " blew wastcot in Amsterdam 18*s.*"

Farquhar died in 1666, and some of the outlays at his funeral point to the survivance of customs of an early character. Thus Thomas Davidson, master of the music school of Aberdeen, got his fee " for singing at umquhill " Sir Robert Farquhar of Mouny his Lyk." John Cormack, schoolmaster in Aberdeen, was paid " for reading " at Sir Robert Farchar and his Lady their Lykwakes " as the custome is in this place." The kirk officer is paid for " tolling of the kirk-belles of Aberdeene," and another payment is made " for ringien of the Tolboth- " bell for Sir Robert Farqher his beriall." Twenty-five pounds were paid for painting his arms on flags and on Lossones, " one for the yeat and another above " the buriall place." Two trumpeters were paid " for " going thorow the towne and discharging our dewitie " befor the corpes of Sir Robert Farqhar at his burell." And, lastly, 25*l.* 12*s.* were expended " for printing of fyve " large epitaphs in English and Lattin, for a lesser one " in Lattin, and for nyne queare of paper at aucht " shilling per queare."

Among the Farquhar papers are several curious productions from the pen of Sir Thomas Urquhart of Cromarty, the well-known translator of Rabelais. Sir Thomas shared the misfortunes of those engaged on the side of Royalty in the battle of Worcester, and had to retreat to the Continent. Sir Robert Farquhar would seem to have been a creditor on his estates, and to have conveyed his right as such to John Urquhart of Craigfintrie, cousin to the eccentric knight.

To this kinsman Sir Thomas addressed a lengthy epistle, dated from Middleburgh, 1st July 1658. It thus commences: " Cosen—I shall not neid (I hope) to de- " beate heir how justly I intend to discuse the slender " ground which that notoriouslie usurious oppressor " (from whom you derive your title to the land of " Cromartie) had to dispose of any parcell of my " estate."

He then proceeds to reproach his cousin, " whose " greatest honor being to be a cadet of my house," nevertheless " without any regard had to those obliga- " tions wherein you stand engaged to me off being your " chieff and hereditarie owner of the estate and barronie " of Cromartie, together with the barronies of Bray and " Fisherie, from the which three your aforesaid great- " grandfather extracted that pecuniarie substance, quhair- " by he was enabled to make acquisition to these other " above-mentioned Lairdships which by birthright you " did inherit, most inhumanly abuse and unreasonably " employ and lay out this very means thus gratis ob- " tained, as helps and aides, by the which through the " suggestion of the devil (for no honest man could have " advised you to it) you have made the within specifeit " and unhallowed purchase. Who is able with any face " of reason to justifie your unnaturall and cannibally ck " proceedings against me? What more hedious, enor- " mous, and intollerable contempt of one could you " have plunged yourselfe into then to offer without " asking my consent to fall in terms with that weill " knowen Lambe-devouring Fox, Sir Robert Farquhar, " for the lands of my ancient inneritance."

Sir W. G. G. Cumming, Bart.

Sir Thomas then proceeds to enlarge on his cousin's conduct (" mor lyke a cheating cosner than a loving " cosen "), and especially to his misconduct at an interview with Sir Thomas's mother, at which she represented that his possession of her son's estate would not be prosperous. He " did so unmannerlie behave yourselfe that " like a surly Jacanapes, you immediately arose from " the seat quhairon you were sitting, flung out from " that room, untaken your leave, and to the hearing of " thrie of my brothers told that if I had let fall half so " much you wold have tryed whose sword-point had " been scharpest; hence it is clearlie enough apparent " you over walued me exceedingly, be the overvening " hologhness and ambition of serving yourselfe up to " be my equall, whilest at best you ar but as a yester- " dayes grouen up mushrome, mishapenly swolen to the " greatnes quhairin by the gracious sunshyne of the " noble disposition of my father upon the of " that terrestrial drope which did administer nourish- " ment to the enriching of that cadet of his housse to " whom (though the latest of all other) (and you stand " in opposition with me) your greatest honor, wealth, " and fortune. Neverthelesse, least you should escape " unrebuked for so great uncivilitie quhairin I am con- " cerned in my reputation, I will descend many hun- " drethe stepes belowe myselfe to become your equall; " and that you may be the readier to cope with me in " the termes proposed by yoursefe, hear have I pro- " tested, and does protest, that I doe not only justifie " the bare veritie off those words of my mother quhairat " you take exception, but withall avoche in the presence " of God Almighty and the whole world that had she " spoken a thousand tymes more to your prejudice in " that particular, she wold have said ten thousand tymes " lesse than she might have justly withall to the eter- " nall reproache, shame, and imputation of you for your " most detestable, infamous, abominable, and viperis " actings to the ruine and destructione of him to whom " you owe your being and subsistence, as to your cheiff " and prym representer of that familie, quhairof to be " a descente is the greatest credit you can clame to. " Yet did ye not sticke to vaper and braver that iff I " had let fall halfe so much ye vold hawe weyed the " sharpnes of your sourd-poynt with myne (I take you " at your word), and you are (a coward, a knave, a " skelme, and a lier iff ye stand not to it)."

He then goes on to arrange for the proposed duel. " I shall to that effect provyde a couple off sourdes " whairof you sall have your choyse; and seing no pairt " off the whole Ile of Britaine nor yet the sevin united " provinces ar convenient for such a preliarie concerta- " tion, I will appoynt a place more convenient for the " purpose and equallie fit for us bothe, quhairwith I " make accompt to accquent yow within sex weikes " efter the recept of your ratificatione of my exceptance " of your challenge, quhich that it may be the sooner " intimated, I desyr you as either ye wold tender the " repute of either ane honest man or ane gentleman, " that efter the day or tuo at most efter the sight " heiroff, ye deliver unto the bearer the ansuer heiroff, " quhairin expect ye will be pleased to specifie the tyme " quhairin ye will be pleased to cum to the place be me " to be appoynted, with one only gentleman with you, " and by the grace of God I sall bringe another alonge " with me; which tuo ar to be judges, parrares, and " umphires (so called in the militarie idiome) betwyxte " me and you, to the end ther may be no trecherie or " superioritie on either syd."

Sir Thomas then at great length details the baseness of the proceedings against him and his estates, and in conclusion he writes: " You ar the first efter my selfe " who have read this leter, and iff your answer prove " satisfactorie, I have given order that efter your send- " ing therof, it shall not be unclosed untill it cum to my " hands, by which means we may regulat the bussinesse " with secracie, as becometh men of discretion and " judgement. The tuch stone of satisfactorinesse is to " be made apparent to the bearer be thes words of " yours 'I have very cordially embraced the proposalles " 'mentioned in the letter quhich you have delivered to " 'me." Iff this be spoken by you without any appa- " rent dissimulation, you sall not neid to put ony ques- " tion, but bothe the contentes of this letter and your " answer thairto will be kept undevulged till efter our " mutuall encounter, and the wholl busines be person- " allie decided betwixt us bothe. But iff it prove uthor- " wayes, and that you altogether slight the honorable " motions proposed by me for the saving of your own

" reputation, then have I in that caise, given order to " breake up a certaine box (quhairoff I having the key, " it is, in the uther caise of your satisfaction to be re- " turned to me again unopened), and out of it to take " the double off this letter, that copies theroff may be " dispersed over all whole the Kingdome of Scotlan, " with ane incitement to scullions, hogge rubbers, kenell " brakers, and all others of the meanest sorte of rascal- " litie to spit in your face, kicke you in the breach, to " tred on your mushtashes, as also to all those that " knowe you, to curse you with all the execrations " mentioned in the Psalmes off David and uther pro- " phets in the Old Testament, and with all to hold them " in littel better reputatione nor your selfe that will " keipe any kynd off friendly correspondence with you."

" Souldiers of als good burthe as you and off greater " worthe, doe very frouardly hazard ther lives every day " allmost for a smaler pray and less pittance, and shall " you shrinke for the gaining of ane ancient and con- " siderable estaite, to which without my consent you have " no right at all to adventure a personall conflict for the " space of ane halfe houre. You are unworthy of the " name of a man iff you did and fitter to be called ane " amphibian animal, that is of a mixed nature between " the owle and the ape, then a rationall creature. Never- " theless (suspending my judgment of your cowardise " untill I hear either off or from you in what may con- " cerne your answer heirto) I doe promise quhen all lets " sall be removed after the manner aboue specified, that " then I will not only forgive quhat you hawe done unto " me, but withall subscrive my selve your louing and " affectionat freind and cozen."

The letter is not subscribed, and is entitled, in an old hand, " Sir Thomas Wrquhart, his letter to the Laird of " Cromartie."

An earlier letter is in the handwriting of Urquhart, and is addressed to Sir Robert Farquhar, from London, on 30th July 1653. It begins—" I received your letter, " and according to your desire therein shall doe what " lyes in me for oftaking the sequestration which the " publick affaires of this land, together with an inward " grudge against our country in general, hath hitherto " retarded. You wrote to me that the Laird of Innes " claimeth right to some of the quarter tiths of Cro- " martie; but for all the mischief Dundasse hath done " I can show tacks upon them. If you have got a " charge from the Laird of Innes send me the copie " thereof, and I shall doe my best to rack his title." He subscribes himself " your assured friend to doe you " service."

Contract of marriage between Thomas Urquhart of Cromarty and Christian, daughter of Alexander Lord Elphinstone, dated 9th July 1606.

Draft of a Petition by Sir Thomas Urquhart to the King for a protection from his creditors. It is titled on the back in a contemporary hand, " Cromertie's bill to " his Majestie for a supersedere for his debts."

A document entitled " Sir John Urquhart his decla- " ration that he is satisffeit with Dunlugos his consent " to Sir Robert Farquhar his dispositione of Cro- " mertie." It is dated at Edinburgh in September 1663, and seems to have been intended to supply a want in Farquhar's title, referred to in Sir Thomas Urquhart's letter to his cousin, and founded on by him as a flaw.

Sir Robert Gordon, the third Baronet of Gordonstoun, was a man of extensive knowledge and learning, skilled in mechanics and chemistry. He invented a pump for raising water, which was tried in the fleet, and which gave occasion to the following letters addressed to him by Samuel Pepys:—

" Admiralty, 24th May 1687.

" Sir,—I took the opportunity of my attendance on his Majesty on Sunday last to communicate to him your letter to me of the day before, with the account annexed thereto, upon which hee was pleased to direct my prepareing a warrant for his signature for the present payment of soe much thereof as is said to have been by you paid to the severall artificers mentioned in your sayd account, amounting to the sum of 318*l.*, which I have accordingly done, and send you the same enclosed under a cover to the Commissioners of the Navy (with a copy thereof open for your perusall), not doubting the present execution thereof upon your tendering them the same.

" Sir, I am obliged to you for your corteous expressions at the close of your letter. But (as I sayd to you on the like occasion the other day) I doe againe assure you that I never yet suffered myselfe to rob his Majesty of any part of the thanks due for his favours to private persons, and will not begin to doe otherwise in the case of Sir Robert Gordon, to whom, if I have in any wise been serviceable, I think myselfe abundantly rewarded for it by the industry I have seen him use to render himself soe to the King my master. I am, with great truth, your most humble Servant, S. Pepys."

The copy of the warrant above referred to, and dated 22rd May 1687.

Another letter from Pepys to Sir Robert Gordon, dated Admiralty, 10th June 1687:—

" Sir,—Being now (and not till now) informed by yours of this day's date that your two new pumps are furnished with their spare provisions, I am at liberty to move his Majesty for his warrant for the payment for them, and shall doe it, and see it dispatched the very first time I waite upon him, which will be on Sunday morning next. Sooner then this you know I could not doe it without misleading the King to pay for what hee had not then had delivered to him, nor in severall days after the date of your demand thereof, as appears by the date of Capt. Shovell's complaint of the want of them. But now (as I have sayd) you tell me they are actually supplyed I doubt not to bring his Majesties warrant for your payment on Munday morning next, as being your most faithful humble Servant, S. Pepys."

The families of Gordonstoun and Altyre became connected through the marriage of Robert Cuming of Altyre, with Lucy Gordon, daughter of Sir Ludovick Gordon; and the estates were carried to the family of Cuming by the destination of Sir William Gordon, the last baronet of Gordonstoun. The fourth baronet was much maltreated by the Stuarts party after Culloden and his tenants robbed. There are voluminous papers on the subject. He claimed the earldom of Sutherland, and the cause was given in his favour in the Scotch courts, but reversed in the House of Lords in favour of the young countess.

The papers of the Cumings of Altyr, a family of great antiquity and importance, are consequently now arranged with the muniments of the Gordons at Gordonstoun. They consist mainly of Charters and documents connected with their lands of Altyre and other possessions in the province of Moray. The charter room also contains a collection of public proclamations, beginning 1630.

The earliest in date is a Charter by King David II. in 1342, confirming a grant by John Randolph, Earl of Murray, to John of Urwell of the lands of Schanquhar, Tulach, and Drom, with the keeping of the forests thereof. [Date imperfect.]

In the following year a Charter was granted by the same King, confirming a grant by John Randolph, Earl of Murray, to the said John of Urwell, of the lands of Drum, near Pluscardy, with the keeping of the forest thereof; at Aberdeen, 1 May 1343; and a Charter of Confirmation of the first grant was given by the King at Kinloss, on 24 December 1362.

Registered extracts of an Indenture betwix Sir Thomas of Dunbarre, Erll of Mureff, on the ta part, and Alexander Cumyne on the tother part, that the forsaid Erll sall gif his gude will to the marriage of his sister Euffame and xx marksworth of land within his lands of Glencharny. Dated at Fynletter, 28 May 1408.

Precept by Alexander de Ile Comes Rossie ac dominus de Narne to Donald of Caldor, his baillie of Narne, for giving sasine to Alexander Fraser of the lands of Golfurde, Petquhuyne, Kynoudy, and Bordland. Dated at Inverness, 9th January 1436.

Instrument by which Thomas Cuming of Altyr, in presence of his brothers, John and Alexander Cuming, declares the mill of Altyr to belong to the monastery of Pluscarden. January 23, 1456. In this charter the name is spelt five different ways in two lines.

Obligation by Sir William of Urchard, Knycht, Sheriff of Crombathy, &c., to Sir Thomas of Dyngvale, subdene of Ross, &c., that all and syndre the landis of the pollanis, fortreis, and others pertening to umquhile Thomas Cumyn, lord of the samyn, sal nevir in ony tymis to cum be optenit be na process of law, &c., for the said Sir Thomas. At Dyngvale, on Martymes day, 1465.

Indentour of freindschip betuix Thomas Cumyn of Alter and Williame the Hay of Lochloy, becaus of certane debatis and contraversies that have bein betuix thame and thair freindis in tymes bygane . . . and for freindschip favoris and kyndnes to be had betuix thame and thair freindes in tyme to cum. At Edinburgh, 25 July 1476.

Precept under the Great Seal, directed to the Sheriff of Elgin and Forres, to summon Robert Urwell and all others having interest in the lands of Sanquhare, Quhiteraw, Newtoun, Chapeltoun, Tulloch, Auchlisk, and Drom de Pluscardin, to compear at Edinburgh " ad

" videndum et audiendum seipsos amittere debere pro-
" prietatem dictarum terrarum et easdem nobis appro-
" priari nobiscum . . . in proprietate in perpetuum
. . . 23 January 1511.

Dispensation from Rome for the marriage of Thomas Cumyn of Alter and Agnes Grant. Dec. 6, 1529.

Decreet of Exemption by the Lords of Council of Alexander Cumyng of Alter and his kynnismen and friendis aganis Alexander Dumbar of Cumnock, Sheriff Principal of Elgin and Forres. Dated 26 June 1550.

Charter by George Earl of Huntly and Murray to Alexander, Prior of Pluscarden, of the lands of Drummyne, Preslay, Logyurwell, and Ardaucht. 12 March 1553.

Disposition by John Dunbar of Wastfield, Sheriff Principal of Elgin and Forres, in consequence " of ane inimitie and deadly feud standing onreconceillit betwixt me and my predecesseuris and James Cuming of Altar and his predecessors, and in consideration of certain Decreets of Exemption and for the sum of 5,000 marks, Scots . . . creats, constitutis, and ordanis the said James Cuming his airis maill and successors heritable and perpetuall deputs of the said office" . . . . 25 October 1619.

The Register of the Court of the Barony of Altyr contains several entries illustrating the state of society and the condition of agriculture. It commences in 1683, when Alexander Cuming was the baron, and Robert Cuming of Relugas his baillie.

On 20th June 1688 an Act of Court was passed, directing that " ilk tenant and grassman within the Barony " furnish himself with a sufficient sword and gun."

No tenant or grassman is to accept of a servant or servitrix to his service from any other parish without sufficient testimonials from the place whence they came.

The following is a specimen of the punishments inflicted on delinquents. John McPherson, lawful son to the late James McPherson, sometime in Bellatenen, was convicted of " stealing a gray mair from off the greens " of Altyre during night." He was ordered to be " scourged 'twixt the Milltown of Altyr and Lorstoun " be the hand of John Gowie, locksman, to the great " effusion of his blood, and to be banished out of all the " bounds wherein the Laird of Altyr is concerned, and " never to return under pain of death, not being capable " of faith." This sentence was a modified one, " by " reason of the youthhead " of the culprit, and was ordered to be presently put to execution.

Other Statutes were enacted for regulating orchards, for servants, peats, fearns, cutters of woods, &c.

A similar record of the Barony of Gordonstoun is preserved, beginning in 1663. It contains various Acts of Court for the regulation of the affairs of the Barony, such as an Act " anent pasture on Kirkhill," " Act " anent brewers," " Act anent the ferryboat," " anent " ware," " anent the mills," " anent the moss, " anent quarries."

In 1679 Janet Grant was convicted of " Stealing and " away-taking out of Alexander Young's loome two " webs, whereof there was ane of Satinisgobe and ane " other of Dornick; also of carrying out of his chist " to the corn fields where she did break it and took out " twenty rex-dollars, with six ducat-downes, and six four- " tein-shillin pieces, with four pound of small monie, " with four rex-dollars, with ane ducat-donne in ane " purss, with two webs of linin, whereof there was " thirteen ellns in ane web and six ellns in ane other, " with two ellns and ane half of wakd pladin."

The sentence of the judge was that Janet should be carried to the Loch of Spynie and there be drowned under water till she be dead.

Among the papers is one entitled " A full and im- " impartiall account of the whole transactions of this " present Simon Lord Lovat, from the beginning of his " troubles in his own country, and the most remarkable " steps of his acting abroad, written by Major James " Fraser, who was his comerad at his first taking armes " in Scotland, and was partly with him abroad."

There is also a characteristic letter addressed by Lord Lovat to Captain George Cuming, son to the Laird of Altyr, and dated " Beaufort, 1st March 1745."

Captain Cuming had written to his Lordship requesting his assistance to raise recruits for the army. His Lordship thanks his kinsman for his " very kind, polite, " oblidgeing well-writ letter," but was extreamly sorry " and troubled that it was not in his power to serve " him as he would wish."

The postscript gives a curious picture of the habits of the Peer, who was then in his 78th year: " I believe " you will not be ill pleased to know that I have kept " my health better since the beginning of July last " than I have done these thirty years past, and notwith- " standing of this extraordinary severe storm, that I do " realy believe that the like of it was never seen in this " country, I take the cold bath every day, and since " I cannot go abroad, use the exercise of dancing every " day with my daughter and others that are here with " me, and I can dance as cleverly as I have done these " ten years past."

The original name of the lands which came to be known as Gordonstoun was Ogston and Plewlands. An Inventory of the old titles of these lands is among the papers, and is dated in 1616.

The earliest Charter described in it is a Charter by Marjorie Countess of Murray to John Hogstoune of that ilk, son and heir of Sir Ranald Hogstoune, his father, dated at Bamf, 6th May 1417. The lands passed into the possession of Innes of Invermarkie and Balveny, in the early part of the sixteenth century, and were acquired by the Marquis of Huntly from that family in 1616. They were purchased from him by Sir Robert Gordon, in 1638.

The collection now reported on is very extensive and miscellaneous, and contains many authentic materials for the domestic history of the North of Scotland during the seventeenth century.

Lady Gordon Cumming has bestowed much care in selecting and preserving the more interesting portion of the papers, and my work was much facilitated by her allowing me to carry away such of the documents as I required for leisurely examination.

JOHN STUART.

REPORT ON THE MANUSCRIPTS OF SIR ROBERT MENZIES, BARONET, OF THAT ILK, AT CASTLE MENZIES, IN THE COUNTY OF PERTH, BY WILLIAM FRASER, EDINBURGH.

The family of Menzies of that ilk, which is now represented by Sir Robert Menzies, Baronet, who is the chief of the name, is one of the ancient baronial houses of Scotland. Meygners or Meyneris was the form in which the name was written in the early charters of the family. Gradually the name was changed into its present form of Menzies.

When King Alexander the Third succeeded to the crown, in the year 1249, Robert de Meyners, Knight, was made Great Chamberlain of Scotland, being designated " Camerario nostro " in a charter granted by that King in 1250. Sir Robert held the office till the year 1253, when he was succeeded by Sir David Lindsay as chamberlain. When the disaffected barons rebelled in the year 1255 Sir Robert Meyners adhered faithfully to King Alexander the Third, and figured prominently during the first half of the reign of that monarch. Sir Robert died in the year 1266, as stated by Fordun.

Sir Alexander de Meyners, son of the Chamberlain, was also noted for his patriotism and firm attachment to Scottish interests. Having opposed the pretentions of King Edward the First of England as Lord Paramount of Scotland, Sir Alexander Meyners was imprisoned in 1296, when 50 merk land of old extent was allotted for the support of his wife and children. He was at length released and survived to enjoy the confidence and favour of King Robert the Bruce.

At this early period Sir Alexander de Meyners obtained from John de Strathbogie, Earl of Athole, the lands of Weem and Aberfeldy, in Strathtay. Weem was afterwards erected into a barony, and it became the territorial designation of the successive owners, who were styled lairds of Weem till they were created baronets in the year 1665. Their mansion-house was called the Weem, or the Place of Weem, till the year 1510. The name was then changed to Castle Menzies, when the Barony of Menzies was first erected by King James the Fourth, as is afterwards shewn. The Barony of Weem has continued to be the inheritance of the family from the time of the original grant in 1296 to the present day. They have also possessed from an early period the Barony of Rannoch, in the same county, including the beautiful loch of that name.

Besides the Baronies of Weem and Rannoch, in Perthshire, the Menzies family possessed other baronies in several other counties. The Barony of Durrisdeer, in the county of Dumfries, belonged to them from a remote period. It was resigned by Sir Alexander de Meyners in favour of James Stewart, his brother-in-law, third son of James, High Steward of Scotland. But it was reacquired by Sir Alexander, and King Robert the First granted a charter of Durrisdeer to him.

In addition to the Barony of Durrisdeer the Menzise family early possessed the Barony of Enoch, also in the county of Dumfries, and this barony continued in possession of the family for centuries. The old castle of Enoch, which was their residence, is now a ruin, and forms part of the great estate of Drumlanrig belonging to His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry. The Menzies family had also the Barony of Vogrie, in the county of Edinburgh, and the Barony of Culter, in the county of Lanark, and several others.

The Stewarts of Fortingall, in the year 1503, in consequence of a feud with their neighbours as to the ownership of that estate, made a raid upon the mansion-house of the Menzies family, then known as the place and fortalice of the Weem, when this baronial residence was destroyed by fire, and most of the more ancient writs perished in the flames.

After the destruction of the mansion place of Weem in 1503 Sir Robert Menzies built a new castle, which he called Castle Menzies, and this new designation was confirmed by the charter of the barony now quoted.

One of the causes for granting the charter was the good and thankful service done to the King by Sir Robert, and also the destruction of his charters in the downcasting of his mansion. The clause of the charter referring to the loss of the muniments of the family is in the following terms:—

"Et pro eo quod intelligimus quod ipsius Roberti "carte et evidentie predictarum suarum terrarum, tem- "pore combustionis sui loci de Weme per malefactores "combuste et distructe fuerunt, fecimus. . . ."

[Charter in register of the Great Seal.]

In the insurrections in the years 1715 and 1745 Castle Menzies was again unfortunate. The Menzies family were on the side of the Government; but at both these periods their mansion-house and lands were plundered by the Highlanders. Yet, notwithstanding the injuries done to the family papers on these occasions, many of the earlier charters were saved, and a considerable collection, including charters, correspondence, and miscellaneous papers has since accumulated.

Several of the papers in the Menzies charter chest now reported on have reference to the damage done to the family at the time of the Fortingall raid, and the claims for compensation which they made on the depredators. Under the section of miscellaneous papers forming the twelfth head of this report several documents are quoted in regard to the destruction of the mansion of Weem. Sir Robert Menzies of that ilk, Knight, obtained a decree by the Lords of Council and Session against Neil Steuart, of Fortingall, for the wrongful destruction and downcasting of his mansion place and fortalice of the Weem, and for the burning and destruction of divers victuals, insight goods, and other goods. The decree contains a valuation of the articles destroyed, which shews the extent of the destruction, and what was the furniture of a mansion of that early date (vide No. 199, infra). Half a century later Sir Robert Menzies, then of that ilk, Knight, son and heir of the deceased Sir Robert, who had his mansion burned, sued — Steuart, son and heir to the deceased Neil Steuart of Fortingall, for the burning and destroying of the place of Weem, and the spoilation of the insicht goods, amounting in all to three thousand merks (vide No. 202, infra).

Seven years after the destruction of the mansion of Weem, Sir Robert Menzies obtained a charter from King James the Fourth, under the Great Seal, on 2nd October 1510, erecting the lands and barony of Enoch, the barony of Coulter, the lands and barony of Weem, Aberfeldy beg, Ardferelemore, Ferleyar, Rawir, Dalrawyr, Glassy, Kynnaldy, Glengolantyne, Cumrie, Auchillus, Fernauchty, Merynche. Edromuk, and lands of the thanedom of Crannyk called Crannych, Auchmore, Duntrosk, and Candknok with Roras in Glenlyoun, the patronage of the Kirk of Weem, and office of Tostochdereaschipe of Artholomy, within the sheriffdom of Perth, and the lands called Menzies Croft, in the town of Kinros, into one whole and free barony, to be called the BARONY OF MENZIES, and the Castle and Manor place of Weem, to be called the CASTLE OF MENZIES, and to be the principal messuage of the barony.

During the greater part of the long period that the family has existed, Castle Menzies was surrounded by very powerful neighbours — the ancient Earls of Athole, the Campbells of Breadalbane, and the Steuarts of Grandtully. Yet the Menzies family managed to hold their own, and they are now the oldest family in Strathtay, with an unbroken descent in the direct male line. Situated in a district rife with the rivalries and animosities produced by Highland clanship, the chiefs of the Menzies family often could not, without a severe struggle, maintain their position. The correspondence in this collection abundantly shews the difficult part which they had often to play.

SIR R. MENZIES, BART.

They received pressing letters from the Marquis of Argyll to join him in support of the Covenant, and they received not less pressing letters from the Marquis of Montrose to act with him on the opposite side; but the Baron of Menzies having abused Montrose's messenger as well as otherwise shewn his disinclination to join the Marquis, the latter plundered his lands.

In the course of their long history, the Menzies family made intermarriages with several noble Scottish Houses, including those of the High Steward, Argyll, Atholl, Bute, and others.

To their alliance with the Argyll family is owing the preservation at Castle Menzies of a collection of remarkable letters from King Charles the Second to the Marquis of Argyll. These letters have been specially noticed in the second Report on the Argyll manuscripts, which is included in the present Report of the Commissioners.

Without special notice of these letters addresed to the Marquis of Argyll, the Report on the Argyll correspondence would have been incomplete; and it was also necessary to include them in the present Report, as they exist in the charter-chest of Castle Menzies.

The ancient charters noticed in the present Report contain several of considerable interest; and among the Royal letters are two from Queen Mary, shewing her progresses. The Queen was at Luncartis in Glentilt, on the 3rd August 1564, and she was a Drymmen, in Menteith, on the last of August 1566.

A tradition exists in reference to Queen Mary's visit to Glentilt, which is part of the forest of Athole, that on the occasion of her visit to the Earl of Athole she witnessed deer hunting. Her father, King James the Fifth, and his mother, Queen Margaret, both visited the Earl of Athole in the year 1529. The Earl built a palace or shooting lodge for them on Loch Loch. The Duke of Athole is the owner of Glentilt; and in a letter with which His Grace has favoured me in reference to Lunkartis, where Queen Mary was in 1564, he explains that Lunkartis must be a misspelling for the Gaelic Longaird (pronounced long arst), long a boat or ship, aird a height, thus the boat-height, or place where boats were hauled up high and dry out of a loch. As the Tilt is not a river on which one could use a boat, this place must have been on Loch Loch.

We know no place of that name there now, but there is a little hillock called Tom nan Ban (i.e. Queen's knoll), close to Loch Loch. But whether the Queen's knoll applies to Queen Margaret or Queen Mary is uncertain. His Grace adds, "It is curious, with the amount of "legends about the Forest, and the fact that every burn, "hill, and glen, &c. has a name, that nothing more is "known of these royal visits. We do not even know "the exact spot where James the Fifth's hunting lodge "was situated, except that it was on the shore of the "Loch."

Robert Lindsay of Pitscottie, in his history of Scotland, gives a graphic account of the visit of King James the Fifth and his mother to the Earl of Athole, of their costly entertainment, of the palace which was erected for them in the wilderness, and the burning of it as soon as it was vacated by the royal party, much to the astonishment of the Nuncio of the Pope, who was of the party, and was not aware that it was the practice of the Highlanders to burn down such temporary erections.

In the charter-chest of the Duke of Athole there is preserved an interesting letter holograph of Queen Mary, addressed to the Countess of Athole. By permission of His Grace, I had an opportunity of printing and lithographing that letter in "The Lennox."

The letters from King Charles the Second are very fully stated, both in the present Report and also in the second Argyll Report, to which reference is made.

The entire collection of correspondence opens up a good deal of information upon the state of the Highlands at different periods, and the other papers also disclose the proceedings of the MacGregors and other clans connected with the central Highlands.

The Manuscripts included in the present Report are arranged under the following heads:—

I.—Ancient charters from 1296 to 1561.
II.—Royal letters from 1508 to 1653.
III.—Letters of the Argyll family, from 1638 to 1661.

IV.—Letters written in the sixteenth century, from 1546 to 1583.
V.—Letters written between 1600 and 1700.
VI.—Letters of Major General Hugh Mackay, Commander in Chief of the forces in Scotland, with notices of the movements of Viscount Dundee previous to the battle of Killiecrankie, from 26th July 1689, to 13 August 1690.
VII.—Letters from Colonel John Hill on the state of the Highlands before 1690.
VIII.—Letters on the state of the Highlands, from 1700 to 1750.
IX.—Bonds of Manrent from 1488 to 1604.
X.—Papers relating to the MacGregors from 1518 to 1661.
XI.—Papers relating to a disputed settlement of a Minister in the Parish of Dull, in the Presbytery of Dunkeld, from 1712 to 1713.
XII.—Miscellaneous Papers from 1503 to 1747.

I. Letters of King Charles the Second.

56. (1.) Jersey, 12 January [1650]. The King entreats Argyll "to give all furtherance to the sending away "commissioners to Breda, and to the moderating of "there instructions as much as resonably" he might. The King signs "your affectionat friend,

"CHARLES R."

57. (2.) Breda, $\frac{11}{1}$ of May 1650. On the result of the meeting of the commissioners at Breda. The Marquis would see that the advice he had given in his letter to the King had its due weight and effect. The King expresses his confidence in Argyll's good affection to him.

58. (3.) "Breda the $\frac{15}{5}$ of May, 1650.

"My Lord of Arguile,—I am soe very desirous "to preserŭe in you a right vnderstanding of my "intentions and actions, that I shall earnestly intreate "you to giŭe noe creditt to any reports or relations "that may be made to you concerning me, but to "suspende your beliefe of any thing of that kind, "vntill I speake with you, which I hope will be shortly; "and then I doubt not but you will clerely discerne the "particular confidence I haŭe in you, and the sincerity "wherewith I am,

"Your very affectionate friend,

"CHARLES R."

59. (4.) Breda, $\frac{17}{7}$ May 1650. The King expresses his unwillingness to let Will. Murray depart "without "some marke of my particular kindness" for the Marquis. Murray would tell him how much he depended on his advice, and he hoped shortly to do so himself. [Signed as in No. 3.]

60. (5.) Breda, 19 May [1650]. The King desires the Marquis to give credit to what the bearer, William Murey, should say as from the King to him. Expresses his sense of the Marquis's affection and kindness. The King signs, "Your very loving friend,

"CHARLES R."

61. (6.) Breda, 24 May [1650]. The King expresses himself as well satisfied with the assurances that Lord Carnwath had brought from the Marquis, and desires the Marquis to believe what Lord Carnwath should say to him from the King. [Signed as in No. 5.]

62. (7.) "At the Bog" [of Gight, now Gordon Castle[, June 26 [1650]. Expresses the King's confidence in Argyll, and desires the latter to credit the statements of the Earl of Dunfermline, the bearer of the letter, on the same. The King hopes to see Argyll within a very few days.

The following instructions, holograph of the King, bear the same date and place of writing as the last letter:—

63. (8.) "Priŭat Instructions for Dunfarmlin. You "shall goe to the place where my Lord Marquis of "Argyle is, and assure him of the confidence I haŭe of "him.

"You shall desire my Lord of Argyle to be thinking "about settling my family, as the King my father's "was.

"You shall know of my Lord of Argyle what persons "are fitt for you to speake with about my serŭice, and "what he shall direct, you are to follow."

"You are to speake to my Lord of Argyle that there "be no exceptions taken at any persons that come with "me, since they may be both usefull to me, and to this "kingdome, and that if there be any particular excep- "tions to any of my servants, or any else, that then I "should be advertised priuatly, that I may send them "away before there be any publick order against "them.

"You are to assure David Lessly of the estime I haue "of him, and becaus the English are vpon the borders, "he canenot come where I am; but I hope to be with "him in the army before it be long.

"You shall desire my Lord of Argyle to come to me "as soone as he can possible.

"And that you are to meet me againe as soone as "you can conuenintly. Boge, June 26,

64. (9.) "Falkland, July 18 [1650].

"My Lord of Argyle,—My Lord Eglinton has lett "me know the difficultyes he met with in raising the "regiment of my gards by reason of the littel assistance "he receaues from the Committie of Estats, and has "entreated me to recomend the care of it to them, "which I know not how to doe so well as by entrusting "you with it. I doe therefore desire you to solisite "that business very particularly that some present "order may be taken about it, which will be very "acceptable to "Your most affectionate frind,

"CHARLES R."

65. (10.) "Falkland, July 19 [1650].

"My Lord of Argyll,—I receaued yours of this "month iust now, and I thanke you for the care you "had of that I writt to you about, which I find by the "Committes letter, which I am very well satisfied "with. I will be at Dunfarmlin a Twesday night and "a Wednesday at Sterling; therefore I desire you to "make prouisioun accordingly.

"The enemy being adua[n]ced so farr, there is one "thing I shall desire you to doe; it is, not to lett the "Committe send any positive orders to David Leslie, "either to fight or not to fight, but to leaue it to his "jugment what to doe, for certainly he can tell vpon "the place best what is to be done. I haue seene the "sad experienc of sending a generall positive orders "when one is not vpon the place.

"I am,

"Your most affectionat frind,

"CHARLES R."

66. (11.) "Perth, 28th of October [1650.]

"My Lord of Argyll,—You will receaŭe from my "Lord Lothian my letter to you, to encourage the "Highlanders to fight against those in the North "that are now in armes, if there be an occasion for it; "but I hope there shall be none, for I haue sent them "a positiue command by my Lord Ogleuie to lay downe "armes, which they said they would obay. This being "a time wherin so much depends vpon the well "managing of things, and you being a person that I "doe so much relie vpon, both for your abilitie and "affection to me, that I desire you to come hether that "I may receaue your councell and aduice in these "things that concerne so much religion and the good "of this kingdome, but I shall leue this to your "jud[g]ment, knowing that you will doe that which is "best for both. I shall not trouble you more at this "time, only to assure you that in what condition soeuer "I am in, I shall euer be

"Your most affectionat and constant frind,

"CHARLES R."

67. (12.) Henrietta Maria, widow of King Charles the first, to her "cousin," the Marquis of Argyll:—

Paris, 20 August 1650. The Queen expresses her interest in all that affects her son, and prays God to bless his arms, and to place him in a position to punish the murderers of his father. She feels assured that the Marquis would continue his efforts to restore her son with the same affection with which he had commenced to exert them, and promises to use all her own endeavours, at least her prayers on his behalf.

[Written in French.]

68. (13.) Henrietta Maria, widow of King Charles the First, to the same :—

Paris, 20 August 1650. She had heard that they had removed from the King's service several of his domestics, and among these one Arden. She desires the Marquis to obtain the restoration of this man to his master's service ; asserting that he had always comported himself with affection and fidelity towards his master, " et fort elloygne de caballe," and that he had attended him from his childhood.

[Written in French.]

69. (14.) James Duke of York, afterwards King James II., to the Marquis of Argyll :—

" Jersey, August 4th, 1650.

" My Lorde,—I have sent this gentleman to con-
" gratulate to his Majesty the hopefull condition his
" affaires are put into now in his kingdome of Scot-
" lande, which I cannot remember without making
" some acknowledgements to you for that part you
" haue contributed therevnto, which knowing to bee
" a wery considerable one, you may assure your selfe
" of a proportionable share in my affection and friend-
" shipp, and that I am alwayes ready to giue you the " best proofes I can thereof as

70. Instructions by King Charles the Second entitled, " Instructions for our trusty and welbeloued " Thomas Weston, Esq.," superscribed by the King " Charles R," and subscribed by " Rob. Long." The instructions are ten in number.

1. Enjoins Weston to deliver to the Marquis of Ormond, the King's Lieutenant-General in Ireland, the letters and other papers sent with the instructions.

2. To acquaint him with the concessions he had found it necessary to make to his Scottish subjects in the treaty of Breda, " they insisting upon seuerall par" ticulars, in which we haue endeauoured to bring " them to more moderation, but failing therein, we
" haue at last condescended to their propositions in the
" terms contained in the paper herewith sent."

3. " You shall obserue to him that in our answer
" to their propositions, we haue omitted that clause
" in the third article concerning the declaring void
" all treaties, etc. ; which is likewise obserued vpon
" the margent of the paper, for hauing, with all
" sincerity and candour on our part, made and con" firmed the agreement with our Roman Catholique
" subiects of Ireland, we resolued to consent to nothing
" that might be contrary thereunto ; but they insisting
" rigidly to haue satisfaction in that particular, or to
" breake the treaty, we were inforced to giue them
" a priuate note vnder our hand in the words herewith
" sent him in cypher."

4. States that the King is resolved to " govern ourself" in Ireland entirely by the Marquis's advice, and orders Weston to say and act according to the direction of the Lieutenant.

5. The King conceives it would be necessary to acquaint Lord Inchiquin with the treaty, and also with the paper in cipher, which should be kept very secret, and not communicated to any of his Roman Catholic subjects. The Lord Lieutenant and Lord Inchiquin were to consider seriously the state of Scotch affairs, and should they deem it right for the King to adhere constantly to the agreement, then the Lieutenant was to use the blanks sent, for letters, declarations, &c., as he should think fit.

6. In that case some fit person or persons should be speedil sent from the Lieutenant, Lord Inchiquin, and other Protestants in Ireland, to persuade the Parliament of Scotland not to press the King further towards breach of the peace with his Roman Catholic subjects; and to represent the disadvantages that might thence arise to the King and to themselves.

7. " But if they shall judge that the continuance " of the said peace is no longer of importance to our
" affaires, and if it be true, as we haue some reason
" to suspect, that the Vlster army and the Irish of
" that faction haue not obserued the same, but haue
" done many things contrary thereunto, we in that " case desire our said Lieutenant and the said Lord
" Inchiquin to make and transmitt to vs into Scotland
" a true state of things in Ireland ; together with the " particular breaches of the peace and agreement on " the part of our Irish subjects, and with such other
" arguments and reasons as may enable vs with honour
" and justice, publiquely and auowedly, to declare the " said peace broken and void, if we shalbe pressed
" thereunto by our Parliament of Scotland . . . ."

8. Should the Lieutenant incline to this last resolution, he and Lord Inchinquin are desired to represent to the King what further steps he should take in Irish affairs ; and they are to take measures for the safety of themselves, Lord Ardes, and other Protestants of Ireland.

9. The King being anxious for the safety of very many of his Roman Catholic subjects in Ireland, of whose " dutiful and respectiue carriage " he was entirely satisfied, desires his lieutenant, in case of the foregoing resolution being adopted, to use the blanks sent according " to the particular and respectiue merits of persons
" there, and to the value and esteeme we haue of
" them."

10. Desires this to be transacted with all possible speed, and deputies to be sent from the Lieutenant and Lord Inchiquin to Scotland with addresses to the King and Parliament. The King names a number of loyal Roman Catholics, whom he wishes to be informed by the Lieutenant of such part of the present despatch as he should judge necessary : the Marquis . . . . the Earl of Castlebouen, Lord Muskery, Lord Dillon, and Lord Taaph ; and he requests that timely notice may be given of the resolution, so that these and other moderate Roman Catholics may escape in safety.

71. King Charles the Second to the Laird of Weimes.

Chantilly, 2 November 1653.

" Charles R.

" Trusty and welbeloued, we greet you well. Since
" the affection of our good subiects in our Highlands
" is now soe notorious, that the rebells themselves
" begin to confesse some apprehension of their power,
" and the mischeiue would be irreparable, if after so
" gallant an attempt to redeeme their country from
" the slauery and dishonour it groanes under, they " should for want of concurrence in the whole nacion
" be reduced to extreamity, and made a prey to the " bloody and mercylesse English rebells, who intend
" an utter extirpation of the nobility and antient gentry
" of that Kingdome ; we haue thought fitt in an
" espetiall manner to recommend soe important a con" sideration to you, and to desire you that if upon any
" priuate and particular reasons you haue hitherto
" forborne to engage your selfe with those who are " intrusted in arms by vs, that you will (as soon as they
" who are intrusted by vs shall desire you) ioyne
" with them and use your utmost interest and power
" to aduance our seruice, by drawing all your friends
" and dependants to a coniunction with them. And " as we are endeauouring all we can to procure armes,
" ammunicion, and other supplyes to be sent unto you
" by degrees, and in such manner as we finde most
" conuenient, soe we haue directed Lieutenant Generall
" Middleton himselfe to repayre speedily to you, as
" soone as he can obteyne such a supply as we hope
" will not requyre much more time. And we doubt
" not but God Almighty will blesse you in this enter-
" prize, and we shall neuer forgett the seruice you shall
" doe vs, and the alacrity you shall expresse therein.
" And so we bid you farewell. Given at Chantilly,
" the 2d day of Nouember 1653, in the fifth yeare of
" our reigne.

" To our trusty and well-beloued, the Laird of " Weimes."

III. LETTERS OF THE ARGYLL FAMILY, 1638–1661.

72. Letter, Archibald, seventh Earl of Argyll, to Alexander Menzies of that ilk.

Inverary, penult June 1602, referring to the honest duty of the laird toward John Menzies and his bairns, and craving him to continue in the like form towards them in time coming.

Letters of Archibald, Lord Lorne, and Earl and Marquis of Argyll.

73. Kendloch, 21 July 1638.

Lord Lorne desires the Laird of Lawers to be present at the meeting of his friends, which Lord Lorne had appointed to be held at Inverary on the 1st of August.

[Dorso.] A note from James Campbell of Lawers to [the Laird of Weem], asking him to come to Lawers to consider whether they should go to this meeting.

Lawers had seen letters to the same effect addressed to the Lairds of Glenlyoun and Glenurchy.

74. Inverary, 13th February, 1639.
The Earl of Argyll desires the Laird of Weem to meet Argyll and other nobles and gentlemen at Perth on the 14th March, to consult as to means for suppressing the "Lymmeris and brokine men" of the Highlands.
The Earl addresses the laird as his "Loveing freind."

75. Stirling, June 4, 1639.
The Earl of Argyll in this letter alludes to the "misreports" concerning the laird's unwillingness to stand up for the "defence of the religioun, crown and countrie;" states his assurance that he would never suffer himself to be "brandit with such foule aspersiouns," and earnestly requests him to give an example of obedience to the general and estates of the kingdom.

76. Stirling, June 10th, 1639.
The Earl of Argyll again urges his "Loveing freind," as he addresses the Laird of Weem, not to make any delay, but with all diligence to send out his "folks" according to the order already received.

77. Edinburgh, 30th May 1640.
The Earl of Argyll states in this letter that the General and Committee in Edinburgh were susnicious of the conduct of the laird's son. Advises him if he was not able to travel himself, to send some of his men at once to Edinburgh to declare themselves in time; to avoid the "hard course" which may be taken with the refractory. In a holograph postscript the Earl adds, "your wyf and you to may think it straing, as I "doe, that [I] should be forced to be ane enimie to any "of your children.

"Argyll."

78. Commission of Archibald Marquis of Argyll, by virtue of the authority given to him by Commission of the Three Estates of the Kingdom, convened at St. Andrews, for levying a regiment of Highlanders, appointing James Stewart of Ardyte to be one of the Captains of the said regiment, with full powers and all honours belonging thereto. Dated at St. Andrews, January 1646.

79. Archibald Marquis of Argyll to his second son [Lord Neil Campbell]:—

Edinburgh, 11 May 1661.

"Loving sonne,—Theis papers which I signed at "pairting are to be mad use of by your brother's "adyvyce, who doubtles will know what may be most "effectuall, and whairin the preiudice of words or "mater may ly.

"It is fit you remember what I have often spoken "in Parliament, that ther needed no probation for "maters of fact. I was ever willing to declair all "things realy as they wer circumstantiat, and to remit "the consideration of all, with my self and what con"cerned me, to his gratious Maiestie; but it is in"dewored that the maters of fact may be known with"out the circumstances, though it was never refoosed "to a subiect in my condition to lead probation for "cliering his innocencie, which was ather doune by "way of precognition befor tryell, or exculpation in "the tym of it.

"Tho I doe not deny my declairing and swearing in "Parliament that I nather had knowledg of no [r] "accession to his leat Royall Maiesties murder, yit I "may say that ather Cromwels or Irtons declairing "the contrair was bot fals calumnies, for doubtles it "is known to all the Englische armie that Irton was "not at all in Scotland. I shall wret more at some "other occasion, so at present with my blessing I rest

"Your loving Father,

[No address.] "A. M. Argyll."

80. Archibald Marquis of Argyll to his son, Lord Neill Campbell, the day before his execution:—

Edinburgh, 26 May 1661.

Loving and dear Sonne:—The blissing of the Lord maketh riche, and he addeth no troubll therwith. (Signed) "James Regent."

86. James Earl of Morton, Regent of Scotland, to James Menzies of that ilk. Dalkeith, 5 January 1577.

Acknowledges receipt of a letter from the Laird of Weem, "shawing that ȝe are evill handillit betuix the "Campbellis and the Erll of Athole diuers wyse, and "that now ȝe are maid to understand that the erll of "Athole is content that freindis sicht the maters "questionable betwix him and ȝow and not to seik the "cicumstance of the law." Advises him to accept such a settlement. Favours his intention to "mak "warningis" on the Clan Gregor for their removal from his lands, as he received from them neither "profit nor obedience." States that the Regent had given order for the acceptance of Menzies' composition for the raid made at Dumfries.

87. "Marie Countas of Atholl" to her "laifing sister" the Lady Weem. Cupper [Cupar], xiiii November 1578.

The writer was Lady Mary Ruthven, second daughter of William Earl of Gowrie. The second daughter of this Countess of Athole, Lady Mary Stewart, married James Earl of Athole, who was the stepson of her own mother.

Desires Lady Weem to come over to Cupar to show her the fashion of the country where she is to "gang" to, as there was none there "weill aquentit" with it.

88. Alexander Maknachtan of Dundaraw on Loch Fyne, Argyllshire, to his "speciall freind" the Laird of Weem. 1579.

Chiefly with reference to the state of the Isles, the men of which he says "are agreit."

"The Kingis Grace hes send to my lord Ergile ane "wryttin that come to his Magistie from the Duik of "Obeine [Aubigny] out of France, menand that the "said Duik wes on the seie cumane to Scottland. It "is reportit that he desyris to be Erle of Lennox, "becaus that he is nerrest lynale dissendit."

89. William fourth Lord Ruthven, created in 1581 Earl of Gowrie, "to his weilbelowitt gossop the Laird "of Weym." Holyroodhouse, 14 December 1579.

Chiefly concerning a proposed marriage to which the King had given his consent, and it shall be in Perth. The writer says: "The Counsall hes bene occupeit all "this tyme bygane vpoun the bordour effars quhilk "hes bene the occasioun of langer tayrie here."

This Lord Ruthven was the eldest surviving son and successor of Patrick the third Lord, who took such a prominent part in the murder of Rizzio. William Lord Ruthven was created Earl of Gowrie, and he was the hero of the famous conspiracy at Perth which bears his name.

90. [Sir James Douglas of] Drumlangrig to the Lard of Weyme. Edinburgh, 16 August 1580.

Intimates his inability to accompany Weem to the meeting of the Secret Council to be held at Stirling on the 20th of the current month; and praying to be excused, as the country was "gretumlie broken."

91. William fourth Lord Ruthven, afterwards Earl of Gowrie, to his "weilbelowitt em" the Laird of Weym. Holyrood House, 21 October 1580.

Concerning the proposed arbitration by the Earl of Argyll of matters between the Lairds of Weem and Glenurchy.

Ruthven signs, "Your loving and assured em."

92. John Stewart, fifth Earl of Atholl, to the Laird of Weem. "Cowpar," 25 November 1580.

Intimates that Lord Ruthven, Atholl's father-in-law, had desired Atholl to be present with some of his friends in peaceable manner without armour or weapons, at a meeting of the Secret Council to be held on the penult of the month, when Ruthven was required to appear with Lord Oliphant; and wishing Weem to meet him in Perth on Sunday at 11, or otherwise to be with some friends. Cupar "this Settruday" at 11. to accompany him.

93. R. Creightoun, of Clunie to the Laird of Weem.

That as the writer (for the upbringing of his daughters) has contracted a marriage with a daughter of Burnbugalls on 9 November next, he wishes the Laird of Weem to provide for him some wild fowls and aquavite, and to send the same to the place of Burnbugal to the care of the lady thereof; and he will requite him of a greater matter. Dated at Clunie the 12 of October 1572.

He has to prepare himself for his marriage, and as he gets no great tocher he will not hurt his bairns in giving of any great dowry, and wishing one yoke of drawing oxen to his ploughs, &c.

He doubts not Weem "salbe contentit of the woman "that I haif chosen to be my wyf, for sche hes mony "gud qualities in wewing, schewing and vther handie "craftis, quherin sche may be helplie to your dochteris "and myne."

94. William first Earl of Gowrye, to the Laird of Weem. Holyroodhouse, 1 June 1582.

Relative to the Earl of Athole's position. He refers to "the reparatioun of the invasioun intendit for "removing of certane of my Lord of Atholl's best "tenandis;" in whom no change had been made since his father's decease. Gowrie mentions that he had written to Athole himself on this, and on "vther thingis "that ar done within the bounds of Athoill, that tendis "mekle to his dishonour for laik of dew pvneischement "and tryell in convenient tyme, sic as the steilling "away of frie personis vnder silence of nycht, and in-"certane quhither they be murdreist or not, and "rasing of fyir in vther pertis of his boundis quhilkis "thingis are sua put in heid to the King that vnfrein-"dis makes ther advantage heirvpoun, sayand that gif "Garntully and vtheris of his assosiatioun had bene "in my lords favouris, sic thingis durst not haive bene "attemptit, albeit they be of lytill abilitie other to "resist or remedy sic thingis." He hopes shortly to be at Perth, when he trusts to meet with Weem.

95. The same to the same. Holyroodhouse, 29 April 1583.

Asking the Laird of Weem to appoint a day when he should meet the Earl of Argyll at Stirling for arrangement in a friendly manner of the difference between the lairds of Weem and Glenurchy.

96. Letter, William first Earl of Gowrie, to the Laird of Weem. 29 April 1583.

"Eme,—Efter my verra heartlie commendation. "This is till mak yow foirseine that I haue beine in "termes with the erll of Argyll anent matters debata-"bill betuix you and my cousing of Glenurquhey, "quhom I find maist willing to see the samen in "freindlie maner composit, and for this effect wes "desirous till haue ane appointit tryist thairanent "afoir his passing till Argyll.

"The place thairto metest for his eis is thocht to be "Stirling, becaus it is ewast to Castell Campbell quhair "presentlie the said erll remains. V.—Letters written between 1600 and 1700.

97. Alexander [Earl of Dunfermline], Chancellor, and the Earl of Dunbar to the Laird of Weyme. Edinburgh, 16th August 1607:—

This letter narrates: "This proude rebellioun and "dissobedyence of the barbarous and detestable lym-"maris callit the Clangregour, who so lang hes con-"tinewit in committing of bloode, thift, reiff, and "oppressioun vpon the Kingis Maiesties peciable and "goode subiectis, having most iustlie procurit his "Maiesties havie wraith and displeasour againe thame, "insofar as suche a handfull of miserable catiues dar "presome to continew rebellious, whenas the haill "remanent clannis, alsweele of the Heylandis as of the "Yllis, are become ansuerable and obedyent," &c. Then expresses his Majesty's resolve to suppress the rebels, giving orders to the Laird of Weem, as had also been given to the Laird of Glenurchy Lawers, and others, to assist the Sheriff of Perth in its execution.

98. The Marquis of Huntly to his "right speciall cousing" the Laird of Weem. Aboyne, 9 November 1619. Requesting him to assist Huntly's servant, Norman Leslie, in recovering the "geire" which had been taken out of Huntly's land of Strathavin by the Stewarts and some of the "Glengregorie."

99. License by the Privy Council to Sir Alexander Menzeis of Weem, his lady, and such persons as might be at table with them, to eat flesh during Lent and on the forbidden days of the week, for the space of a year.

Holyroodhouse, 11 March 1628.

100. The Earl [afterwards Marquis] of Montrose to the Lairds of Weem. Dunnottar, 7 June 1639.

"Honorabill and louing freindis,—Hauing desyred "the Earle of Atholl to bring with him all the High- "land men he can gett for this expedition, these are "to desyre yow to accompany him with all the people "that you can possibly make to come alongst under his "command.

"As for these that are refractarye and unwilling, he "hade warrand to take such order with them as he "shall think expedient. So hoping you will be most "carefull and diligent to send all your people, and that "they come willingly rather than to be compelled, "am,

"Your most affectionate freind,

"Montrose."

"From Dunnottar the 7 of June 1639."

"For my honorabill and lowing freindis, the lairdis "of Weme, these."

101. James Marquis of Montrose to the Laird of Weem. [No date, circa 1645.]:—

"Sir, I must admire of your ansuer which I could "heaue wery littell expected. Aluayes you will beleaue "that, as I am loth to be seuere, so I will not be "dallied. This is the tyme when ther can be no lurk- "ing nor indeferency, bot all must syde on way or "ane other. Iff feare keipe any from serueing ther "Prince, shall it not much more from serueing rebells "against him? Iff they would be cruell in the one "will not we be just in the other? So there ar bot on "chose: to hazard all for your natiue and kyndly "prince (which danger I hope shall not be great), or "wentor all contrary to the laues of God and man "against him. The last, I hope (with the assistance "of God) shall be found the greattest danger. Where- "for, Sir, lett me againe requyre, in his Maiesties "name, to keipe the former dyett, with your self and "all you can eather desyre or command, or say that "you declyne your Prince, and his commandements by

"Montrose."

"For the Laird of Weime and all belonging to him."

This letter is holograph of Montrose.

102. "The humble supplicatioun of Captane James "Stewart of Arditie, and Robert Menzeis my Love- "tenent ovir the Erle of Tullibardines men of Glenal- "mond, to the lordis and wthers of the honorabill com- "mittee of Estaite.

103. General George Monck to Captain Henry Beke or the Governor of Weems for the time being. The camp near Garth, 15th June 1654.

Giving orders as to the liberties and treatment to be afforded to the Laird of Weem and his family and tenants, while the castle was held as a garrison.

104. General George Monck to the Laird of "Weems."

"Vnderstanding that the Lairds of McGriggour have "bin ancient tenants and possessors of the lands of "Ranough belonging to your self, and have vntill this "time paid their duty for the same, and are yett "content to give all due satisfaction and payment and "securitie for to pay all duties for the time to come, "I desire you therefore, that neither your self nor "any appointed by you for the management of your "affaires will give them any interruption in their "possession of the said lands of Ranough; and I shall "take itt as a favour done to,

"Your very loving friend and servant,

"George Monck."

"Edenburgh, 30 March, 1657."

105. Captain William Daniell to [the Laird of Weem]. St. Johnston, 16 May 1657:—

Urges on the Laird of Weem to allow the Clan-Gregor to remain on his lands of Rannoch, from which he had resolved to remove them. The writer uses various arguments to this end: that it was a matter of moment to the quietness of the Highlands, especially when there were some appearances of troubles, that this very act of the Laird had almost turned some of the clan desperate, as they would not suddenly be received as tenants by other gentlemen, and would be forced to maintain themselves by violence, a result which would draw upon the Laird greater inconvenience than he might then be able to apprehend; that, should he deal rashly with the Macgregors, he might cast his land waste and in all probability all Scotland not afford him tenantry to remain on them. He also presses him to consider "the blood and violence" that might follow this occasion, and to have the quarrel settled by the laws of the nation and by the approbation of the Lord General, "and not "by seeking to builde his owne house to sett his "neighbours house on fire."

106. Pass from General George Monck, dated at Dalkeith, 25 August 1659, to allow Menzies, Laird of Weem, to pass and repass about his occasions in Perthshire with his servants and horses "(one exceiding the "value in the proclamation), hee engaging vnder his "hand to the officer commanding at Weems to pay "treble the value in case the said horse shall be taken "from him by any enemy and imployed against the "Commonwealth of England."

107. "Coppie of the Schires [gentlemen of the shire of Argyll] Letter to my Lord Generall Monke":—

Inveraray, December 1659.

The writers acknowledge the receipt, on the 14 December, of the General's letter of the 15 November; render many thanks to his Lordship for the favourable expressions in his letter "to the afflicted nation of Scotland "and this schire in particular," and assure him that it is their resolution to continue to live peaceably, and that they will not be wanting to suppress "all tumults, "sturrings, and unlawfull assemblies if any occur in "our schire." The letter ends thus: "We pray the "Lord that mercie and truth may meet together and "righteousness and peace may kisse each other, for the "wrath of man worketh not the righteousnes of God, "but there is a blessing promisit to the peace makers "which wee wish all may seek after," &c.

In a postscript they thank his Lordship for remitting three months' cess.

108. General George Monck, addressed, For the Right Honourable Archibald "Lord Marquesse of Argyll;" Coldstream, 23 December 1659 [apparently in answer to the preceding letter]:—

"My Lord and Gentlemen, I received your letter, and doe returne you many thankes for the same, and for your intentions and resolutions to live peaceablie, in which I shall be ready uppon all occasions to protect and encourage you, and in what I may to serve you; remaining your Lordships very humble servant, George Monck."

109. The Earl of Glencairn to Sir Alexander Menzies of Weem. Edinburgh, 14 November 1661:—

Advises Sir Alexander to defer the process against the tutor of Macgregor and his cautioner concerning some lands in the "Rynoch" till the Duke of Athole returned home, at which time they should endeavour to give Sir Alexander all satisfaction.

110. John Earl of Rothes, afterwards Duke, to the Earl of Athole. Lesly, October 16th, 1662:—

Rothes, from his relation to the Laird of Weem, is pressed to write to the Earl of Athole, and request him, should he have an opportunity of meeting with the Tutor of McGrigore, who, with his cautioners, are tied by bond to the Laird of Weem for a sum of money, and "is registrat at the horne," for the same, to signify to the Tutor that it would be "best to take course for so "just a debt."

111. J. Malcolm of Balbedie to the Laird of Weem. Balbedie, 18 October 1662 :—

"I am just now come from Edinburgh. My Lord "took journey yeasterday. Iff my Lord Athol had "come to Edinburgh, he had bein spooken to by my "Lord. Reseau heir inclosed a letter to my Lord "Athol, ane other to my Lord Aduocate. Efter ye "hau read them ye may close them with the seall ye "seall your owine letteris, for itt is only a fancie. "Efter ye hau deliuered my Lord Athol's letter, iff ye "find nott the effects which ye wold, latt me hear from "yow; and as I wreat vp weicklie to my Lord Rothes, "I vill acquent his Lordship thairof, quho, I know, "will finde out a way for your satisfaction."

112. Sir John Campbell of Glenurchye, afterwards Earl of Rreadalbane, to his sister, Lady Weeme [Agnes Campbell]. Edinburgh, 1 August, 1663 :—

A long, but generous, complaint of the position his brother-in-law, the Laird of Weem, had taken against him. "I never expected to have hade so sadd ane "occasion to wreatt to you, which should give any "grounds of prejudice betuixt your husband's familie "and ours, who hes lived these so many scoar of years "in so near and intimatt nighbourhood, and that in "your tym and myne (when the tye is strangest and the "obligation greatest) there should be any prejudice is "my great trouble.

"Sister, it would taik vp mor paper then I can "wreatt to express my resentments for so baise, so "vnworthie, & so vnhappie ane accident as hes at this "tyme occasiond and been the rease of this uhich "I abhorre from my soul, and would to God it "could have been prevented, and I wish it may be "remedied."

He then speaks of his endeavours to reconcile Menzies, having sent to him to speak with him, but received nothing but slights and reproaches, and all this he suffered for her cause, and after urging upon his sister to use her influence, adds, "You have but the halfe of "the work to doe, for although I have been traduced "uith accessiòn, reproached with ignominious expres-"sions, yitt all these I pass as effects of passion, from "uhich I bliss God I am free, and assurs you that I am "as inclinable and disposed as you would wish me."

113. Mr. Thomas Murray to the Laird of Weyme. Edinburgh, 25 November 1663 :—

Baron Comrie has been with him showing that things are not yet concluded between Comrie and Weem, that Comrie professes to have great willingness to have all things ended, which can only be done by legal documents, which if once settled there might be a more constant and cordial amity among them, and stating that, "Yesterday my Lord St. Andrews and Bishop of "Aberdein went for Court. Your cusin, my Lord "Rothes, is verry kyndly and favorably accepted be the "King at his coming to Court, and the nixt day was "made a Privie Counsallour of England, and to be one "of the Garter."

114. The Earl of Tullibardine to the Laird of Weyme. Tullibardine, 28th April 1664 :—

Promises to meet with the Tutor of McGregor in a few days, and seek to further the payment of the duties of Rannoch.

115. The Earl of Rothes to the Laird of Weyme. Lesly, April 28th, 1664 :—

Desiring him to assist in the recovery of 24 oxen and 16 "keyne" that had been stolen by night from the Laird of Cushnie, a vassal of Rothes, especially as some of those connected with the crime were Menzies men.

116. Henry Macky (indorsed as "Secretary to the "Earl of Rothes") to [Sir Alexander Menzies]. October 4th, 1665 :—

"Honored Sir,—Thes are only to give you the "trouble as to let you know that I brought doune your "patent to be knight-barranate under his Maiesties "hand, and it is in my Lord's custodie, who for a "word of your selff will order it to passe the Great "Seale; and it is only proper that his Grace give it "you out in his own hand." . . . .

117. H. M. to the Laird of Weem. Oxford, 17 October [and Holyroodhouse, 23 Ootober] 1665 :—

States that the Bishop of Munster's envoy would receive supply for the prosecution of the war, as his Majesty had promised, and that "The Stats of Holland "are advysed to take caire of ther prisoners 20 days "heerafter, in respecte some of them hes misrepre-"sented the civilities done to ther prisoners, ther "being now in custodie 3,000." His Majesty approved of the Earl of Sandwich taking some goods out of two East India prizes, and the whole council of war was very well satisfied with his conduct. The Dutch were off the English coast.

SIR R. MENZIES BART.

118. The Earl of Athole to the Laird of Weyme. Dunkeld, 11th April 1666 :—

Intimates that Lord Tullibardine would be at Dunkeld on the morrow, being "Thuirsday, the twelft instant" for settling "that business" betwixt Menzeis and McGregor, and asks him to be present, and to "bring "doune my hound with yow when you cume."

119. The Laird of Glenurchy to Mr. Robert Campbell of Dunfallandie. Finlarg, 16 December [16]67, indorsed 1669 :—

He met Donald McGregor on his way to Finlarg, and challenged him for the attendance they made us all give, as to which he alleged ignorance; and expressing Glenurchy's determination to have the affair of the Macgregors settled in the interest of his brother.

120. Alexander Campbell to Mr. Robert Campbell of Drumfallandie. Weym, 17 December 1667 :—

Requests him to advise the Laird to guard against all passion and hastiness, but to carry on his business quietly and calmly, and not to yield anything that may tend to his prejudice, nor utterly to cast off the Macgregors, and rather to delay than altogether to give up.

121. James Menzies to Sir Alexander Menzies of that ilk, Knight and Baronet. Burntisland, 5th March 1668.

With reference to the meeting with McGregor to be held at Falkland on the 13th instant, the writer urges on Sir Alexander not to exact too much of the Macgregors for their land; and intimates that the Earls of Athole and Tullibardin might become security.

122. The Earl of Athole to Mr. Robert Campbell. Falkland, 22 April 1668.

Expresses his pleasure that there is so right an understanding between the Laird of Weem and Macgregor, and wishing Campbell to meet him at Dunkeld on 1 May, to speak about it.

123. Extract Protection by the Lords of the Privy Council in favour of Sir Alexander Menzies of Weyme to enable him, in order to the settling of the peace in the Highlands, to compear before them on the 3rd March 1669, to find caution, conform to the laws and acts of Parliament made anent landlords and chieftains of clans. Said protection to endure till 18th March of that year. Dated at Edinburgh, 18 February 1669.

124. Thomas Hay [Secretary to the Privy Council] to [Sir Alexander Menzies]. Edinburgh, 19 June 1669 :—

A committee had been appointed to hear Athole, Perth, and Tullibardine, anent the McGregor bond. The last affirmed he was bound only for the rents of the Rannoch, and there was nothing extant on record to make it out against him. McGregor had been acquainted of the meeting, but had not appeared, and was not to be found.

125. Alexander MacNaughtan of Dundaraw to [address wanting] :—

"Dundurav, Apryll 1, 1671.

127. Letter, John Murray, second Earl (afterwards Marquis) of Athole to Patrick Stewart of Ballaquhan. Edinburgh, 23 January 1672 :—

Very much dissatisfied with a riot committed by the Stewarts, therefore desires Stewart of Ballaquhan to send a party of men to apprehend and imprison them till they find caution. Not only Thomas Menzies whom they keep prisoner and all his friends shall be harmless, and skeathless of them, but they and all who were with them shall compear at the Earl's Court whenever they shall be required, and return the arms to Thomas Menzies and his brother which were taken from them. [Contemporary copy.]

128. Patrick Stewart to the Laird of Weem. Logierait, 19 April 1672 :—

With reference to the riot referred to in preceding letter; and that his Lordship has desired an officer to summon the two young men referred to, to be at Dunkeld on Monday 22 April 1672; and the Laird of Weem to send the Pursuers; and his Lordship will bind them to keep the peace: and as he has a party quartering on him wishes 20 dollars to be sent him, and to collect the excise as he has 82 soldiers to deliver at Leith, and requires all the money he can get to remove them.

129. Letter dated Edinburgh, 21 May [16]72. Without name of writer or address :—

On the progress of the Dutch and English fleets. The English fleet had taken a Dutch vessel laden with ammunition bound for their fleet, and an English junk taken by her a little before, with one of their best fire ships. The Dutch have released all English, Scots, and Irish ships arrested by them before declaration of war :—The Earl of Dunfermline is dead and buried.

130. John Earl of Athole to the Laird of Weem, Canongate, 24 July 1672 :—

Giving him notice to wait on the Lord Commissioner at the Bridge of Earn on Saturday 3rd August next, on his progress to the shire of Perth.

131. George fourth Marquis of Huntly [created Duke of Gordon] to the Laird of Weem. Boog, 18 May 1677 :—

Desires an amicable settlement of the quarrel that had arisen from the stealing of horses from some of Huntly's friends by the tenants of the Laird of Weem.

132. John, first Marquis of Athole to the Lairds of Weem, elder and younger. Tullib[ardine], 8 August [16]84 :—

The Marquis intimates that he had received from his Majesty a commission of Lieutenantcy, and desires the Lairds of Weem to have fourscore of their best and ablest men well armed with guns and swords, to be in readiness on twenty four hours notice to follow him into Argyll with eight days provision, of which he shall have due notice.

133. The same to the same. Dunkeld, 31 March 1685 :—

Desires them to furnish one man out of every 40s. land belonging to them, well armed with guns, swords, and four days loan, under the command of some discreet " pretty man," and to meet his men at the ford of Lyon on the 7th April next, where he has a general rendezvous, whence they were to march to the shires of Argyle and Tarbat, under the command of the Laird of Ballechan.

134. The same to the Laird of Weem. Dunkeld, 21 May 1685 :—

Warrant to the Laird to call all his fencible men between sixty and sixteen to meet at the " fuird " of Lyon, on the 25th instant, with arms and twenty days' " loan," to march into the shire of Argyll on his Majesty's service.

135. Instructions by the Privy Council to Captain McKenzie of Suddie. Edinburgh, 15 October 1685 :—

The instructions are five in number, and are chiefly directed towards the suppression of robbers " lurking in " the hills or dryving goods," and to assist in the collection of public dues and crown rents. [Contemporary copy.]

136. William Duke of Hamilton to the Laird of Weem, younger :

" Edinburgh, 19 August 1689.

" The Lords of his Majesties privie counsill, " aveing thought fitt to ordour Major General Lane ir " to march into Athole, and to garisone your house, " and to attack the castle of Blair, and therafter to " march to Findlayrig, and to put garisones in these " places, yow are desired to goe alongest and concur " with him: and they have write to him to intrust yow " with the command of that garisone to be put in the " Weeme."

137. John, first Earl of Breadalbane to Duncan Campbell of Dunneaves. Balloch, 11 October 1689 :—

Complaining of " on that calls himself a serjant and " a duzan of fellows with him, notorious rouges and " theives," who under an order from the Laird of Dunneaves had quartered themselves on John McNab in Duncrosk, " on pretence of brewing," although McNab had neither " brewin vented " nor tapped ale, nor aquavitae for a year; and desiring Campbell to order his party to remove immediately.

In addition to the letters specially before mentioned, there are others which may be generally noted. Between the years 1600 and 1659 there are several letters from John Earl of Rothes, the Marquis of Huntly, Lord Lyone of Glammis, Macdonald of Keppoch, John Earl, afterwards Duke of Rothes, Sir Thomas Stewart of Grandtully, Campbell of Glenurchy.

Between the years 1660 and 1664 there are letters from John Duke of Rothes, who addresses the Laird of Weem as his " much honored cussin," the Earl of Tullibardine who also addresses the Laird of Weeme in the same terms, Lord Stormont, Earl of Athole, George Bishop of Dunkeld, Campbell of Glenurchy: also between the years 1665 and 1669, there are letters from the Earl of Atholl, Campbell of Glenurchy, the Earls of Perth and Tullibardine, Lord Lorne, Marquis of Huntly; and between the years 1670 and 1699, there are letters from Henry Bishop of Dunkeld; Sir John Drummond of Logie Almond. The Duke of Rothes in 1678, writes from Leslie, asking a visit of his " much honored coussen the Laird of Weyme," on the 6th of October, " for the morrow after, I intend to marry my " daughter to the Earle of Haddingtoune."

There is a letter from Alexander Robertson of Strowan, the poet, dated Mount Robertson, 7th October 1735.

VI.—Letters of Major General Hugh Mackay, Commander in Chief of the Forces in Scotland, from 26 July 1689 to 13 August 1690, with Notices of the movements of Viscount Dundee previous to the battle of Killiecrankie.

138. St. Johnston, 26 July 1689. For the Laird of Weems, younger, at Weems :—

" I received yours of last night at ten of the cloak. " I doe not beleeve that Dundie is so neare, though " I wish he were, let his forces be what they will. I " forgot to speak to you to send out men for inteli- " gence, which I pray you to doe. I would take on " 9 or 10 persons in pay during this expedition at " such a rate as that they be content, for guides and " inteligence, which I pray you to look out for, and " that they be men who know the countrey perfectly " well; but faile not vpon recepte hereof to send " towards the enemy for sure inteligence and where " they are. The persons I shall pay as you shall " judge raisonable. I shall dispach my march as much " as possible.

" I am, Sir, your most humble servant,

" I march just now. H. Mackay."

139. Blair Castle, 2 September 1689. To the same:—
The weather had been so discouraging that the General was obliged to send on the English to St. Johnston, and if it continued so he was resolved to follow immediately. He wishes to know what number of men would be needed for the garrison at Weem, which he thinks should be made stronger, as no garrison could conveniently be placed at Finlarig.

140. Perth, 30 September 1689. Orders the Laird of Weem, younger, to allow men from his garrison of Weem to assist the collectors of cess and excise in Perthshire, in gathering the dues.

141. Perth, 7 October 1689. To the Laird of Weem, younger, captain of an independent company, and commander of the castle of Weem:—

Desires him to establish a sufficient garrison in the house of Miggernie in Glenlyon, should the said house be capable to secure it, for the better protection of the country against the rebels.

142. Perth, 7 October 1689. Order to the Lord Bargany, colonel of a regiment of foot, or whoever should command in his absence, to cause a company of his regiment of at least 50 men without picks, to march to the house of Weem when the Laird of Weem, commander of that house, shall call for them.

143. Edinburgh, 12 October 1689. To the Laird of Weem, younger, captain of an independent company and commander of the castles of Weem and Miggernie:—

Replies to two letters of the Laird of Weem. Mackay says: "'Tis no matter what Glenlyon says bout the "fitness of the house of Miggernie for a garrison." He is satisfied with the statement of the Laird of Weem that it was so. Glenlyon grumbled because he was not placed in trust of the house himself. He desires Weem to obtain sure intelligence out of the Highlands, and for that end to dispose some persons who are not suspect to them, as some of those Strowen's men had not accepted the act of indemnity. Mackay intends to bring their case before the council at its next meeting, and wishes Weem to give them some assurance that they should not be troubled. Weem could obtain intelligence from the North earlier than himself, and from Lochaber earlier than those at Inverness. Mackay was to order the Commissary to let Weem have what meal he requires, but the less the better, except he transports it himself, for they must furnish the whole garrison of Blair with meal for the winter, that country not being able to furnish any. "That "hous of Braid Albins may be burnt by consent, other-"wyse he will resent and shew his dislyk of it, "which tyme will let vs see. Ther is no great mater "for vs, because wee had no desseyn upon it." Weem's outlay shall be repaid by the Government. In a postscript he writes Weem to inform Captain Rollo that he approves of his "way of doeing," and intimates that the council should issue an order that "a good "kow be sold at 19 marks and a weather at 2½ marks." He asks Weem to get the prices of meal, barley, malt, butter, and cheese "ajusted." He had also written to the Earl of Breadalbine on these matters.

144. Edinburgh, 1 November 1689. To the Laird of Weem:—

Stating that Weem's news was the same as he had from other quarters, and desiring him to "name a "soume for what you have been out of pours vpon "inteligence," and he shall get it allowed.—He had also obliged the Master of Forbes to do the same, Government being unwilling to allot sums of itself. He proceeds: "I wish ther were lesse heats and more "true tendernesse for the commun safty of all syds "then ther is. I have my full of Scotland, and wish "their Majesties service may never require my return "hither againe, if it please God I be ons out of it. "The president of the session is cum down, and this "day they had a full hous, Glenlyon made a great "busle here, concerning Miggernie, but I dispach'd "him with a short answer, that I judged the disposition "allready made most contributing to the King's "service and therefor doe not find good to alter. The "subject of his jealousie of you is, that he beleeves "you to favour the Marquesse of Athols interest against "him too much. I told him I took no notice of their "family disputes, but did what I thought best for the "forsaid end. Pray let him have no relevant occasion "of complaint against the garrison."

145. Edinburgh, 4 December 1689:—

Orders him to send from his house of Weem to Finlarig for planting "palisados," one dozen "speads," one dozen "shuffells," and one dozen mattocks.

146. Edinburgh, 18 December [16]89:—

Asks the Laird of Weem, younger, to get some person he can trust belonging to the enemy to furnish timely intelligence of what might be resolved at their meetings. Mackay would pay for what he shall ingage for, and the king will order his other disbursements.

Sir R. Menzies, Bart.

147. Edinburgh, 24 December [16]89. To the Laird of Weem, younger:—

Desires him to lodge out of danger of surprisal, the corporal and 10 horsemen of Lord Newbotle's troop whom he had ordered to the Weem, and also to "make "credit for them," as all the forces were then living on credit. Wishes regular intelligence out of Lochaber from time to time. "You must not fattigue the hors "with guards, neither shall you send them in partys "further then the strath and in plaine ground."

148. The camp at Inverlochie, 17 June 1690. To Robert Menzies of Weem, captain of a company of foot, and Lieutenant-Governor of Fortwilliam in Inverlochie:—

Orders him on sight thereof to remove with his company from the camp to Fort William (alias of Inverlochy), there to remain in garrison and receive further orders from Colonel John Hill, governor thereof.

149. Perth, 20 June 1690. To the Laird of Weem, captain of an independent company of Highlandmen, ordering him to march with his Highland company from its present garrison in the house of Weem to join the army according to directions given to him.

150. The camp at Ruthven of Badenoch, 30 June 1690:—

Grants liberty to the Laird of Weem to answer any letters received by him from the men of Lochaber, and to meet and converse with them till farther orders.

151. Fort William or Inverlochie, 16th July 1690. The commission for Robert Menzies of Weem to be Lieutenant-Governor of Fort William not having yet come down from His Majesty, and the service requiring that he be presently put in exercise of his said office: Therefor Mackay appoints him Lieutenant-Governor of the fort and garrison of Fort William, formerly called the Fort of Inverlochie.

152. Edinburgh, 13 August 1690. To the Laird of Weem, Lieut.-Governor of Fort William and captain of a company of foot; to command all officers belonging to the garrison of Fort William in Lochaber immediately to repair to the said garrison, under the pain of cashiering them from their respective offices, and such officers as are sent out for recruits to bring with them such men as they have already levied.

153. Colonel John Hill to the Laird of Weem. Inverlochy [Fortwilliam], 11 August 1690:—

States that all was quiet in the district, tho' not easy to keep the Highland soldiers in discipline. The weather was extremely bad with high winds and great rain, and this combined with the continual desertion of officers and soldiers and the number of sick, caused the progress of the works to be but slow. The soldiers having no money to buy provisions were living only on meal and water. Some of the Laird of Weem's soldiers had deserted in his absence whom he should look after and punish.

With reference to the doubtful party he says: "Here-"aboutes are none in armes, except some few broken "men and chiefs, which the countrey promiseth to take "care of. These gentlemen are shortly to haue another "meeting: what the result of that will be I yet know "not; but when I doe, shall acquaint you. They haue "great newes of England and other partes, which blowes "them up, and may possibly put them into a humour "of trying their fortune once more, of which I am "aware, but Locheil seemes one of the most backward "to itt, as beleeueing it will be all like the rest, tho' "hee nor any of them is to be trusted."

He must have amongst others, if possible, Captain McNeil, who is very good in "Phisick and Chirurgery," and a pretty stout man and has the language. There were some Lochaber men, and others of the district in the Laird of Weem's company, and he desires him to repair his force with men who could speak English or Scotch.

Complains of the sickness and roguery of the carpenters, and of the want of deals, so that the buildings go on slowly. Enjoins him to be very strict with the tutor of Appin, as he might "be apt to be blowne up "with storyes, and might thinke to stand out still."

154. The same [to the same]. Inverlochy, 28 August 1690:—

"Sir,—I lately writ you at large by the post, and "desired you to communicate what I writt to my Lord

"Commissioner, my Lord Leven, Lord Tarbat, and "the Major Generall, for that I could not write to them "for want of paper, my stocke being run out (tho' "prittie considerable), and the ships from Glasgow "wherein I haue more, not yet come. The last night "came to me some Highland newes: that Buchan had "400 horse and 100 dragoones; that my Lord Aboyn "and Lord Frazer of Monghall, my Lord Kintore, and "Sir Peter Fraser had joyned him; that he was come "to Colloden's house, and had been there two or three "dayes ('tis pritty if true); that noebody was within "to wellcome him; and that he went that wayes in "order to joyne my Lord Seafort, who (as they say) "has a thousand foote and 120dragoones, and is marched "down to Rosse; and that the Major Generall is marched "North; and that all the Church of England is for King "James; and that there are still 50,000 men in armes "for him in Ireland. But both Lochiel and Glengary "send me word they will not rise to joyne Buchan; "for Locheil beleeues Buchan's foundation will not "stand for tho' all Scotland were in armes for King "James, if England were not for him, or nott divided "amongst themselves, 'twould all signifie nothinge,— "soe that hee resolves to be quiet." He believes McLean will be hot-headed and not governable tho' quiet at present, the broken condition of his estate rendering him desperate. The country was quiet. They had "brave" weather, and the works were very "forward" and well done. Fears a general desertion of the soldiers for want of pay.

155. [From the same ?] circa 1690 :—

The tutor of Appin seemed "very fair." Most of the people of Appin and Glencoe had come in and submitted to the Government, except the Lairds of Appin and Glencoe, who were not at hand. The tutor desired only time for delivering Island Stalker, till the writer had acquainted the Government with the tutor's condition; that he had spent 5,000 merks in obtaining and maintaining the house, and had suffered certain specified losses at the hands of the Highlanders.

VIII.—Letters from 1700 to 1750, on the state of the Highlands, &c.

156. John, first Duke of Athole to [Sir Alexander Menzies]. Blair Castle, 15 August 1707.

Refers to a "tumult" at Fortingall Market, in which some of Menzies' men, Founab's soldiers, and some Glenlyon men "were very much guilty of disorders," and in which the Athole men did not "do their duty." He also mentions a "little scuffle" at Logyrate Market, in which one of Menzies' men, called ——— McDonald, was concerned, who had been sent for examination to the Duke, but who shall be very favourably dealt with.

157. The same to the same. Blair Castle, 2d August 1707. On the Fortingall riot :—

158. Lady Christian Leslie, Marchioness of Montrose, to [Christian Campbell, Lady Menzies]. Kinross, 29 May 1708 :—

Urging her to solicit her husband, Sir Alexender Menzies, to vote for Mr. Haldane, elder, of Gleneagles, at the election of the Perthshire Commissioner.

159. Papers produced in a suspension before Lord Pencaitland, the Duke of Athole, charger, and Charles Stewart of Ballachan, suspender, for a bill granted by the said Charles to his Grace for a part of the money extorted by the Duke from him for concealing his being in the rebellion.

160. Neill Stewart, factor to the Duke of Athole, to the Laird of Ballachan. Blair Castle, 9 December 1715 :—

States that he is ordered to write that the Laird is expected to have removed as soon as possible the horses that were quartered on John Robertsone, John McGyllivie, and another for destroying their corns. It is said that the Marquis of Tullibarden was informed that neither Robertsone nor McGyllivie were in the stables next the castle that night his Lordship came to the door thereof.

161. [Copy only, thus inscribed: "The principle of "the following was destroyed at Lord James Murray's "desire by Ballachan, but affidavits may be had that "this is a trew coppie, and Lord James will not, it's "thought, denye it." The writer, McGlashan, was the Duke's confidant in the transactions between Glengarry, &c. and himself.]

John McGlashan to the Laird of Ballachan. Blair, 11 December, 1715 :—

"Sir,

"I received yours and read the same to your "friends, and you may believe it was acceptable. I "gave the memorandum to Lord Edward, which he "read to my Lord Duke, and he was very well pleased "with it. I told all you desired me at the pairting "and what I thought might be satisfieing to his Grace, "and [he] seems to be better pleased with you than "was expected, and desired me, notwithstanding of all "our news, to earnestly write to you that you shall "use all your endeavours with my Lord Marquess that "his Lordship may not subscribe any association or "capitulation till such time as he better consider on "it; and his Grace expects you'll continue to be instrumental for the good of the countrey and the good of "the younge callant, for he has a harling-kindness "for him. Yet my Lord D. asked me what reason he "could give for comeing to his stable door; I answered, "I understood his Lordship's design was, that seeing "Carnousty was seized by his Grace, he had a mind "to seize Lude and others for a repriziall, and it "seemed that his Lordship was informed that 24 men "lay each night in the stable which he thought to a "gotten which was the main motive, and not the "taking away of his horses."

162. Neill Stewart, ut supra, to the Laird of Ballachan. Blair Castle, 13 December 1715 :—

Desiring him to prevail with the Marquis of Tullibardin to set at liberty Patrick Stewart of Bogmilne, who, although he had the protection of a pass, to take care of the forest of Cluny and tend the deer, had been made a prisoner.

163. Alexander Murray, Secretary to the Duke of Athole, to the Laird of Ballachan. Blair Castle, 16 January 1716 :—

Asks him to send by the bearer some letters to the Duke and Duchess of Athole which had been taken at Perth, and which the Marquis of Tullibardine had desired Ballachan to forward to Blair Castle.

The Duke wished to know the reason of their having been so long kept back by Ballachan.

164. "Memorandum. Lord Edward Murray to the "Marquiss of Tullibardine :—

"The Duke of Atholl proposes to the Marques of "Tullibardine, Glengary, and Frazardale, that each "of them should write to his Grace, assuring him "that they will leave the Earle of Mar and his party, "and desiring of his Grace that he will represent this "to the Government; and that upon the Duke's getting "a return they may expect their pardon they imediatly "surendering themselves to the said Duke or to the "Government as shall be directed, and in the meantime they are to withdraw themselves from the party "till they have an answer.

"The Marques of Tullibardine having rejected the "like offer formerly, if he does not now imbrace this "opportunity, all the intercessions the Duke of Atholl "or his other friends can make for him hereafter will "be ineffectuall.

"That its probable the favour the King has shewen "to Lord Charles Murray, the Marques his brother, "in giving him a reprive for a moneth, is only to see "if the Marques and Lord George can be reclaimed, "and their still continuing obstinat may not only prove "fatall to themselves but to him.

"The Duke expects they will leave the party immediately, if they will agree to this, and give their word "of honour that they will not act against the present "Establishment till his Grace gives them a return "from the Government.

"This is the last proposal of this nature they can "expect from the Government." [This document is in the handwriting of Lord Edward Murray.

165. [Answer to the preceding offer, unsigned, but indorsed, "Perth 1715"]:—

"My Lord,—We have agried in ane answer to your "Graces memorandum, which is sent by Frazardale, "one of the principall persones concerned and under-"subscriber, to whom your Grace may give full credit "in every thing yow desyre to be further informed of "concerneing us, which we think is all that can be "necessarie from,

"My Lord,

"Your Graces most dutifull sons and "most faithfull humble servants."

166. "Memorandum for Frazardale to his Grace the "Duke of Atholl in name of my Lord Marquis of "Tullibardine, Glengarie, Lord George Murray, and "Frazardale himselfe.

"If the Duke of Atholl hes full power from the "Government to assure us and others who may adhere

" with us, of a general indemnity, we are then to " enter one the articles his Grace proposes; for it " cannot be expected that we should leave on syde " till we be assured of safety on the other, which the " Duke may reasonablie represent to the Government.

" The Marquis proposes for himselfe that the Duke " should use the most pressing instances that Lord " Charles and Lord Nairne with all thos who wer taken " with them in there regiments at Preston, and alsc " William Murray of Ochtertyre with the Atholl pri- " soners taken at Shirreff Moor, may be fully included " in the same conditiones of indemnity as shall be " agried on with him the said Marquis."

168. Copy Letter, Captain James Menzies to the Duke of Athole. Comrie, 5 February, [1]716:—

States that the castle of Weem was occupied by Glenlyon, with about 30 men from Fortingall and his mother's jointure lands, who had relieved a detatchment of the clans, and that as they had little provision (only 10 bolls of meal), he (Menzies) had ordered the countrymen to block them up. This had been done for two nights, and was to be continued.

168. Copy Letter, the same to the same. Weem, February 6, 1716:—

Glenlyon, finding himself in need of provisions and firing had surrendered the house of Weem on condition that he should be allowed to march off with his soldiers and ammunition; which, says the writer, "I presum'd " to grant to save further trouble to the Government."

169. Copy Letter, the Duke of Athole to Captain James Menzies. Huntingtower, 10 February 1716:—

The Duke states that, after the receipt of Menzies' letter of the 5th, he had on Tuesday morning drawn up his men at Logyrait to march against Weem, when the second letter arrived with news of the capitulation and escape of the garrison. He proceeds:—"I am " surprised at your so doing, and that you did not " acquent me befor you did any thing of that nature; " wherfor I desire you will come here as soon as you " can, and give me your reasons for so doeing. James " Menzies informs me that he told you on Sunday that " I was to send a party to take in the house of Weem. " John Mackglashan [who had commanded under " Glenlyon at Weem] is one of the greatest rogues in " Athole, and has been guilty of forceing and appre- " hending my men there. He was concern'd in making " an attempt on my castle and office-houses of Blair, " whyll I was in it; wherefor I have sent you an " order to apprehend the said Mackglashan and bring " him prisoner to me, which if you do not, you must be " answerable for allowing him his liberty to go off. " You will no doubt find him still in the country, and " probably about Tullimett, being formerly Lord James " my brothers servant."

170. John, first Duke of Atholl, to Mr. Neill Campbell, Advocate, at Edinburgh.

" Huntingtower, February 21st, 1716.

" Sir,

" I had writ to you sooner, and sent you the " enclosed copies of letters from Captain James Men- " zies, and my answer, but I was not sure you was at " Edinburh untill I saw Deneavus. The Duke of " Argyll haveing wrote to me from Arroll, as he " marcht north, desiring I might put a garrisone in " the House of Weem, I immediatly sent James Men- " zies my servant to bring me an account what num- " bers of the rebells were in it, and what circumstances " they were in, who returned to me on Sunday with " the first letter from Captain James, on which I " reckon'd I was sure of apprehending all the rebells " were in it. For this end I toke with me about 200 " men upon Munday the sixth to Logyrait, where I " lay that night, and I dispatch'd one to Dunkeld with " an order to bring meal next day to mentain the men " the time they were besieging the House; which meal " being come to Logyrait, and my men drawn up just " ready to march to Weem, I received the second letter " from Captain James, of which I also send you a " copy, which both surprised me and disappointed me " very much; and in which he has ventured much " more then I am sure I would taken upon me to have " done. I hear the Duke of Argyll is not to come to " Perth, but goes to Edinburgh by Dundie, wherefor " I desir you will shew the copies of these letters, " that if it be thought proper to keep a garrisone there, " which I must own I think it is, there may be a " party sent to it from the regiment lying in Dunkeld " commanded by Collonel Clayton, for I did not think " it proper for me to send a garrisone of my men to " it, after it was possesst by Captain James, who is one " of the tuttors of the Laird of Weems, untill I should " have your and the Lady Weems oppinion about it. " I desire to give my humble service to her Ladyship, " and I am,

" Sir,

" Your humble servant,

" Atholl."

I have neither seen nor heard from Captain James since my letter to him, of which you have also a copy.

To Mr. Neill Campbell,

Advocate, att Edinburgh.

171. [Alexander Menzies to Lady ———]. London, 11 March 1716:—

None in London had petitioned for banishment except five Irish gentlemen, who had attempted to escape, and were afterwards put in irons. They wished to enter the Venetian service and fight against the Turks. The Scotch and English were both "fond" of the Duke of Argyll's arrival in the city, as he was " above revenge, and of such a noble and mercifull " temper that he might doe a great deall of good." Lord James Murray had also arrived, and the writer says: "He will be for sparing the Athole men's lives; " I will not ansur for their pursses."

172. The same [to the same]. Newgate, 8 May 1716:—

He was at Westminster, in order to be tried, yesterday, but was not; but one Mr. Gascoyne was tried at Westminster the other day, and was likely to be executed, and has got double irons and close prison. Colonel Oxburgh, an Irish gentleman, was found guilty and put in the condemned hole. "They are very sever " after Foster and McIntosh's braking out of this, with " some others that went away. We are all in irons and " closs prison in our rooms, but very hearty. The " fever again is begun, quhich make[s] us all afrayd." The writer was to be tried on Friday, and was the first Highlandman who was to undergo a trial there.

" The mobe heir has altered since we came here, that " ther is no going out to our tryals for them. My " Lord Darenwater's brother and I was in our coatch " yesterday to our tryals, but the mob stopd our coatch, " and notwithstanding that our coatch hade 6 sojers, " they hade almost drawen us out of our coatch. All " the ladyes and mob cryed and weepd, and cryed " that the Almighty would preserve us against all our " enimies. When we went into our coatch at West- " minster the coatch I was in was a long space after " the rest, but we almost never could come home; " twentie thousand folowed us, and all for Darenwater's " brother," and wishing influence to be used on his behalf.

173. The same [to the same]. Newgate, 16 May 1716:—

The day following (17th) had been appointed for the execution of the writer, but a reprieve of a fortnight had been granted through the efforts of Argyll, Islay, Lord James Murray, etc. He was the first commoner who obtained a reprieve, and expressing his gratitude and to continue her influence.

174. Aeneas Macdonell to Lady Weem. Kinchlacher, 2 November 1719:—

Informs her ladyship of the seizure of one of her tenants, Ewen MacCoill Roy, alias Cameron, and refers to the great harm done to the lieges by the Rannoch men during the preceding summer and harvest.

175. Colin MacLaurin, the Mathematician, to [Lady Weem]. Edinburgh, April 19, 1729:—

" Madam,

" If I had not a very particular honour and " regard for your Ladyship, I had never troubled you " with this letter.

" Some moneths ago it was hinted to me that your " Ladyship had taken something amiss of me. But " being conscious to myself I never had given you " the least reason to take the least offence, and that " I had acted with you in every part with honour, truth, " and sincerity, I could not give credit to it.

" I have now been told that your Ladyship was " informed that I was carrying on some private designs " in your family unknown to you. Nothing ever was " invented by the most flagrant malice and deceit " farther from truth, and more groundless than this. " I do not know the authors of this story. But I have " that sincere regard for your Ladyship, and your " family, as to wish such persons may never gain " credit with you as are capable of imagining and " repeating such falshoods. If I knew them, the use " I would make of it would be to shun them as I would " shun the plague.

"I assure you, Madam, it never entred in the least "into my thoughts to form any such design. I am "not so apt to meddle in private affairs of familys, "especially such as are of that nature. I never spoke "to your son on that subject once while I was at the "Weem, and never wrote of it to him since. I wonder "one of your Ladyship's penetration does not see the "folly of the story. Your Ladyship was the only "person concerned I ever spoke to on that subject "since March was a year.

"I have now been so long known to your Ladyship, "and I believe I have acted such a part as might give "me some title to expect I would have been spoke to "before such a story had obtained credit. Your "Ladyship has formerly expressed a great deal of "goodness for me, and I vainly flattered myself that "I had more of your Ladyship's friendship than it "appears I had, when you could easily give credit to "those storys. Tho' I never deserved your friendship, "I am not afraid to say I deserved it better than your "anger. But it is my principle that Truth will at "length prevaill, and I doubt not but your Ladyship "will sooner or later do me justice to believe me to be "with great truth, Madam,

"Your Ladyship's most faithfull most humble
"Servant,
"Colin MacLaurin."

"P.S.—If I knew their names who have told these "falsehoods to your Ladyship, I doubt not that I could "make them contradict themselves.

"I beg leave to add that as I nevir heard your son "speak of you but with great respect, so no person ever "heard me insinuate the contrary; and in whatever "manner you use myself, I will ever esteem you for "many good qualities, but especially your love to "him."

176. Copy Memorial for Sir Robert Menzies of Menzies, Baronet, sent to the Right Honourable Henry Pelham, Esq., London, indorsed November 1750.

Narrates that the Duke of Cumberland, on his arrival at Perth in pursuit of the rebels in February 1745–6, ordered a detachment of 500 men under Lieutenant-Colonel Leighton of Major-General Blackney's regiment, to fix a garrison at the memorialist's house near Taybridge, and that the garrison of 200 men, besides officers and occasional parties from the Argyllshire levies continued there from the 9th February till the 18th August 1746. That the memoralist and his family had to remove from Castle Menzies on an hour's notice, leaving his furniture in the rooms, kitchen, and offices; and had to repair a house in the neighbourhood for his family; that, owing to the presence of rebels in the neighbourhood, his house had to be put in a state of defence and some of the buildings were destroyed; that, besides the consumption of fuel and meal, the furniture was rendered useless by the outbreak of an epidemical fever among the troops; and that the entire loss to the memorialist was 1,000*l.*

"That as the memoralist and his predecessor's attach-"ment to Revolution principles and to the present "royal family is evident by the appearance his grand-"father made at the Revolution, being the only gentle-"man in the Highlands of Scotland who join'd General "Makay with above one hundred of his tennants before "the battle of Killicranky, and that the memoralist's "country and house were plundered by the rebels in "the year 1715 on account of the opposition made to "them by his friends, one of whom stayed in the "house in order to have defended it, but had the mis-"fortune to be taken and carried prisoner to Dundee, "where he remain'd confined till released by his late "Majestie's army: And as in the rebellion of 1745 his "country was assessed by the rebels in five pound ten "shillings sterling upon the plough of land, as he had "oppenly declared against them and did all in his power "to keep his tennants from joining: So he humbly "hopes that his Majesty will be gratiously pleased to "order remede, the memoralist's case being intirely "singular, there being no other garrison planted in "any subjects' house in Scotland except one, and that "was attacked and damnifyed by the rebels."

XI.—Papers relating to a Disputed Settlement of a Minister in the Parish of Dull, in the Presbytery of Dunkeld and Shire of Perth. 1712–1713.

This case occurred about the time of the Restoration of Lay patronage by the Act of Queen Anne in the year 1712. John, first Duke of Athole wished to exercise his right of patronage in favour of a nominee of his own, while Christian Campbell, the Dowager Lady Menzies, wished another person to be appointed minister. The principal proprietors in the parish, and the parishioners appear to have sided with Lady Menzies. She was a grand-daughter of Archibald Marquis of Argyll; and she appears to have exercised her hereditary right to take an active part in the settlement of the Presbyterian clergyman in the parish of Dull in which her son, the young Laird of Menzies was a principal owner of landed property. Several of the papers and correspondence are still preserved at Castle Menzies. The following excerpts from them will shew the keen feeling on the the subject.

192. Notes from memorandum, &c. anent the church of Dull.

The church of Dull, within the Laird of Weem's interest, and a mile of his house, becoming vacant two years agoe by the death of the late incumbent, the Presbytery stirred up all concerned to call a minister. The Tutor of Weem, the Laird of Grantullie, and other heritors, who have the greatest interest in the parish, and twelve elders, petitioned the Presbytery of Dunkeld for one of their number to moderate a call which the Presbytery delayed to do for several months in deference to the Duke of Atholl since he did not concur in the petition, albeit his interest in the parish be very considerable.

At last the Presbytery thought fit to appoint a call to be moderated upon 1 April 1712, which after due intimation was accordingly done, wherein at a meeting of all the heritors and elders duly qualified, Mr. Menzies was voted to be their minister nemine contradicente, and on the 2 of April the call was presented to the Presbytery.

For various reasons the Duke of Athole, though he had no objection against Mr. Menzies, opposed his settlement, to the great grief of the large parish, which is 24 miles long, and contained 4,000 souls, and after various appeals from the Presbytery to the Synod, and back again to the Presbytery, they went on, and on 10 Sep. it was carried, nemine contradicente that the call was legal.

Upon this the Duke by proxy offered a presentation, pretending to the patronage, to which he had no right, on behalf of another minister, who refused to accept.

The Presbytery thereafter referred both the presentation, and Mr. Menzies entering on his trials to the next Synod, who approved of the procedure of the Presbytery, and ordered Mr. Menzies to be set on trial, and he having been put on trial, and approven of, His Grace caused the kirk door to be closed up twice, and made another presentation to that parish.

Mr. Menzies having passed his trials with approbation, the affair came before the Synod at Stirling in April last, and unanimously ordered the Presbytery of Dunkeld to ordain Mr. Menzies minister at Dull. The 7 May following was fixed for his ordination, but when the Presbytery came to go to the church to call the edico, they were met by Niell McGlashan, servant to the Duke, at the head of 100 armed men, and presented a paper, in the form of a letter, to Mr. Archibald Campbell, minister at Weem, and drawing their swords at the same time, who asked what meant this armed force, and by whose authority; to which he answered it was by the Assembly's. Not finding it safe to enter the church, they went the length of the stile of the church yard; the party beat the ministers off with their swords, and calling them rascals and traitors, who protested against the opposition as illegal for the reasons therein stated.

The Duke of Athole, by his influence, got the Commissioner of Assembly to suspend Mr. Menzies from the exercise of the ministry in that parish, and there has been no sermon there ever since.

A keen correspondence took place regarding this business.

193. In a letter from Christian Campbell, Lady Menzies, to Colin Campbell of Carquhin, dated Sunday night, she states that she was that morning surprised with Lindsay, a servant of the Duke of Athole, coming to see how she was, it being Sunday. She was more surprised when informed by him that he had come over on a Saturday night to lock the doors of the church, and to take the keys to his Grace, to whom they belonged as patron, and went immediately off when the doors were fixed. This step created much alarm, for if friends will not bestir themselves the honor and interest of the family (of Weem) might suffer, and as Bizet was at the Duke's, spurring him up to this, which, had Mr. Campbell concerned himself, as was expected, he durst not have done so, and left Campbell to extricate them out of those troubles his negligence had brought upon them. The Duke states that he walks by the advice of the President and Queen's Advocate, and reflects on Mr. Campbell for neither acting nor giving advice. Russell was desired to look the Register for the Duke of Athole's charter, so as to ascertain the nature of his right, for the right of patronage is reported to be in his signature.

194. In a letter from the Duke of Atholl to Lady Weem, dated Blair Atholl, Sept. 2, 1712, the Duke expresses his wish to have a minister settled for the kirk of Dull, he and his vassals having a considerable interest in that parish, and complains of the ill-usage he had received regarding that matter, and had it not been for Captain James Menzies who had taken, during the Duke's absence in London, unmannerly and illegal methods by giving a call to Mr. Menzies to be minister of that place whom the Duke did not know; and also complains that when the day to moderate in a call was come "Capt. James took upon him to administrat the oaths "in Inglish to several of the elders who did not under-"stand a word of that language, which was a great "profanation of an oath, and also to administrat the "oath to one Mener, a proxy for Garntully, which "was illegal, since by the law the Heritors present "ought to take the oaths and not a proxy for them." Notwithstanding Captain James has continued his opposition to the Duke. But the Duke, considering that Mr. Menzies is related to the family of Weem, and at her Ladyship's desire, should he be qualified for the ministry, he would concur in settling him in some other parish, providing there be no more insisting in that call to the parish of Dull. That he would very soon present a Presbyterian minister to the church of Dull against whom there could be no objection.

195. In a letter from Christian Campbell, Lady Menzies, to the Lord Nairn, dated September 13, 1712, she expresses her surprise that the Duke of Atholl had sent a presentation to Lord Nairn's minister to the parish of Dull, but was glad to hear of his prudent and civil behaviour in that matter, and trusts that his Grace may be inclined to deal more favourably in the matter.

196. Also in a letter from Ja. Stewart, Mouline, to Lady Weem, dated Mouline, 25th October 1712, the writer states that he had seen the Duke of Atholl, who wished him to wait on her Ladyship regarding "the affaire of Dull parochine," and report to him. But not being able to be at Weem, he had been requested to write her Ladyship, stating the Duke's inclinations, who gives the names of parties whom he considers suitable for the church. Mr. Stewart expresses his concern for the congregation, and is very desirous of a suitable settlement to the satisfaction of all concerned; and that from her Ladyship's concern for "religione" and the weel of souls to be so great that she will fall in with the most proper method to get that "numberous and desolate "parochine speedily planted," he humbly proposes that the call to Mr. Menzies should be fallen from, so as to keep a good understanding between the two great families, that of his Grace and that of Weems, and another person agreed upon; and that the business of the patronage be referred to two lawyers, such as the Lord Advocate and the Lord President, and should like her Ladyship and his Grace to agree to this.

197. Elizabeth Duchess of Argyll writes on 15 August 1713 to Lady Weem, congratulating her on her success. "And for Grace of Atholl's thundering letter I think "with men of sence it should have noe waight, but I "find the rest in ther owen opinion thinks disobliging ". . . . So great men will ryne the risk of overturning "the church government; but I fansie depending upon "such fellows as the Duke and Earle may be a means "that will not fail of vnderminding it, for wee doe not "see that humain wisdom gouerns the world. I wish "they discouer not ther folly to late."

XII.—Miscellaneous Papers, 1503–1747.

198. Extract Decreet by the Lords of Council in favour of Robert Menzeis of that ilk, Knight, against Neil Stewart of Forthirgill, "for the wrangwis distruc-"tioun and downecastin of his mansioun place and "fortilice of the Weme, and for the birning and dis-"tructioun of diuers victailis, insicht gudis and other "gudis," committed by Stewart in the year 1503. Dated at Edinburgh, 16 March 1504.

In the valuation of the articles destroyed there are enumerated the following: 200*lib.* for the destruction of the house; 30*lib.* for the "beddin of the said place "and certane clathis;" 10*lib.* for three "stand" of harness; 20*lib.* for twelve "jakkis;" 8*lib.* for certain "splentis;" 14*s.* for a breast "splent;" 28*s.* for two "sellatis" and "gorgeatis;" 20*s.* for a howmond; 40*s.* for certain steel bonnets; 48*s.* for 24 spears; 40*s.* for four culverins; 8 merks for certain bous and arrows; 12 merks for certain swords, bucklers, and "gluvis of plate;" 3*lib.* for certain "burdeclaithis" and towels. There follow pewter vessels, chandeliers, pots, cauldrons, pans, "girdillis," spits. The grain is thus valued: 12 merks for 12 bolls of meal and malt; 32*s.* for two bolls of wheat; the chalder of oats with the "fodder" is valued at 8 merks; the chalder of bere at 16 merks.

199. Notarial instrument certifying the assignation by Mariot Ne Kinla, Donald Moyr, her spouse, Makvelane Afrik, daughter of the after-mentioned Angu M'Kinla, and others, the nearest kinsmen to the deceased Angus M'Kinla, to Alexander Menzeis, son and heir-apparent of Sir Robert Menzies of that ilk, of the assythment to be made for the slaughter of Angus M'Kinla, by Gregor Clerk, and John Dougalsoun. Dated at Dull, 14 February 1540.

200. Composition for remission in favour of Lyon Blair and Lyon Martoun, dwellers in the shire of Perth, of the offence of treasonably absenting themselves from the Queen's host summoned to assemble at Gladsmuir in August 1548, for the siege and recovery of the town of Haddington from the English; for absenting themselves from all past hosts whatever; and for all other crimes and offences, treason and other felonies excepted Perth, 18 July 1553.

The sum paid by way of composition is 40*s.* for each. The paper is signed by Culross, Sanquhar, &c.

201. Summons of Reduction in name of Queen Mary, given under the signet, at Edinburgh, the 18th of September 1553, at the instance of Robert Menzeis of that ilk, Knight, son and heir to the deceased Robert Menzeis of that ilk, Knight, against John Earl of Athole, grandson and heir of the deceased John Earl of Athole, and — Stewart, eldest son and heir to the deceased Neill Stewart of Forthirgill, for reducing and annulling the infeftments of lands of the barony of Forthirgill granted by the deceased Neill Stewart to the said deceased John Earl of Athole, and in fraud, hurt, and prejudice of the said late Sir Robert Menzeis, and the said Sir Robert, his son, as his heir. Because the late Sir Robert had, on the 15th of March 1504, or thereabout, obtained a decreet of the Lords of Council against the said Neill Stewart for 200*lib.* Scots, "for "byrning and destroying of his place of Weyme," and divers other sums "for spoliatioun, awaytaking "and withholding of his insicht, victualis and vtheris "his geir," extending in all to 3,000 merks; which decreet had been transferred to the said Sir Robert, as heir to his father, in March 1533; and because the said infeftments had been granted fraudulently to prevent apprysing of the lands belonging to Stewart at the instance of Sir Robert Menzeis, and thus frustrate him in payment of his claims.

202. Letters, in name of Queen Mary, given under the signe tat Edinburgh, 9 February 1553, to the Sheriff of Lanark. Narrating that Robert Menzeis of that ilk, heritable proprietor of the lands of Wolf Clyde, within the barony of Culter, had before Whit Sunday, 1552, warned his tenants to flitt and remove, which they had neglected and refused to do; therefore ordering the Sheriff to take cognition of the matter, and compel them to remove, if the allegations were found correct, and refound such profits as might have accrued from that term.

203. Letter in name of Queen Mary, and given under the signet at Edinburgh, 30 March 1558. Narrating that a complaint had been made by Alexander Menzeis of that ilk, that he had raised a brief of the chapel of the regality of James Earl of Mortoun, superior, whereupon he had been served and retoured to the our quarter parts of the lands of Carnelopis, in the barony of Lyntoun; but though the inquest served affirmatively, and Sir John Rannald, Clerk of Court, had made a retour thereon, yet he defers to close the said retour, with the brief inclosed, and deliver it to the said Alexander, causing him to "tyne the Witson-"day maillis of his said landis;" charging therefore John Menzeis, sheriff in that part, to require the said Sir John to close the retour, and deliver it to the said Alexander Menzeis within six days after being required, "under the pain of rebellion."

204. Summons in name of Queen Mary, and under the signet at Edinburgh, 29 September 1564.

On the narrative that a complaint had been made by James Menzeis of that ilk, that whereas he had the lands of Rannoch and forestry thereof in few-ferm heritably; and because Coline Campbell of Glenvrquhay, and Ranald McRanald McConilglas, under pretext of a gift of escheat to the said Colin of the goods of the Laird McGregor, the Queen's rebel, and at the horn, had intruded themselves wrongously in the Isle of Lochrannoch, and the said James' lands of Rannoch "be-est the "vatter of Erachtie," and were bigging and fortifying the said isle, to the trouble of the whole country; the said Rannald and his complices being of the Clanrannald and Clanchamroun and "vtheris of the maist brokin "clanns within oure realm." That the said James had complained of this to the Queen at her late being "in "Atholle in the Lunkairtis;" where being in her progress she could not take order for reformation thereof, but wrote to the said Coline to cease from building in the said isle, and bringing in of strangers of other clans and countries, and to meet the Queen on her return either at Saint Johnstoun or Dundie, where she would take such order as might appertain to his reasonable contentment: Nevertheless they had still continued to fortify the said isle: And that when the Queen had given the said Colin gratis the gift of the escheat, it was for the expulsion of the Clangregour, and not under pretence of it to fortifie the said isle; which strength had been demolished in her father's time, and again at her command by the said Colin; nor had ever command been given to repair it, or occupy the said James' lands to which Clangregour had no right; far less would it be allowed to place in the said James' lands the Clanrannald and Clanchamroun, who if once permitted to get possession would ever after claim kindness thereto; that the said Colin had met the Queen at her home coming at Perth, and was commanded by "our bruther James Erle "of Murray" to come to Edinburgh to answer the said complaint, which he had failed to do: summoning the said Colin therefore to appear before the Queen and the Lords of her Council within 10 days after warning.

205. Receipt and discharge by William Cragy for five pounds to buy a Bible for the Kirk of Weem, 27 June 1575:—

"I, William Cragy, redar at the Kirk of Weyme, "granttis me to haif resauit fra the handis of ane "honorabill man, James Menzeis, of that ilk, the sowme "of fyive pundis money to by ane Bibile to the Kirk "of Weyme, eftir the tenour off our souerane lordis "letteris derect thairupone; of the quhilk sowme of "fyive pundis I the said William Cragy healdis me "veill content and payit, quitclames and dischargis "the said James Menzeis thairof and all vtheris to "quhame it efferris for now and euer, be this my "acquittance. "William Cragy with my hand."

206. Submission by Colin Campbell of Glenurquhairt and James Menzies of that ilk, to abide by the decreet arbitral to be pronounced by Colin, Earl of Argyll, justice-general and chancellor of Scotland, James Earl of Glencairn, and six others as arbitrators in behalf of the Laird of Glenurchy, and by John Earl of Athole, John Earl of Montrose, and six others on behalf of the Laird of Menzeis, anent the contested right to the lands of Crannycht, the alledged possession acclaimed by the Laird of Glenurchy to the teinds of Auchmore, etc., and the alleged slaughter and destruction of certain kine pertaining to Glenorchy and his tenants, alledged illegal execution of one of Menzeis' tenants, and spoiling of their goods, and all other quarrels depending between the two lairds. Stirling, 25 August 1580.

To this compromit is added a further agreement between Glenurchy and Menzeis to continue the above compromit at the request of the Earl of Argyll to the 4th January 1851, when the arbitrators should meet at Perth. Dated at Balloch, same year.

207. "Thee iniureis, oppressionis and wrangis com-"mittit bee thee larde of Weme and his tenentis, of "thee quhilkis thee larde Weme humelie complenis to "the Kingis Maiestie and counsale." [Circa 1580.]

There are seven distinct charges:—

1. That four years previous to the date of this memorial Glenurchy had sent his son Colin Campbell with 40 men to Menzies' lands of Kinaldie, and that they had stolen 24 "heid of nolt" with a number of sheep and goats. 2. That Glenurchy had seized and imprisoned a tenant of Menzies' in Morinche, and refused to release him till he had found caution to pay 40*l.* to Glenurchy, who for this sum caused the "pure mans "four pleuch hors" to be taken from him. 3. That when Menzies in January 1578 sent some of his men to execute the King's letters at the Balloch, Glenurchy wrested their weapons from them, and "bostit and "schorit" to have slain them. 4. That Glenurchy having had sent to him John Stewart, natural son to John Stewart of Appin his servant in Lorne to be his servant, had offered him land and money to pass to the Laird of Weme's bounds, "quhair the guidis "laitlie was slane, and to slaa the same," which he refused. 5. That he had caused some of Stewart's men to take away four horses from the poor tenants in Tullichdoule, and had put them in Glenurchy's stable. 6. That on the 20th July preceding the date of this memorial, Glenurchy had sent men to three different parts of Menzies' lands, Glengowlandie, Thometewgle, and Tullichdowle, and that they there "bee "manifest oppressioun slew to the number of twentie "heid of nolt," &c., taking others away. 7. That on the 22nd July Glenurchy had taken a Menzies' man "ane "tailzeour, ane commoun man readie to wirk to euirrie "persoun for his leving, he passand throw the cuntrie "to seek his craft," and had imprisoned him for seven days in the Balloch, and when Menzies had obtained letters from the King and council charging Glenurchy to find caution to set the tailor at liberty, "eftir the "geving of thee charge, thee said larde Glenurchy, in "contempt of the Kingis Maiesties authority, maist "cruellie hangit the pure man quietlie, being thee "Kingis Maiesteis lege and ane trew craftisman."

Decreet-arbitral by John Earl of Athole, anent the lands of Wester Morinche contested between Duncan Campbell of Glenurchy and James Menzies of that ilk, decerning the latter on the date of this decreet to set these lands in tack and assedation for 13 years to the Laird of Glenurchy; the latter engaging to permit none of the Macgregors or any others in their name to "labour, use, or manure" the lands thus awarded him. Dated at Perth, 15 November 1583.

208. Extract Entry from the Books of Privy Council respecting the acting and obligation of Merser of Mekillour and James Scrymgeour of the Myres, as cautioners for Thomas Stewart of Grantullie, that the said Thomas should assist with his whole forces those under his Majesty's commission for the asieging of the place and fortalice of the Moynes and pursuit of its detainers, and all other "rebelles, fugitives and broken "men troublares of the common quietness of the cuntrie," under the penalty of two thousand pounds. Edinburgh, 1 May 1585.

209. Office copy from the Register of Privy Seal of Letter of Gift to George Earl of Huntly of the ward and nonentry of the barony of Menzeis and other lands belonging to the deceased James Menzeis of that ilk; with relief of the same, and marriage of Alexander Menzies his heir. Stirling, 27 September 1585.

210. Precept under the signet by King James VI. and the Lords of Privy Council, at the instance of Barbara Stewart, Lady Weme, narrating that "quhair "it is notour. . . . quhat masterfull reffis, heirschippis, "stouthis and depredationis scho hes susteuit and dalie "sustenis be thevis, broken men and sornaris of clannis

The persons named above are charged to find responsible securities that the Lady Weem sustain no further injuries from them or by their causing, each of the earls under the pain of 5,000*l.*, Lord Drummond under the pain of 4,000*l.*, the others above named under the pane of 2,000*l.* Holyroodhouse, 3 December 1586.

211. Gift by John Earl of Gowrye, with consent of Dorathea Stewart, Countess of Gowrye, his mother, to Thomas Elder, natural son to Thomas Elder of Balbruchtie, of the escheat of the goods, &c. of John Gairdnar, of Barklay Hills, who was put to the horn for not paying the teind-victuals of the year 1580, due from his lands to the Earl of Gowrye as commendator of Scone. Holyroodhouse, 24 May 1592.

212. Ten papers (1575-1604) relating to quarrels between the Lairds of Glenurchy and Weem, as to the right to the lands of Cranach, the Rannoch, Auchmore, &c., and to acts of spoliation committed by the Laird of Glenurchy and his vassals on the Laird of Weem and his tenants. By a contract, dated at Perth, 14 November, 1583, and to which the Earl of Athole and George Drummond of Blair were witnesses, the long-continued and serious quarrel as to the lands just mentioned was settled, and all other disputes were referred to the arbitration of John Campbell of Lawers.

213. Discharge by Alexander Forbes, servitor to the Duke of Lennox, in favour of Sir Alexander Menzies of Weem, for resetting of the Egyptians, threatening that in case the like danger should occur again his whole goods should be confiscated, without any favour to be granted by the King's treasurer or treasurer-depute. 30 March 1620.

[From the numerous writs issued for the apprehension of horse-thieves, sheep-stealers, &c., we select the following for notice]:—

214. Warrant of Justiciary, under the signet, by King Charles and Lords of Council, to Alexander Menzies of that ilk and Sir James Campbell of Lawers, for the trial of and other legal action against Muildonache M'Ildoune, then a prisoner in the hands of Sir Alexander Menzies, and "a common and notorious theefe, who," it is said, "hes lived this long tyme bygane vpon "thift, resset of thift, pylkerie and oppression." Edinburgh, 4 February 1636.

215. "Accompt of the losses done by the enemie to "the lands of Achylle, and Drungzie perteining to "James Stirling of Balvill" [ante 1646]. The losses arose from the stealing of horses and kine (the latter especially), and the destruction of house plenishing, and one entry is "of cornes & stray be the enemes "quartering thriescore horses thrie nights . . . es- "timate to the value of fyvescore ten bolls . . . 5*lib.*" The sum of the particular losses is 2396*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* The account is attested by Mr. Thomas Henderson, minister at the Port, and three of his elders.

On this document there is indorsed a decreet of four commissioners appointed by the estates of Parliament, James Drummond, fiar of Machanie, Mr. Patrick Murray of Achtertyre, and other two, for trial and cognition "of the lands within the presbyteries of "Ouchterardure and Dunblane quhilkis are brunt "plunderit and waistit," relieving James Stirling of Balvill from the payment of any monthly maintenance or other public dues from his lands of Achyle and Drunzie. Sir John Haldane of Glenegles appeared for Stirling and his tenants, as by reason of "the "plague of pestilence" then raging in that district, the distance of place and stormy weather, they could not themselves appear. With reference to the attestation of the account by the clergyman and elders, it stated that as they were "men famous and of guid estieme," and, "according to the custome of the countrie" they were, "in regard of the necessitie of the tyme, "appoyntit for that effect, as men wha best knowes the "conditioun of thar owne peopill, ther worth and "losses. Quhilk minister, gentilmen and elders in their "approbatioun declars and testifies that upon their "conference and credite, they did examine the within- "vrittin parties and ther vitnesses in all the particular "losses given in be them in ther compts, and as they "are particularlie set down in this samyne paper, and "that they and ther vittnessis did depon upon ther "great oath, that ther losses and skaith sustenit be "them throw the enemie and his adherents being "estimate be them vithin the value did extend to the "sowmes of momey vithin written, ilk ane of them for "ther owin pairts therof as the vithin vritten compt "bears; and that they all for the most part through "sustening thir losses are altogither haried and re- "ducit to povertie, so that except they be releavit the "vil never be abill to labour the ground againe bot to "beg ther bread". . . . Dated at Octerardare, 1646.

216. Bond by Robert Andrews of Parckley, accepting his share of the liability of 2000*l.*, which had been accepted conjointly by himself, Alexander Menzies of that ilk, and Robert Campbell of Glenlyon, as cautioners in a bond made by the Laird of Glenurchy, younger, to Lord-General Moncke, that the house of Balloch should be kept safe and secure by the said Glenurchy from all enemies of the Commonwealth, and should be re-delivered to the Lord-General or the Commander-in-chief in Scotland for the time, on seven days' demand, or, in case of inability to defend it, should be offered to the Lord-General or Commander-in-chief, and kept for fourteen days. Perth, 24 July 1658.

217. Copy of the libel against Archibald Marquis of Argyll, containing 14 separate charges. [1660.]

218. Bond by a number of Macgregors, Camerons, and others, indwellers in the barony of Rannoch, narrating that it was complained that many of the Rannoch people were "killers and daily destroyers" of deer, roes and wild fowl, and expressing the obligation of the subscribers that from that date they would not kill any deer or wild fowl in the forests or hills belonging to the Marquis of Huntly, the Earl of Athole, or Sir Alexander Menzies their master, under a penalty of 100 merks toties quoties Arharich 6, and Awillich 7, August 1667.

219. Commission of Fire and Sword under the signet, by King Charles the Second and the Lords of Council [Rothes as Chancellor Caithness, Douglas, Argyll, Airlie, Tweeddale, Annandale Kincardin, and Halcartoune], to Sir Alexander Menzees of Weyme, John Campbell, younger, of Glenurchy, Sir James Campbell of Lawers, and — Campbell of Glenlyon, to apprehend and proceed with fire and sword against [Ronald] M'Donald of Fersett, Alexander and Archibald M'Donalds, his brethren, Donald M'Donald, alias "the Halkit-Stirk," Angus M'Olrig and Donald his brother, ——— M'Donalds, sons of "Halkit-Stirk," the Laird of M'Gregour, Duncan Roy M'Osham. They had been declared rebels for not having compeared before the Lords on the 27th July immediately preceding to "answer for their and their assistants and complices "entering into the lands of Ranach, and by force and "violence taking of possession of a part of the said Sir "Alexander Menzees his lands, and manteaning of the "same by force of armes, and committing of divers "other outrages;" and notwithstanding the letters of denunciation, the narrative relates, they not only continued in this violent possession of the lands of Ranach, but openly repaired to kirk and market, as if they were "frie leidges." Dated at Edinburgh, 1 August 1671.

The letters of denunciation of the 27th July show that the Macdonalds and Macgregors had entered Menzies' lands in June, driven out his tenants, settled their goods, sent forth scouts and posted sentinels, and in this same month of June, a party of sixteen or eighteen had attacked some merchants "belonging to" the Laird of Ardgower and places adjacent, seized and broken their swords, and taken the more desirable portion of their goods.

220. Extract Commission by King William III. in favour of Robert Menzies, younger, of Weem, to be Captain of the Independent Company, consisting of 100 foot sentinels, raised by himself. Hampton Court, 23 August 1689.

221. Commission by Major-General Hugh Mackay in favour of Captain Robert Menzies, younger, to be governor of the garrison in the castle of Weem. Perth, 30th September 1689.

SIR R. MENZIES, BART.

222. Paper indorsed, "Scroll Clause in the Tacks of Rannoch, 1747."

Obliges the tenant to bring his cows and horses—on oath if required—before any person authorised for their inspection by Sir Robert [Menzies], at two terms in the year, or oftener if required, and to give a faithful account of whatever cows or horses he received into his possession during these terms, stating how he came by them; to keep but one cottar betwixt him and the possessor of the adjoining half-merk land, and that cottar to be of "the Slishmein people," unless liberty for some other person were obtained from Sir Robert; not to give any traveller whatever one night's quarters without acquainting his neighbour while the stranger was with him, or within two hours after his departure; not to keep company with nor to give quarters for two successive nights to a known thief or any person of a bad character, under a penalty of 12*l.*; to hinder cattle stealing, and to assist other tenants for a certain sum for every day so occupied in the recovery of stolen cattle; and to watch no other bounds but those of Sir Robert.

I cannot conclude this Report without ackowledging the kindness and courtesy with which Sir Robert Menzies placed his Manuscripts at my service for inspection. Sir Robert, I believe, will readily consent to a fuller calendar of his muniments should this be deemed necessary by the Commissioners.

MANUSCRIPTS OF THE FAMILY OF CARRUTHERS OF HOLMAINS, IN THE COUNTY OF DUMFRIES.

FAMILY OF CARRUTHERS OF HOLMAINS.

The family of Carruthers have been long settled on the borders of Scotland, and in the county of Dumfries. Formerly there was a parish named Carruthers, which existed as a separate parish till the year 1609, when it was united to the parish of Middlebie; and these two parishes, along with Penersax, also united to them, form one parish, under the name of Middlebie.

In the original parish of Carruthers, on a height above the village of that name, on Fultonburn, there stood a British fort or castle, which gave rise to the name Caerrhythyr, signifying the fort of the assault.

Besides the family of Carruthers of Holmains, there were Carruthers of that ilk, Carruthers of Mosswald, Carruthers of Dormont, and others.

William Carruthers of Mosswald obtained from King David Bruce a charter of the lands of Middlebie, dated 10 September 1351; and John of Carruthers, probably the son of William, obtained from the same sovereign a charter of a part of Mosswald, which belonged to John of Rafhols, dated 10 December 1361. The descendants of William Carruthers possessed Mosswald for many generations. When the Earls of Douglas became Lords of Annandale the family of Carruthers appear to have held their lands under them. Several charters by the Earls of Douglas as Lords of Annandale are preserved in this collection. In the year 1411 Simon Carruthers of Mosswald was buckler bearer to Archibald Earl of Douglas, Lord of Galloway and of Annandale. Simon, the buckler bearer, may have been the Sir Simon Carruthers who is commemorated by a stone statue, which lies in the aisle of the parish church of Mosswald. The head rests on a pillar, the feet on a bar; the hands are placed in the posture of supplication. The statue has neither date nor inscription, but it is traditionally known as that of Sir Simon Carruthers.

The same Earl of Douglas granted several charters of lands to Simon Carruthers, his buckler bearer, in the year 1411, including the lands of Middlebie and Dornock, Heatlandhill, Applebrechall, Hoddam, Tunergarth, Westwood, and Rockcliffe.

The Christian name of Simon was a common one in the Mosswald family, and it occurs at an early period in the parish of Middlebie. Simon, the parson of Middlebie, swore fealty to King Edward the First, in 1296. Besides the Sir Simon Carruthers above mentioned there was Simon Carruthers of Mosswald in 1485, and in 1501 Walter Scott of Buccleuch granted to Simon Carruthers of Mosswald the lands of Roberthill. In 1512 King James the Fourth granted to Simon Carruthers, son of Simon Carruthers of Mosswald, a charter of Mosswald, Middlebie, &c. In 1535 Simon Carruthers was heir to Simon Carruthers in Mosswald and other lands.

This last named Simon Carruthers died between the years 1544 and 1548, leaving no sons, but two daughters, Janet and Marion Carruthers, who were the co-heiresses of his estate of Mosswald. The ward and marriage of the heiresses was given by Queen Mary to James Douglas of Drumlanrig, by gift dated 13 August 1548. Janet Carruthers, the eldest daughter, married Thomas Rorison of Bandarroch, and she and her husband conveyed her half of the lands of Mosswald to James Douglas of Drumlanrig in 1562.

FAMILY OF CARRUTHERS OF HOLMAINS.

Marion Carruthers, the younger co-heiress of Simon, conveyed her half of Mosswald to Charles Murray of Cockpoole, ancestor of the Murrays, Earls of Annandale. But that conveyance was disputed by James Douglas of Drumlanrig as having right to the ward and marriage of Marion Carruthers, and her elder sister joined action with Drumlanrig against Cockpoole. Drumlanrig provided a husband for Marion Carruthers in the person of a John Macmath; but Marion declined him, and, rather than be concussed into a marriage with him, she committed suicide by leaping over a crag. In consequence of that act her estate, real and personal, escheated to the Crown, and William Douglas of Hawick obtained from the Crown a gift of the escheat, dated 29 November 1590. Janet Carruthers was the heiress of her sister Marion, and from Janet, Douglas of Drumlanrig appears to have acquired the other half of the lands of Mosswald. The two halves of the lands thus acquired were provided to a younger son of Drumlanrig, and gave designation to the Douglasses of Mosswald, till the lands were reacquired by the Queensberry family.

The information about the family of Carruthers of Mosswald now stated is derived from the Mosswald charters at Drumlanrig, and it illustrates a point in the feudal law as to the marriage of heiresses.

The present report refers to the family of Carruthers of Holmains, which is now represented by Alexander Erskine Murray, Esquire, Advocate, one of the Sheriff Substitutes of Lanarkshire, at Glasgow. The last Mr. Carruthers of Holmains had no sons, but a large family of daughters, and his property of Holmains was sold. The eldest daughter, Christian Carruthers, married John Erskine of Aberdona, who was the great grandfather of Mr. Erskine Murray. She lived till above the age of 90 years. The eldest son of that marriage, and the only one who left issue, was James Erskine of Aberdona, who was the grandfather of Mr. Erskine Murray, whose mother, the late honourable Mrs. Erskine Murray, was his only child. He is thus the representative of the family of Carruthers of Holmains. As such, the collection of family papers was left to him by the late Major J. P. Carruthers Wade, into whose possession the papers had come, as the son of a younger sister of Mrs. Christian Carruthers, or Erskine.

The collection is contained in a large old oak chest, which has been courteously transmitted by Mr. Erskine Murray for my inspection. The following is an abstract of the more ancient of the charters of the family of Carruthers, which date from the time of King David Bruce, and contain also charters from successive Lords of Annandale, including the Dunbars, Earls of March, the Earls of Douglas and Longueville, and Alexander Duke of Albany:—

1. Charter by King David the Second, as Lord of Annandale, to John of Carrotheris, of the half of the lands that formerly belonged to John of Rafhols in the tenement of Mousfald. 10 December, 33d year of reign. [1361.]

8. Charter by James the Fourth, King of Scots, under the Great Seal, in favour of John Carrutheris of Holmendis, of the lands of Little "Dawtoune," Butterthuate, Kirkhill, Deneby, and Egilfeichane, with the mills of Little Dalton and Egilfeichane; and advocation and gift of the churches and chapels thereof, in the Stewartry of Annandale and Sheriffdom of "Drumfries;" to be held by the said John and his heirs of the King and his successors in fee and heritage for payment yearly of three suits at the three head Courts of the Stewartry of Anandale, with ward and relief and marriage. At Edinburgh, 14 Feb. 1507.

This charter proceeds on the narrative that the above lands had formerly belonged heritably to John Carrutheris of Holmendis, held of the King in chief, and that they had been lawfully apprised and assigned to the King by his steward of Anandale, to remain with the King in property, for payment of five hundred and fifty merks due to him by the said John Carruthers, and were in the King's hands for the space of five years after the apprising; and for which sum the said John had now made composition with the King's Treasurer. The King, therefore, willing that the said John should have full regress to his foresaid apprised lands for the said composition and payment making according to the tenor of the Act of Parliament made on apprising of lands for debt, grants the above charter.

9. Letter of Procuratory by Robert Lord Maxwell, addressed to King James V. and John Duke of Albany, Governor of Scotland, to the effect that he had appointed James Johnstoun of that ilk, Symon Caruthers of Mouswald, John Carutheris of Holmends, John Charteris of Amysfeld, John Charteris of Lochtoune, Archibald Carutheris in Loganevodend, Adam Carlile in Bridkyrk, Robert Ferman, Dean of Glasgow, and Patrick Covyntre, Dean of Lawstawrik, his procurators, for resigning in His Majesty's hands his lands of Sorowsik and Medilschaw, in the lordship and stewartry of Annandale, in favour of Robert Caruthers of Medilschaw. Dated and sealed with the seal of the granter's arms at Lochmabane, 14 November 1517. Witnesses: Harbert Maxwell, the granter's brother german, Richard Heris, Edward Maxwell, John Maxwell, Robert Vaus, &c.

10. Sasine proceeding on royal precept addressed to Robert Lord Maxwell, as Steward of Annandale, and his bailies, for infefting John Caruthers of Holmendis as heir to John Caruthers of Holmends, his grandfather, in the lands of Litell Daltoune, Buttirthuate, Kirkhill, Denby, and Egilfechane, and in the advocation and donation of the churches and chaplainries of the lands of Raffeldis and Howthuate, Plewlands, Perisbie, Altoune, Erischebank, Copvod and Bengalhill, in the lordship of Annandale. Done on the ground of the lands of Litill Daltoune, at the principal messuage thereof, and on the ground of the other lands, between the hours of two and three afternoon, 21st May 1523. Witnesses: Cuthbert Murray, son and apparent heir of John Murray of Kokpule, Knight, Adam Murray, John Carutheris, Sir James Caruthers, rector of Vamfra, &c.

11. Contract of sale between Gilbert Grearsoun of Daltoun, on the one part, and John Lyndesay, son and heir of umquhile John Lyndesay of Barcloy, and Master James Lyndesay, burgess of Edinburgh, his tutor, for his interest, on the other part; whereby the said Gilbert binds himself and his heirs to sell, and whereby he sells to the said John and his heirs his twenty pound land of old extent of Daltoun and Dormant, with tower, fortalice, orchards, yairds, &c., and advocation of the parsonage of Mekill Daltoun, in the stewartry of Annandale and sheriffdom of "Drumfries," to be held of the Queen and her successors for the service and duties due therefrom formerly; and promising to infeft them therein, betwixt the date of the contract and the first of October next to come; and to that effect to resign the lands in the hands of James Duke of Chattelherault, Earl of Arran, Lord Hamiltoune, "tutour, administratour, "gyder, and governour to our souerane lady, as in her "highness' hands" for infeftment to be given to the said John and his heirs, thereof heritably, to be held as above; and further promising neither to sell, wadsett, dispone, nor sett tacks of the said lands to any other except the said John. And the said Gilbert makes the said John and his heirs his lawful assignees to the reversion made to the said Gilbert and his heirs by John Carruthers of Holmendis, upon the redemption and outquitting of the said John Carruthers and his heirs of the one half of the said lands, &c. containing the sum of seventeen score merks Scots, and transferring from the said Gilbert and his foresaids to the said John Lyndesay and his heirs all right which he had to the said reversion for redeeming the said half lands, &c. from the said John Carruthers, in the same manner as the said Gilbert could have redeemed them; the said John Lyndesay and his tutor paying to the said Gilbert at the time of the resignation seven hundred merks Scots. The contract to be registered in the books of "our souerane ladies counsale." Dated at Edinburgh, 8 August 1552.

12. Charter by Mary Queen of Scots, under the Great Seal, in favour of John Carrutheris, grandson (nepos) of John Carrutheris of Holmendis, elder, and his heirs of the ten merk land of old extent of Rammirskailis and Harthweth, in the parish of "Lowmabane," stewartry of Annandale and sheriffdom of "Drumfries," which ten merk land of Rammirskailis and Harthweth formerly belonged heritably to William Ramsay of Sipland, and were resigned by him by his procurators and letters patent in the Queen's hands at Aberdeen. To be held of the Queen and her successors in fee and heritage for ever, as freely as the said William Ramsay or his predecessors held them of the Queen or her predecessors, for payment of the services due and wont. Dated at Aberdeen, the penult day of October 1562.

In addition to the charters specified in the foregoing report, the Holmains' oak charter chest contains a large collection of correspondence and miscellaneous papers. These relate chiefly to the management of the estate, and do not fall within the scope of the Commission.

WILLIAM FRASER.

Edinburgh, 32, Castle Street,

REPORT ON THE PAPERS OF HUGH MACKAY GORDON, ESQ., OF ABERGELDY.

The lands of Abergeldy, in Strathdee, of old formed part of the vast territory of the Earldom of Marr, but Thomas Earl of Marr, the last of the direct male line of Marr (and who died in the year 1357), by a Charter (undated) granted to Duncan, son of Roger, the lands of Abergeldy and others lying in the Earldom of Marr.

The vassal of the Earl, by this Charter, was taken bound to give suit at his three head courts, held "apud lapidem de Mygvethe"—a stone at the Earl's great manor of Mygvethe, or Migvie, in the adjoining country of Cromar.

The Earldom of Marr, on the death of Alexander Stewart, Earl of Marr, in 1435, was held to vest in the Crown; and in the beginning of the following century Sir Alexander Gordon, of Mygmar, got a Charter from the King of the lands of Aberyeldie and Estoun on his own resignation.

Three extracts of this Charter are among the papers at Abergeldie. It is dated at Inverness, 9th November 1501, and by it the King erected the lands into a free barony.

It appears, however, that the representatives of Duncan, the son of Roger, to whom the lands had been conveyed by Earl Thomas before 1377, had still certain rights in them—as appears by a notarial instrument in the Collection here, dated 24th March 1507, wherein it is set forth that in the Court of the King's Justiciar, held at Dundee by Thomas Maxwele, son and heir apparent of William Maxwele, of Teline, the depute of the Justiciar, there appeared Thomas, son of Alexander, asserting himself to be heir of Cristiana Roger, his great grandmother, in the lands of Abergeldy and others in the Earldom of Marr, and confessing that he had been fully satisfied and paid by George Gordon, of Mygmar, for his rights therein, his claims being thereby renounced, and the original Charter granted by Thomas Earl of Marr to his predecessor being now delivered to the said George Gordon. The instrument is witnessed by John Earl of Crauford, Thomas Lord Lovat, Sir Thomas Maull, of Panmure, Sir William Scot, of Balluery, Sir Adam Crichtoun, of Ruthwenis, and John Ogilvy, of Innerquharite.

It would appear that at this time claims had been put forward on the part of the Crown, as coming in place of the old Earls of Marr; but these were rejected by the Privy Council in an Act whereby it was found that "the

H. M. Gordon, Esq.

" landis of Aberyeldie ar distinct landes fra the Erle-
" dome of Marr."

The Royal Confirmation of this Act is among the papers, and is dated 26th February 1507, the Act itself being dated on the 25th of that month.

By it the Lords " assoilzeis George Gordoun, of Mygmar, the sone and are of umquhile Schir Alexander " Gordoun, of Mygmar, Knycht, fra the petitioun and " clame of oure Souerane Lord to here and se the " landis of Abiryeldy adiugeit to pertene till oure said " Souerane Lord, because thai ar of the properte of the " Erledome of Mar. And als because the infeftment " made to the said umquhile Alexander of the said " landis was made the tyme of umquhile Duke of " Albany . . . And decernis the said George qwite " fra the said petitioun and clame . . . because it " was clerely sene . . . to the said lordis that the " sade landis of Aberyeldy war distynct and separate " landis fra the propirte of Mar, quhen the Erledome of " Mar was cled with ane Erle, and quhen it was uncled " with ane Erle, as our Souerane Lordis ald rollis and " new rollis sene and considerit propertis."

Two days after the date of the King's confirmation the lands were resigned into the King's hands by George Gordon, for a Charter to be granted in favour of himself and Margaret Stewart, his spouse.

On 2nd May 1548 Alexander Gordon got sasine of the lands of Aberyeldie as heir of his father, James Gordon, " quha deit last . . . seisit . . . in the feild of " Pinkyecleucht, strikin the tent day of September, yeir " of God j^{m} v^{c} fourtie and sevin yeris."

Security was directed by the King's precept to be taken " of the soum of xiii*lib.* vis. viii*d.* for the fermis " of the saidis landis and barronie . . . for the last " Mertimes terme, and xxvi*lib.* xiiis. iiii*d.* for releiff of " the samyn."

There seems to have been some confusion regarding the property of Abergeldy at this early period, for while the lands were granted, as has been seen, before 1377, to Duncan, son of Roger, and the rights of his representatives were recognised in 1507, yet in the accounts of the Chamberlain of Marr, in 1438, a few years after the Earldom came into the hands of the King, a payment is entered out of the rents of Camnakist, by the King's grant, of ten pounds to John Mowat, for his right of the lands of Abergeldy for the two previous years; and in the years 1445 and 1446 the receiver of the King's rents is ordered to inquire carefully who is in possession of the lands of Abergeldy, and to find out about their value and occupation.

In 1449 he reports that the lands of Aberyeldy are occupied by the Earl of Huntly; and in 1451 the Chamberlain accounts for ten pounds as the rent of these lands which are said to be in the Earl's hands.

The Charter from the Crown in 1501, already noted, was [illegible] ne Earl's son, Sir Alexander Gordon, of Mygmar, but it was not sufficient to give a complete right until the claims of the heir of Roger, the grantee of the Earl of Marr, had been bought up. Even then it seems to have been imagined that a right remained in the Crown, as in place of the Earls of Marr, to the property of Abergeldy; and it was only after the decreet of the Lords of Privy Council had rejected the King's claim that the full right was established in the Gordons.

The later writs consist of the ordinary deeds for the transmission of the lands from father to son, and do not furnish materials of a historical character. Besides the usual titles of property, there are numerous writs of adjudications and apprisings, dated in the 17th century.

Report on Ancient Documents bolonging to King James's Hospital of Perth.

King James's Hospital of Perth.

Prior to the Reformation there were many religious establishments in the burgh of Perth. Of these the more prominent were the monasteries of the Dominicans, the Carmelites, the Carthusians, and the Franciscans.

In the year 1569 King James VI. founded an hospital for behoof of the poor members of Jesus Christ residing and abiding in the burgh of Perth, and for its support he assigned all the lands and properties which previously belonged to the monasteries, churches, chapels, and altars within the liberty of the burgh of Perth.

It thus happened that all the Charters and other documents connected with these various institutions came to be the property of the King's Hospital, and they are still preserved in the muniment room of that institution at Perth.

They are very numerous, and for purposes of genealogy and local history they contain much useful material. The most important series is that of the monastery of the Blackfriars, and from some of the records belonging to it, glimpses may be got of the religious ideas and devotional customs which prevailed at different periods, while they throw much light on the general state of the country.

King James's Hospital of Perth.

The following notes relate to the Charters of this series which seemed specially interesting:—

The founder of the monastery was Alexander II., King of Scotland, and the oldest document now in the collection is a writ granted by that King at Forfar on the 31st October 1241, addressed to his provosts of Perth, wherein he commands them to pay from his farm of Perth yearly to the friars preachers of Perth " unam pisam ceræ " de quaquidem pisa ceræ dotavimus annuatim ecclesiam " eorundem fratrum prædicatorum de Pertht, cum dictam " ecclesiam fecimus dedicari." The witnesses to the writ are Philip de Malevill, Robert of Montealt, justiciary of Scotland, and Robert of Meyners.

On 7th June 1244, the same King granted to the monks " totam illam placeam in qua fuit gardinum nos-" trum," also " ut habeant conductum aquæ de stangno " molendini nostri de Pertht, habentem in quadram " quatuor pollices." The witnesses to this writ were William Bishop, of Glasgow, chancellor, William Earl of Mar, Alan Durward, justiciary of Scotland, Alexander Cumyn, John of Vaux, and Robert of Meyners, at Holyrood.

By a writ addressed to his provosts of Perth, dated at Scone, 31st May 1251, King Alexander III. renews the grant made by his father of a cake of wax for lighting the church of the monks on the day of the Nativity of St. John Baptist, and also enjoins an additional payment out of his firms of Perth, " facientes de eisdem firmis " dictos fratres pasci singulis septimanis uno die." The witnesses were Robert of Ross, Robert of Meyners, chamberlain, and William of Lowther, sheriff of Perth.

The same King granted a writ at Scone on 18th October 1265, addressed " Præpositis suis de Perth et Fir-" mariis suis de Cragyna et Malhena uni vel pluribus " qui pro tempore fuerint," directing payment to be made to the monks " quinque celdras boni frumenti et " bene vannati et decem celdras boni brasei." They were also " similiter habere faciatis eisdem fratribus " singulis annis de firma burgi nostri de Perth septem " libras et sexdecim solidos pro procuratione sua annua, " et unam pisam ceræ cum melius horum ceræ fuerit " in anno."

By a Charter dated at Perth, 12th April 1316, King Robert Bruce confirmed to the friars preachers, " villæ " de Perth presentibus et futuris nostræ dotis ecclesiæ " earundem per bonæ memoriæ dominum Alexandrum " regem Scotiæ predecessorem nostrum ultimo defunc-" tum constructæ, non tamen per ipsum dotatæ, et pro " sustentatione ipsius ecclesiæ et Luminarii, et fratrum " ibidem servientium, cum aliisque operibus ad divinum " cultum in eadem ecclesia necessariis quadraginta et " quatuor marcas Sterlingorum," one half from his firms of the town of Perth " et aliam meditatem de " nostra custuma que dicitur Maltoth de Villis de Dunde " et de Perth."

The same King, by a Charter dated at Berwick-on-Tweed, 26th April 1323, on the narrative that King Alexander III. had granted freedom to the friars from payment of multure of 5 chalders of wheat and 10 chalders of malt, and that with respect to the same and all their corn ground at the King's mills of Perth for their own use, they should for ever retain the privilege of Roumfre after the corn belonging to himself and his heirs " et post bladum in Tremodio inventum." Confirms the said privilege.

By a Charter dated at Erole, 6th May 1324, Sir Gilbert of Hay granted to the friars twenty shillings " de fir-" mis Pomerii nostri de Inchesyreth dum ad hoc sufficere " possint sin autem de principalibus firmis integri tene " menti de Inchesyreth per manus Ballivi ejusdem," for supplying light to a lamp in the choir and another before the great cross of the friar's church. Witnesses: Nicholas of Hay, dean of the church of Dunkeld, John of Hay, rector of the church of Erole, brother of Sir Gilbert, Nicholas of Hay, his son, John of Inchmertyn, sheriff of Perth, knights: Edmund of Leyis, Thomas Ban, John of Kinfaunes, John Marescall, burgesses of Perth, and others.

By a deed granted at Perth on Sunday within the Octaves of the Ascension, in the year 1334, Sir John of Inchmertyn granted to the preaching friars " nationis " Scoticanæ in regno Scotiæ constitutis," to be received by the hands of the prior of the preaching friars of Perth, or his deputy, "pro pastura unius diei omnium fratrum "in capitulo suo generali convenientium ubicunque "fuerint infra regnum Scotie," the sum of twenty shillings sterling, payable out of his lands of Kynhard and other lands in the Earldom of Athol; also for the same purpose four bolls of good wheat and eight bolls of good barley out of his granary of Inchmertyn. Witnesses: Innocent, abbot of Scone, Sir John of Strivelyn, sheriff of Perth, and others.

On 1st March 1369 Alan of Erskyn, Lord of Inchemartyn, with consent of his wife Isabel, the heir of John of Inchemartyn, confirmed the last grant, and at the request of his wife added other four bolls of good wheat. Witnesses: William, abbot of Scone, Roger, abbot of Lindores, Robert Stewart, of Innermeath, sheriff of Perth, Laurence of Spens, provost of Perth, Thomas Cumyn, John Scot, William Whitson, and Andrew Stot, baillies of Perth, and others.

On the Feast of St. Mary, Virgin, in the year 1375, John Lorymar conveyed to John Henryson, burgess of Edinburgh, his land on the west side of the Curfar Raw, to be held of the friars under burden of an annual payment to them of five shillings. The granter appended his seal, together with the seals of Adam de Brechyne, reader of the Order of Blackfriars of Perth, John of Cogherane, canon of Dunkeld, and John of Gray, burgess of Perth, before witnesses, Thomas of Spens, Laurence of Spens, John of Petscoty, William, called Squyer, John of Lundorys, and others.

On 18th September 1389 Hugh Barday, of Kippo, granted to the friars ten shillings sterling annually out of his barony of Aryngosk, for supporting a lighted lamp in the choir of their church. He appended his own seal to the grant, as also the seal of William of Rothvann, knight, and John Gylle, provost of Perth, William of Spens, and John Petscoti, burgesses of Perth.

On 3rd December 1405, King Robert III., by a Charter granted at Dundonald, conveyed to the friars the chapel of St. Laurence, within the town of Perth, for the weal of the soul of his father, Robert II., and especially for the soul of Elizabeth More, his mother, who rests in the church of the said friars. Witnesses: Gilbert, bishop of Aberdeen, chancellor, William of Bathket, and Malcolm of Bute, chaplains to the King, Henry of Conyngham, and others. On the same day the King issued a precept to the bishop of Aberdeen, as chancellor, with directions to "cause due investiture to be given at the gates of our "chapel to the said friars."

By an Indenture dated about 1420, Thomas of Lyn, burgess of Perth, granted to the friars a croft at the Clayhill of Perth for the celebration of three masses in any week only before the altar of the Blessed Mary in the church of the friars. Witnesses: Michael Mercer, of Mokllour, John of Chalmers, John of Seres, Richard of Stratherne, William of Stratherne, David of Ferne, Patrick Chartres, Andrew of Moncref, Cristin of Dunyng, John of Logy, and William Umfra, burgesses of Perth.

On 20th August 1452, William Earl of Erroll granted to the monks four pounds, to be taken yearly out of his lands of Inchyray, and also confirmed Sir Gilbert Hays' grant of twenty shillings out of the same lands, for the weal of his own soul and that of Beatrice his wife, their parents, predecessors, and successors. It is conditioned that a well qualified brother of the said place should celebrate one mass every day for ever between the hours of 10 and 12 at the altar of St. John the Evangelist and St. Nicholas the Confessor in their church, where some of the granter's predecessors are buried, and he shall be bound to exhort the people at the beginning of the said mass to say one pater noster with the angelical salutation, and in no wise omitting the collect Fidelium Deus.

On 24th June 1525, Elizabeth Gray, widow of Alexander Earl of Huntly, made a grant to the Dominicans of her half lands of Littleton, in the barony of Langforgrund, for the weal of her soul and that of her late husband. She narrates as her reason for selecting the friars for her bounty that they were poor, promoters of religion, conforming to the rules of their spiritual fathers, so that in life and doctrine they were a becoming pattern to the people.

The friars were to chant and celebrate solemnly "cum "nota in vestimentis cæru[li]is," with deacon, subdeacon, and accolites in their choir, between the hours of seven and nine daily, a mass of repose for the granter and her husband, except on solemn days and principal festivals, which according to the ordinary or calendar of the said friars were double, on which days a mass should be celebrated out of the festival with a collect and memoriam for their souls. Also every year on the anniversary of her husbands' death, namely the 16th of January, they should celebrate for their souls exequies or an anniversary of nine lessons. But if the friars should fail to celebrate, they should be bound to resign the said lands of Littleton into the hands of the superior thereof in favour of any other religious house willing to accept the said burden, at the choice of the archbishop of St. Andrew's, and of the bishop of Dunkeld for the time. And the friars or their ecclesiastics performing the said offices, should be bound to submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the said archbishop and bishop, by renouncing their own proper jurisdictions, exemptions, and privileges, so that the said archbishop and bishop, or their vicar-general, officials, or commissaries, might compel the said friars or others accepting the said burden to a due observance of the premises.

And farther, because the said Elizabeth, countess foresaid, contributed a sum of three hundred marks for repairing the dormitory of the said monks when it was ruinous, they and their successors should be bound to say every night after complines and matins the psalm De Profundis, with the prayer Inclina at the sepulchre of the said Alexander Earl of Huntly, her husband, who lay buried in the choir of their said church, reciting their names ALEXANDER and ELIZABETH, and that for the weal of their souls. Every week also in their chapterly meetings, they were to commend their souls in their suffrages, special and general, as well of their masses as of their other prayers, and in the then present year they were to make special mention of her state and of the soul of her said husband. In the event of the failure of the friars to fulfil their duties, and the neglect of the others whom she had named to compel them, then the said Elizabeth constituted the prior and religious men of the Carthusian monastery, near Perth, guardians of her foundation so far as they might. Granted at Perth before witnesses, Alexander, commendator of Scone and Inchaffray, and Patrick Charteris, provost of Perth.

On the same day seisin was given to the friars in virtue of the precept of the countess addressed to Sir David Lindsay of Edzell, Master David Lindsay his son, and Andrew Hervey, her baillies.

The Countess of Huntly had been previously married to John Lord Glammis, and her son by that marriage, the feudal superior of Littleton, declined to enter with his superior, and for a time defeated the claim of the monks to possession of the lands, and various legal proceedings before the Privy Council and elsewhere were resorted to before they were finally successful.

The later Charters are of little general interest, and consist mostly of feu rights which the monks began to grant of their possessions. The monastery was one of the first to be destroyed at the time of the Reformation, but even before that event, the monks seem to have lost their hold on the reverence and affection of the citizens.

Thus, on 28th May 1543 they raised a summons against several of them, in which they narrated that "Alexander Chalmers, of Potty, John Henry, George "Crichton, Walter Pyper, John Davidson, James Rynd, "John Mason, with their complices and servants, of "their causing command and ratihabition recently upon "the 14th day of May instant betwixt eight and nine "hours before noon, our said oratours being actually "occupied in divine service, came to their said place, "and struck up their fore yett, broke the locks and "bands of the same, and sicklike broke up two inner "doors of the throughgang on the north side of the said "cloister, and took away with them the locks of the "same doors, and broke up the frater door, and took "away out of it chandeliers and glasses, and broke "their kitchen door, and took off the fire the kettle "with their meat, and carried it about the town, and "yet withhold the kettle and pewter dishes one or "more from them, and also broke their closure yett "which was new made, with great violence and contemption."

The value of each of the locks was estimated at eight shillings; two gross brazen chandeliers, twenty shillings; two glasses, three shillings; a great kettle, three pounds; two pewter dishes, each six shillings, Scots money.

The account book of the friars is among the papers, and is entitled "Liber Rationarii Fratrum Prædicatorum "Burgi de Perth quoad in Pecuniis fact. Die et anno "quibuscunque supra in Principio." It was begun on 20th June 1557 and was continued to the 6th of May 1559, five days before the demolition of the monastery by the citizens and mob.

The usual attestation is "Ita est Fr. David Cameron, "Prior." A very large number of the original Charters remain; others are only known from their appearance in the chartulary of the monastery. This register is divided into two parts, and originally consisted of 138 quarto leaves, chiefly of parchment, but from the second part 25 leaves have been abstracted. On the outside leaf of the first part is written "Incipit Copia Cartarum "et Evidentiarum Loci Fratrum Prædicatorum prope "Burgum de Pertht." The title of the second part is "Liber Registri omnium Cartarum et Evidentiarum "Loci Fratrum Prædicatorum prope Burgum de Perth, "factum Anno Domini Millesimo Quingentesimo Oc-"tavo." In the second part some of the Charters in the first part are re-engrossed, but many of the Charters still extant appear in neither.

The monastery of the White Friars was erected at Tullilum, near Perth.

The earliest Charter is one by King David II., dated 7th May 1361, at Aberdeen, wherein he confirmed all the donations which his predecessors and others had granted to the Carmelite friars within the kingdom of Scotland. On 15th May 1426, King James I. issued a writ enjoining on all who were indebted to the Carmelite friars of Tullilum that they should make payment without delay.

Their property appears to have consisted of small sums payable out of tenements in the town of Perth, and the Charters by which these were secured to them present no features of interest.

The house of the Carthusians, at Perth, was founded by King James I., and the earliest record connected with it is a letter by William, prior of the house of Great Chartreux of the diocese of Grenoble, dated at Chartreux, 19th August 1426, wherein the authority of a general chapter of the order is conveyed to the King, for the erection of a house of the same order near to the burgh of Perth.

It was declared to be for the accommodation of 13 monks and their attendants, and the King was to endow it with 200 merks, and to establish its privileges in correspondence with the arrangements of the order, as related by the prior of the Mount of Grace and by Dean Bryce, professed of the same house, who had carefully surveyed the place with their own eyes.

The writer trusted that under the blessing of God the new structure, with an endowment worthy of the royal munificence, would soon be carried to a good issue, and in case the King should desire the presence of two monks who might afford more detailed information concerning the buildings in their correspondence to the form of the order, the writer had addressed himself by letter to the said prior of the Mount of Grace.

The endowments consisted, for the most part, of small annual sums payable out of tenements in the town of Perth, the Charters relating to which are mainly of local interest. It appears, however, from documents in the Breadalbane Collection (Commissioners' Report) that the monks had property in Glendochart.

King James I., who was murdered in the monastery of the Dominicans, was interred in the church of the Carthusians of Perth, and here also was buried Margaret Tudor, the wife of King James IV.

Among the hospital papers is a large collection of Charters granted by the founders and benefactors of chantries and altars in the parish church of St. John the Baptist at Perth. Among the altars there were foundations in honour of St. Ninian, St. Margaret, Queen of Scotland, St. Fillan, St. Kentigern, St. Bride, and St. Roque. One of the altars, in honour of the name of Jesus, was called the Nomine Jesu altar. Another was founded by the confraternity or united brethren of the order, assumed in honour of the Holy Trinity in the parish church of Perth, and was commonly styled Confraternity or Trinity altar.

The Charters relating to chapels and altars exceed two hundred in number, and are for the most part of local importance. Of the Charters connected with the Carthusians above 90 remain, and of those belonging to the Carmelites about twenty.

The Rev. James Scott, who was minister of Perth in the end of last century, did much to illustrate the history of the Burgh by transcribing many of the old charters above described. His collections are in the Advocates' Library at Edinburgh. A careful inventory of the charters has recently been prepared for the Governors of the Hospital.

G. ROSS, ESQ.

REPORT ON THE MANUSCRIPTS OF GEORGE ROSS, ESQ., OF PITCALNIE, IN THE COUNTY OF ROSS, by WILLIAM FRASER, EDINBURGH.

Mr. Ross of Pitcalnie is the heir male of the ancient Earls of Ross, who were also Lords of Skye. This once powerful family was ennobled at a very early period of Scottish History. An Earl of Ross appears in the reign of King Malcolm the Maiden, who reigned from 1153–1165. Farquhar Earl of Ross founded the Abbey of Fearn, in the reign of King Alexander the Second.

More than one of the family of the Earls of Ross intermarried with the Royal family of Scotland, and the power of the Earls of Ross, especially in the north of Scotland, was so great as frequently to cause serious trouble to the Monarch.

But in the fifteenth century this family suffered an eclipse. In the year 1476 the Earldom of Ross was forfeited by an Act of the Parliament of Scotland, and inalienably annexed to the Crown.

William, Sixth Earl of Ross, who was Justiciar of Scotland, north of the Forth, obtained from King David the Second a charter, dated 23 October 1370, of the Earldom of Ross and Lordship of Skye. He had issue two daughters; the elder, Lady Euphemia Ross, who succeeded her father as Countess of Ross in 1372, married first Sir Walter Leslie, second son of Sir Andrew Leslie of that ilk, and Sir Walter, in terms of the Crown Charter of 1370, became, before 14 August 1379, Earl of Ross. Of the marriage there was issue a son and a daughter, the former of whom, Alexander Leslie became Earl of Ross. He married Lady Isabel Stewart, daughter of Robert Duke of Albany, by whom he had only one daughter, Lady Euphemia Leslie, who succeeded her father as Countess of Ross. Resolving to become a nun, she resigned in 1415 the Earldom of Ross to her uncle, John Stewart, Earl of Buchan; but her aunt, Lady Margaret Leslie, wife of Donald, Lord of the Isles, successfully claimed the Earldom and title of Ross, and the Earldom of Ross and the Lordship of the Isles continued conjoined till the year 1476, when, as stated above, they were forfeited.

Through the marriage of a Monro ancestor with a lady of the family of Lord Macdonald, the heir general of the ancient Earls of Ross and Lords of Skye is George Home Monro-Binning Home, Esquire of Argaty, in the county of Perth. The younger daughter of William, Sixth Earl of Ross, Lady Johanna Ross, married Sir Alexander Fraser, who obtained with her the lands of Philorth in the county of Aberdeen, which still form part of the inheritance of Lord Saltoun as the descendant and representative of the Lady Johanna Ross or Fraser.

Hugh Ross of Rarichies, second son of Hugh Earl of Ross and Jean, daughter of Walter the High Steward of Scotland, obtained a charter in 1374 from King Robert the Second, in which he is designated his brother-in-law, of the lands of Balnagowan, and Rarichies. That Hugh Ross continued the family in the male line. After the forfeiture of the Earldom of Ross the lairds of Balnagowan regarded as the head of the clan Ross, and they continued as such for many generations. David Ross, last of Balnagowan, sold the estate to General Ross, brother of Lord Ross of Hawkhead, who although of the same name was not of the same family. David Ross died in the year 1711 without issue, and the representation in the male line then devolved on the Pitcalnie branch of the family.

The Pitcalnie Collection consists of Charters, Letters, and Miscellaneous Papers. Among the Charters is a Notarial Instrument of the year 1475 regarding certain matters in dispute between John of Ross of Balnagowan and Alexander of Sutherland of Dunbeth, and also a bond of agreement, dated 10 August 1595, entered into between certain persons of the name of Rollok on the one part and the family of Balnagowan on the other. It appears from that bond that the Rolloks, in consideration of certain sums of money, forgive "hairtlie with "their hairtis" the slaughter of their brother Patrick Rollok by Nicolas Ross and others, and agree to take no action at law against the Rosses. This mode of settling such a serious dispute is very suggestive of the difference between the time when the agreement was made and the present.

In 1545, Cardinal Beton granted a charter of confirmation to Charles Carnecors of the lands of "Pitcallene," &c., belonging to the Bishoprick of Ross. These lands, as will be seen from a subsequent charter, were conveyed by Henry Bishop of Ross, as superior, to Alexander Ross of Balnagowan and Katherine Mackenzie, his spouse. In 1587, Alexander Ross of Balnagowan granted a charter to his son, Nicolas Ross of the lands of Pitcalnie and others, and Nicolas was afterwards known as the first Laird (Ross) of Pitcalnie.

The agreement of date 20th July 1676 entered into between Balnagowan, the head of the clan Ross, and some of his kinsmen illustrates a point regarding the relation of the chief to the clan about which there has often been misconception. It has sometimes been supposed that the chief could do no wrong in the eyes of his followers, and was not in any way responsible for his bearing towards them. But this agreement, the occasion of which was that the Laird of Balnagowan had cut with his "whinger" the head of one of his kinsmen, shews this to be an error, bearing that in the event of Balnagowan's acting unjustly towards his kinsmen, they would withdraw from following and serving him.

In the correspondence is a large number of letters from William eleventh Lord Ross of Hawkhead to the Laird of Balnagowan. Lord Ross was anxious to be recognised as the head of the clan Ross, and made great promises of advancing the interests of all who bore that name, if Balnagowan should favour his views.

The letter from Archibald Earl of Argyll to the wife of Balnagowan probably refers to Lord Lovat's first trial. Balnagowan was Lovat's cousin, and seems to have interested himself in the defence.

The letters from Duncan Forbes, Lord President of the Court of Session, were occasioned by the son of Mr. Ross of Pitcalnie joining the party of Prince Charles Edward in the year 1745. Young Mr. Ross while at Aberdeen College had impressed his professor as a student of great promise, but at the same time as one who required a strong rein and a steady hand to govern him. The subsequent actings of the young man showed the correctness of the Professor's opinion, for all the entreaties of his father and the reasonings of the Lord President were not sufficient to draw him from the cause which he had espoused.

There are a great many other letters in this collection which it has not been necessary to note, as well as other papers, among which is the petition of Munro Ross of Pitcalnie in 1778 regarding his claim to the Earldom of Ross, with relative papers.

The charters previous to 1600 are noted and annexed hereto.

1. Notarial instrument, certifying that on the 24th day of January 1456, a noble man, John of Ross, Laird of Balnagovn, craved of Alexander of Sutherland, Laird of Dunbeth, a bond for 20*l.*, usual money received and paid back. To which Alexander of Sutherland made answer saying that he was fully paid, and entirely quitclaimed John of Ross for the sum, although he could not find the bond, yet he engaged that the said bond should never come in prejudice of the said John. Whereupon the said Laird of Balnagovn paid Alexander of Sutherland a certain sum of money for the wadset of the lands of Culyndoray and Moyblare, and asked the charter of wadset to be returned to him. But Alexander of Sutherland refused to give up the charter till John of Ross gave him a merk, usual money, beyond the sum for the maill of the land from the term of Martinmas for the eight days past before payment, which John of Ross refused. Whereupon, with consent of both parties, the charter, with letter of reversion, was given to William Monilaw, notary public, to keep till the plea was settled who had right to the merk. Done in the Church of Tayn, the above date. Present, Magnus Buge, rector of Olryk, Thomas Colyson and William Monilaw, chaplains of Tayn, Donald McTirissoun, and Christian of Forres.

2. Charter of Assedation by Robert Bishop of Ross, commendator of Ferne, to Charles Carncors, of the lands of Culderere, Culnahaa, Pitcallene, Annot, Strononamadde, and Amott Aegglis. To be held of the Bishop of Ross in feufarm and heritage for ever. Paying for the lands of Culderere five merks, half a mart, two sheep, six capons, six poultry, and two kids, and forty eggs for six pennies, one boll of oats, commonly called "suggering ates," and for gressum twenty two shillings and three pennies. For the lands of Culnahaa forty shillings, a fourth part of a mart, &c. For the lands of Pitcallene five merks, half a mart, two sheep, six capons, six poultry, two kids and forty eggs for sixpence, one boll of oats, and for gressum twenty two shillings and three pennies, &c. And for arriages and carriages and other services from these lands two merks Scots: And giving three suits at the three head courts at Chanonry. With a duplicand on entry. Dated and signed by the bishop at the Chanonry of Ross, 18 May 1543. [Seals wanting.]

The preamble of the charter refers to the statutes past by the King and parliament of Scotland for leasing of lands, and the benefits thereby to accrue through building of sufficient houses, inbreaking of land, amelioration of barren grounds, planting of trees, &c., enriching of the tenants and possessors of the leased lands, and provision of arms, and warlike engines for the King, and for defence of the kingdom against ancient enemies, or any other invaders.

G. Ross, Esq.

3. Precept of Sasine by Robert Bishop of Ross, commendator of Ferne, for infefting Charles Carncors in the above lands of Culderere, Culnahaa, Pitcallene, Annot, Stronamaddow, and Amott Eagglis. Dated and subscribed by the bishop at the Chanonry of Ross, 18 May 1543.

The bishop's rental was increased by the lease by the sum of two merks "bestowed for the adornment and "policy of the commonwealth of the kingdom," besides a sum of money paid by the infeoffee.

4. Precept of Sasine by Robert bishop of Ross, commendator of Ferne, for infefting William Carncors in the lands of Vestir Terbat, with brewhouse, &c., lands of Litill Terrell, Sandvik, Canlochmore, Boithbege, Roiarchircachtrach, Rearchirorthrach, Canoichthrach. Dated at Chanonry of Ross, 18 May 1543. A memorandum on the back states that Sasine was given on the 3 July 1543.

5. Charge by Cardinal Beton, rehearsing the lease by Robert, late bishop of Ross, to Charles Carnecors, layman of Glasgow diocese, of the church lands of Culderere, Culnahaa, Pitcallene, Annott, Stronomadde, and Amot Eagglis; and a petition by Charles Carnecors for confirmation by the Apostolic See, commanding the subchantor of Moray, and Gavin Leslie, and Thomas Gadderar, canons respectively of Aberdeen and Moray, to call together the dean and chapter of the church of Ross, &c., and to ascertain whether the said lease was for the weal and benefit of the church of Ross, and bishops of the see, and if so to confirm and ratify the same. Dated at Edinburgh, in St. Andrew's diocese, ix Kal., Februarii, 1545. The Cardinal appears to exercise his authority in this matter, because of the decease of the Bishop of Ross.

16. Agreement betwixt Balnagowan and Walter Ross, Bailie of Tayne, 20 July 1676. [Copy.]

Forasmeikle as vpon the day of Junii J^m vi^c seventie sex years, David Ross laird of Balnagowne did cut with his whinger the head of his kinsman Walter Ross, bailȝie of Tayne, in the house of James Hay late bailȝie ther, vpon a debeat fallen out betuixt them; and now seeing both the saids parties are content and consent that the said act, and what might follow thereupon, may be rather then legally, amicably and Christianly mediat and composed; therefore, both the saidis parties do vnanimouslie submit the decision and accommodatione of the said act, as said is, to the arbitriment and determination of the freinds under wreitin, mutually chosen and nominat be us to that effect: that is to say, Walter Ross of Invercharron, Malcolme Ross of Kindease, John Ross of Achnacloigh, Mr. Androw Ross minister at Tarbat, Mr. Alexander Ross minister at Fearne, Alexander Ross of Litle Tarrell, James Ross of Jye, Alexander Ross of Easter Fern, John Ross bailȝie of Tayne, William Ross Lachlinsone, late bailȝie there, Robert Ross of Aldie and Mr. Robert Ross minister at Tayne: And to that effect we the saids parties, David Ross of Balnagowne as cheife and Walter Ross do hereby impower the forsaid freinds to appoint and propose not only betuixt us, bot lykewise betuixt me the said laird of Balnagowne as chiefe and me the said Walter Ross as kinsman in the above wreitin act and consequences thereof and all other our kinsmen in tyme comeing as to our respective carriage and behaviours in our severall stationes. To which finall sentence and determination of the above wreittin friends or the greater part of them to be pronunced betwixt and the day of Jm vic seventie sex years, to be filled up vpon the blank upon the back hereof, we the said laird of Balnagowne and Walter Ross bind and oblige vs, our aires, executors and successors faithfullie to adhere to and performe the said decerneing and decreet arbitrall in all points, vnder the failȝie of ane thousand marks vsuall Scots money, to be payed be the partie faileing to the partie willing to performe. And for the more securitie, we, the saids parties consent to the registratione hereof in the Books of Concill or Session or any other books competent, to have the strength of a decreet of ather of ther judicatories, that letters of horneing and all other executoriallis needfull may in forme as effeirs pass theron; and to that effect constituts our procurators, &c.

In witness whereof we the saids parties have subscryvit thir presents, wreitin be the said Mr. Robert Ross, with our hands at Tayne the twentie day of Julii Jm vic seventie sex years, before thir witnesses David McCulloch, Androw Ross younger, merchant of Tayne, Lachlan Ross, merchant there, and Thomas Ross servitor to me the said laird of Balnagowne: Sic subscribitur, Dauid Ross of Balnagoune. [&c.]

The arbitrators find that the "act of ryot or blood-"ing" done by the said laird of Balnagowne on the said Walter Ross was the result of a mistake and groundless jealousy, and that having regard to the welfare of both parties, they cannot excuse the said act: They oblige the said laird of Balnogowne to acknowledge the wrong and injury done by him to the said Walter Ross, and to be more friendly for the future: And they determine that if any of the kinsmen of the said laird offend or injure him, then the offender, real or supposed, shall be "conveened" before them, and the matter decided "by the sober advyce and counsell of us the said "friends;" And further they resolve that if any friend be found to have done a real injury to the laird of Balnagoune, and shall not subject himself to the regulation of the said laird, according to the advice of the said friends, then they shall concur with the laird in reducing the "refractorie" person to order; "and in case he continue "contumacious, that he be declared and held be the "laird of Balnagowne and his friends as a stranger." "And finally if it shall happin (as God forbid), that "contrar to the above wreitin course and determinatione "the said Laird of Balnagowne shall injure or wrong "any of his kinsmen in ather their persones or interests, "then and in that case, all the laird of Balnagownes "kinsmen shall concur to repair themselves as accords "in law off any injurie done be the laird of Balnagowne "to any of them. And further it's hereby judged and "determined that if the said laird of Balnagowne shall "not be advysed be his friends, as said is (as God forbid) ". . . . then the said freinds shall withdraw from "following or servcing him as kinsmen." The Decreet to be registered in the Books of Council and Session or other books competent, 21 July 1576.

17. Letter by John Earl of Sutherland and others to the Laird of Findrassie, calling a meeting at Forres about the Innovations of the Service Book.

Invernes, 26 April 1638.

Wery honerabill,—We have receiwit letters from the rest of the nobilitie, daitit at Edinburgh the 26 of March, desyring ws to meit heir at Invernes on the 25 of this moneth, which we have obeyit, to the effect that their commissioneris might informe ws trewlie of their proceidingis concerning the novationes of the Service Books and vthers abussis, so much threatting the overthrow of religion, lawis and liberties of this kingdome: Quhairin we find our selffis sufficientlie satisfeit, and that they have done nothing in all their proceidingis bot quhat is legall, to the glorie of God, the honour of our dreid soveragne the King our maister, which is and salbe warrandit be the lawis of the Kingdome. And following their good example, wee have communicat the samen with the whole gentrie, ministers and borrowis of the schyris of Caithnes, Sutherland, Invernes, Cromertie. We have find all kynd of people weill satisfeit, and for your better satisfactioune we have resolveit to be at Forres on Saturday nixt be aught hours the 28 of this instant, quhair ȝe will be pleased to meit ws, and to receive the lyk satisfactioun, or giff your oppinioun in a matter so neirlie concerneing ws all. So expecting to sie ȝou there as we sall ever remayne

Your affectionat good freinds.

To our werie honorable and luffing friend and cussing the Laird Finressie—thess

18. Archibald tenth Earl of Argyll to [the wife of Balnagowan.]

Edinburgh, January 18th.

Madame,—This goes by the Lord Lovatt who I have done my best endeavours to serve, in procecution of the severall recommendations I have had from Ballengown chiefly, and from his other freinds. I have hitherto had successe in what I attempted, and since matters are come so good a lenth, it were sad if now anie thing should miscarry. He resolves to stand his tryall to clear himself of these false calumnies laid to his charge. Non has hitherto appear'd so publickly for him as Ballengown, so that both for Lord Lovatts interest, and Ballengowns own honor, in my humble opinion it is highly reasonable Ballengown come hither with him, and own him at his tryall. He'el gain no new enemies by it, but shew his firmnesse to his freind in supporting him in so criticall a conjuncture. This I offer as my opinion, and must intreat of you to advyse him the same. I am, Madame,

Your most affecttionatte nephew, and humble servant,

Argyll.

19. Duncan Forbes of Culloden to Alexander Ross of Pitcalny.

Culloden, 25th October 1745.

Dear sir,—I never was more astonished, and but seldom more aflicted in my life, than I was when I heard of the madness of your son. I cannot conceive by what magick he has been prevailed on to forfeit utterly his own honour; in a signall manner to affront and dishonour me whom you made answerable for him; to risk a halter which, if he do not succeed, must be his doom, without any other tryall than that of a court martial, and to break the heart of an indulgent father as you are, which I am perswaded must be the case, unless he is reclaimed.—The villain who seduced him, profiting of his tender years and want of experience, tho I hope I am a Christian, I never will forgive, tho him I will, if he return quickly to his duty without committing further folly. But if, trusting to indulgence on account of our relation, he persist in the course in which I am told he is at present engaged, I think it is but fair to declare to you, in the most solemn manner, that the very relation and connection to which he may trust will determine me to pursue him, with the outmost rigour, to that end which his conduct will most undoubtedly deserve. And, when I have said this, I can take God to witness that he is the only person concerned in the present unhappy commotion, for whom my heart would not lead me to be a sollicitor, when things have that issue, which I believe they will soon have. In justice and friendship to you, and in hopes that he may repent before it is too late, I give you the trouble of this letter, and have desired your friend Mr. Baily to deliver it to you, not doubting that to save a son and to prevent my dishonour, you will do all that is in your power.

I am, dear sir, under great concern, Your most obedient and most humble servant,

Dun. Forbes.

[Address.] To Alexander Ross of Pitcalny, Esqr.

20. The same to the same.

Culloden, 7th November 1745.

Dear sir,—I need not tell you what concern Malcolm's folly has given me. I sent him repeated messages to come and see me, which produced no other effect but a letter from him promising to do so, if I would give it him under my hand that he should be at liberty to return to Perth, whither he was by his parole of honour bound to return. I, without lossing a moment, wrote him to that effect a letter in the strongest terms last Monday, which was that day delivered to him, but to no purpose. Either his own apprehension or evill councillors have got the better of him, and I confess my concern for him is very great. The only thing, however, like an ouvert act he has done, is the dispersing the men that were assembled in order to form the Independent company. Now if none of those should actually follow him, I should hope that discouragement will be so great that he will choice not to venture further than he has done, but rather to return to where he was confined than to make such a figure as in that case he must make should he follow the opinion of his present advisers. It is for this reason, dear Sir, that I give you the trouble of this line to entreat that you will lend your assistance to the other gentlemen of the name to whom I have wrote, not only to prevent the debauching any of the men, but also to prevent with them to form the Independent company now forming, that all the world may see that the unhappy youth's folly had no encouragement from you. I need to make use of little argument with you to enforce an advice so agreeable to what I daresay are your own inclinations, nor need I spend time in assuring you that I am with great simpathy as well as sincerity

Your most obedient and most humble servant,

Dun. Forbes.

WILLIAM FRASER.

Edinburgh, 32, Castle Street,
4 September 1876.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF ORMONDE, KILKENNY CASTLE.

MARQUIS OF ORMONDE.

My Report of last year on the previously unbound and unarranged letters and papers of this collection terminated at the end of the year 1664. I now submit, in continuation, a catalogue of letters and papers from 1665 to 1679, which, in number nearly 4,000, have since been examined and arranged in chronological order.

In 1665, the commencement of the period at present under notice, the Duke of Ormonde was Viceroy of Ireland, and continued in that office till superseded by Lord Robarts in 1669. In the latter year, Robarts was succeeded as Viceroy by Lord Berkeley. The office was conferred, in 1672, on Arthur, Earl of Essex, who retained it till 1677, when Ormonde was re-appointed Lord Lieutenant. The Duke also held the offices of Steward of the Royal Household and Chancellor of the University of Oxford.

The general subjects with which the letters and papers in the present portion of the collection are mainly connected, may be stated as follows:—Government of Ireland and progress of public affairs in that country as well as in England, Scotland, and abroad; proceedings in execution of the Acts of "Settlement" and "Explanation"; supervision of the political movements of Roman Catholics and Presbyterians in Ireland and Scotland; pursuit and suppression of outlawed Irish styled "Tories"; appointments to and applications for bishoprics and Church preferments, and for posts in the army and militia, with lists of commanders and subalterns; establishment of the Phœnix Park, Dublin; erection of forts and coast defences in Ireland; the education, under Bishop John Fell, at Christ Church, Oxford, of Lord Ossory's son, James Butler, subsequently second Duke of Ormonde; the affairs of the Isle of Man, and of its proprietor, William Stanley, Earl of Derby, to whom the Duke of Ormonde was guardian, and who married Lady Elizabeth Butler, eldest daughter of the Earl of Ossory; the career of the Duke's third son, Lord John Butler, Earl of Gowran, and the arrangements in connexion with his marriage to Lady Anne Chichester, heir of Arthur, Earl of Donegal; the controversies in connexion with Lord Ranelagh's undertaking or contract with the King for the management of the revenue of Ireland, and payment of the army and charges of the Crown there; attempt to establish woollen manufatture at Clonmel and Carrick; preparations for Parliament in Ireland; apprehensions of invasion of Ireland by the French, and of the combination of many of the natives with them; discovery of the alleged plot in 1678, and consequent proceedings for ejection and apprehension of Roman Catholic ecclesiastics and laymen against whom charges of disloyalty had been made by some of the then numerous body of informers or "witnesses."

Of the persons of importance whose letters are in the present portion of the collection, the following may be named:—

Peers: Albemarle, Anglesey, Arlington, Arran, Athenry, Athol, Barrymore, Blayney, Burlington, Carlisle, Castlehaven, Cavendish, Chesterfield, Clanricarde, Clare, Conway, Danby, Denbigh, Donegal, Drogheda, Dunbarton, Dungannon, Essex, Feversham, Fitzharding, Granard, Grandison, Huntingdon, Inchiquin, Kingston, Lanesborough, Lauderdale, Longford, Manchester, Massareene, Mayo, Midleton, Monmouth, Mount Alexander, Mountgarrett, Newburgh, Orrery, Ossory, Peterborough, Power and Curraghmore, Ranelagh, Rothes, St. Albans, Salisbury, Shannon, Strafford, Suffolk, Sunderland, Townshend. Sir J. Allen, Sir Jerome Alexander, Sir N. Armorer, Isaac Barrow, Bishop of St. Asaph's; Sir Daniel Bellingham, T. Bentick, Sir G. Blundell, Michael Boyle, Chancellor and Primate; Sir F. Brewster, Sir A. Brodrick, Sir Valentine Brown, Sir R. Bulstrode, Sir Robert Byron, Sir Thomas Chicheley, Countess of Clancarty, Sir T. Clarges, Col. Cooke, Sir Henry Coventry, Secretary of State; Sir J. Cuffe, Sir Paul Davys, Sir W. Davys, Sir E. Deringe, Sir James Dillon, Sir William Domville, Sir Maurice Eustace, Col. Thomas Fairfax, John Fell, Bishop of Oxford; Chancellor Finch, Col. Robert FitzGerald, Sir William Flower, Sir Arthur Forbes, Sir Robert Forth, Sir Stephen Fox, Hugh Gore, Bishop of Waterford and Lismore; Comte de Gramont, Sir Mathew Hale, Sir G. Hamilton, Sir Hans Hamilton, Friar Thomas Harold, Sir R. Howard, John Keatinge, Sir William King, Sir George Lane, Col. Richard Lawrence, Humphry Lloyd, Bishop of Bath and Wells; James Margetson, Archbishop of Armagh; Francis Marsh, Bishop of Limerick; Sir James Middleton, Robert Mossam, Bishop of Derry; Sir E. Ormsby, Thomas Otway, Bishop of Killala and Achonry; Sir Thomas Page, Admiral Sir William Penn, Sir Nicholas Plunket, Thomas Price, Archbishop of Cashel; Sir G. Rawdon, John Roan, Bishop of Killaloe; Sir R. Robinson, Sir James Shaen, Sir H. Slingesby, Sir H. Stanley, Sir Thomas Stanley, Sir Robert Southwell, Edward Synge, Bishop of Cork; Sir William Talbot, Sir J. Temple, Sir William Temple, Sir Henry Tichborne, Lady Thurles, Col. Edward Vernon, John Vesey, Archbishop of Tuam; Sir Robert Vyner, Peter Walsh, Sir R. Walsh, Sir Christopher Wandesforde, Sir James Ware, Sir P. Warwick, Edward Wetenhall, Bishop of Cloyne; Sir Thomas Wharton, Griffith Williams, Bishop of Ossory; Sir Cyril Wyche.

An interesting and hitherto almost unknown part of the Ormonde correspondence is that between the Duke and his sons, the Earls of Ossory and Arran.

Thomas, Earl of Ossory, Deputy Governor of Ireland for his father (1665 and 1667), was a Lord of the King's Bedchamber and member of the Privy Council in England, and sat in the House of Lords there as Lord Butler, of Moore Park. He distinguished himself in military and naval engagements,* was created Knight of the Garter, and sent as envoy from England to the Court of France. He was appointed successively Rear-Admiral of the Blue and of the Red, and for a time had command of the English fleet. He was especially confided in by the King's brother, James, Duke of York, and it was he who first proposed to William of Orange the alliance with the Duke's daughter Mary. William was much attached to the Earl of Ossory, whose wife, Emelia de Beverwaert, was related to the Orange family. In 1676, Ossory was appointed Chamberlain to the Queen of England, and, in the following year, joining the Prince of Orange, he commanded the English brigade in Holland, and acquired further renown by his military services and intrepidity, especially at the battle of Mons.

Ormonde's second son, Richard, Earl of Arran, was also a Knight of the Garter, and Colonel of the King's Regiment of Guards for Ireland. He served with distinction on land as well as on sea; and, in 1673, was created a peer of England under the title of Baron Butler of Weston, in the County of Huntingdon.

The nature of the correspondence between Ormonde and his sons will appear from the following:—Duke of Ormonde to Earl of Ossory.—"6 of Nou. [16]77. I "reciud yours of the 23 of the last yesterday, with "others of the 27 and 30 from other hands on the sub- "iect of the Prince of Orranges good successe in his "pretention to lady Mary. I wish hee may finde all "the satisfaction and aduantage hee proposes to him "self in it, and that wee who reioyce at it may con- "tinue and have cause so to doe, as I doe not dout but

* "My Lord of Ossory is, I thank God, in good health, though in the "last ingagement there were left upon his quarter deck but himselfe, "his page, and Capt. Narborough. Wee haue not yet an account of the "particular men lost in this fight, which has been very desperate and "bloody." Letter from Henry Gascoigne to George Mathew, from Clarendon House, 19th Aug. 1673.

" wee may and shall if all the consequent benefits that " may be gathred from it bee rightly and constantly " pursued. I am glad you went with my Lord Candish " to Westminster. I hope after all his mistakes and " misadventures hee will prove usefull to the Crowne " and his cuntry. I can not imagine that what the " Prince of Orange desires for you will bee so soone " taken into consideration, but that you will have time " enough to think it over and over and aduise with " your friends, for if there bee not a very great change " in councells and in inclinations since I left the " court ther is no appeareance that the king will so farr " owne a body of his subiects to bee in the states seruice " as to give any allownce to his domestick seruant to " comand them, and without some such authentick " allownce it may bee worth considering how fit it " may bee for such a one to undertake it; if a general " or particular peace bee made or an allyance betwixt " the king and the states shall bee entred into in order " to a generall peace, there can then bee no dificulty in " your aimeing at it, but I am affraid there will bee in " that case dificulty in your obtaining it, and perhaps " the king may not bee pleased you should before such " a peace or allyance affect it. I still wish you in that " post as you ought to bee in it, that is by the king's " command and with capitulations, conditions, and esta- " blishments made by the states with the Crowne as " heretofore; or at least that you have the king's com- " mand for it, and I dout things are not yet brought to " that posture. This is all I can say at this distonce on " the subiect."

Duke of Ormonde to Earl of Arran.—" Memorialls " for my sonn Arran to be made vse of as there shall " be occasion the 7th of January 1677[8].

" 1. The state of the Revenue is fully represented in seuerall dispatches in Mr. Secretary Couentry's hands as farre forth as is possible till the accounts of the Lord Ranelagh and his partners undertakeing shall be taken and the reasons are giuen why the takeing of those accounts is retarded.

" 2. By what is remitted to Mr. Secretary it will appeare that this Revenue must fall short not only of makeing those provisions fitt to be made in tymes of greatest peace and security but of answering all the partes of the establishment by reason of the overcharge fallen vpon it by the northern expedition. How farr then it will come short to make those preparations and provisions requisite when a forraigne warr is probable and the fomenting of a civill warr is to be expected may easyly be supposed.

" 3. Of what numbers the army consists I suppose is well knowne there, but if it should not readyly be remembred you are able to tell, and how few men are left of the worst in the army to doe duty in the most important garrissons. As to the officers I doe more doubt of their sufficiency then their loyalty, what order I haue giuen to be informed of the number of vnserviceable men in the army you know.

" 4. Of the state of the fortes, stores, and magazines the Master of the Ordnance is able to giue an account, haueing receiued one lately from hence, but it is soe bad that it is noe lesse shame then danger that it should be knowne, and concealed it cannot be.

" 5. I suppose the people of this kingdome may be best distinguished by the truly loyall and conforming. The Irish Roman Catholicks, and the non conformists who will be called Protestants. The two later are soe opposite in relligion and civill interest that they are in some sort such a ballance to each other that neither dare to rise against the government for feare it should make vse of the other to suppresse and chastize the first disturbers, and euen among the non conformists some distinction may reasonably be made betwixt the Scotch and English. The Scotch I take to be more heady, more united in opinion, more compact in habitation and neighborhood, more ready to abandon their wretched residences, and for all these reasons more apt to be inflamed and put into action by their vagabond teachers. The English are more sett upon trade and improvements, not soe unanimously bent one way, more scattered in the country, and will not soe easyly be persuaded to quit their much more comodious homes.

" The Irish, though I think more in number then all the rest, I doe not conceiue are soe much to be apprehended as the other party but in case of an invasion, or when any other party shall haue begun, but then it must be expected that many of them will joyne with the invaders or in the other case will endeavour to forme a third party, as they did when they found a breach in prospect betwixt the king and the rebellious parliament, signed Ormonde."

Ormonde to Arran.—15 Jan. 1677. " I have yet nothing " to add to what you carryed with you except the copy " of my letter by this post to Mr. Secretary Coventry, " which relates onely to the necessity of securing the " harbour of Kinsale. As I remember I told you it " was fitt you should visit my Lord Treasurer, and if " he shall give you the occasion I know no reason " why you may not freely impart to him anything that " relates to the affaires here. I am of opinion he will " receive you civilly, if he does you may accordingly be " the more frequent in going to him: he has much busi- " nesse and is not easy of accesse, so that unlesse you " shall have particular businesse with him I thinke the " dineing time will be the fittest time for you to go to " him. I hope you will not forgett the resolution you " went away with; there are few things that can hap- " pen that would trouble mee more then that you " should. I desire one thing more particularly, which " is, that whilst you are at London you would not go " to any of the eating houses or tavernes upon any " occasion; the king is not hard to be avoyded con- " sidering you have a house and family and so many " tables to go to there, and yet it would be great satis- " faction to mee. I send you the copy of the last lettre " I had from my Lord of Granard, that you may observe " that the lords of Scotland still continue to take no " notice of mee in all this affaire but give their direc- " tions to my lord of Granard as if he were under their " command. Whether it proceed from affected pride or " ignorance I will not determine, nor shall any omis- " sion of common civility in them in the least slacken " my industry if occasion call for it to serve ye king's " affaires in that kingdome. If I had been to have re- " ceived help from them for the king's service here I " should certainly once at least have taken notice to " them of their care and readiness to obey the king's " commands. I do not intend to make a quarrell of " ceremony of it, and therefore do not desire you should " take notice of it to any body, unlesse it be to my lord " Chamberlin and Mr. Secretary Coventry. I have " alwayes been unfortunate in my endeavors to serve " the most considerable of this nation: those I have " preserved have forgott it; those I could not thought " I might and impute their ruine to mee—nay even " those I have advised and put into the way of doing " themselves good, and through sloth or ignorance " have neglected to pursue their interest, impute the " disappointment of their pretentions, to mee, as if I " were oblidged not onely to direct and favor them but " become their sollicitor and agent. A fresh instance " of this is my Lord of Carlingford, who with his " friends I heare is dissatisfyed with mee and you that " he succeeds not to his father's pention, and that it " is given to Sir James Cuffe and Mr. Carr. The case " as I am concerned in it is thus: My lord of Carling- " ford you know came hither long before his father at " his first visit to mee after I had inquired of his " father's condition as to his health and that he had " told mee there was little hope of his recovery. I " told him I beleeved he would not be left in such a " state but that the continuance of his father's pention " to him would in some measure accommodate him, " and advised him to procure the reversion of it whilst " his father was alive, or to gett his father to surrender " his patent and take out a new one for both their lives. " Hee thanked mee but never spoke sillable more of it " to mee since, nor it seemes employed any body in " England to obtaine this for him, which certainely an " easy mediation would have gotten him; and now I " am charged with his disappointment, with haveing " recommended Sir James Cuffe and Carr, and in effect " with breakeing my word, for they have the gift of " laying that causelessly to my charge, takeing an " advice for a promise. It may not be amiss that you " say this or transcribe this part of my lettre to the " king and duke, especially if you heare any think of " it. They say they will yet retreive the thing and " gett Cuffe and Carr struck out of the establishment " and my lord Carlingford put in. I would be glad of " any good to that lord, for I think him a very worthy " gentleman, but justice and the king's honour I " consider more."

Ormonde to Arran.—" 24 Jan. 1677. I have yours of " the 15, giveing an account of your safe arrivall, and " your disposing of the dispatches and letters you " carryed with you. I think you are not to presse for " more knowledge in affaires then you find there is a " disposition to impart them to you, yet it will be fitt " you make your court assiduously not in the drawing " room onely when every body is there, but at the " king's and duke's riseing, which besides that it is a

" duty (especially in an officer and person of your " station in such a time), opportunityes may happen, " and discourses set on foot, wherein you may properly " beare a part or usefully take notice of them, and if " you can introduce your selfe (as I think you may " very easily) at places and hours of more retirement, " it may be of advantage: but remember sloth and too " nice a modesty can be of no use. Mr. Secretary in " his lettre of ye 12 inst. gave me a large account of " affaires as they then stood there, what he writt it will " not be hard for you to collect from the returne I have " made, which is onely to be imparted to my Lord " Chamberlain, who is of ye Committee of forraigne " affaires, and was, I suppose, present when Mr. Secre- " tary was ordered to write to mee. I gave your brother " [Ossory] the best advice and ye most pertinent caution " I could, but I feare his hast to be in action will trans- " port him beyond his prudence. I am sorry my Lord " Chamberlain contested to warmely and unsuccessfully " for the rights of his place in a particular depending " on a custome onely connived at, and which therefore " may be abolished whenever the king shall please to " reduce his office and mine to be of lesse value then " will possibly support the dignity of them. I know " not wherein the king instanced me, or to what end; " if it was that he had disposed of any places usually " given by mee and my predecessors, I remember " none without my owne consent first given to ye pre- " tender, as to Sir Winston Churchill. It is true in " my lord of Buckingham's height of favour I think an " answer was put in by him to ye Board of Greencloth " out of his turne for a turne the Avenor had, and then " the Master of ye horse makes the Avenor. But this " is not to take my right quite from mee, but to suspend " my makeing use of it, which differences the case " from that of my Lord Chamberlain, who by this " determination it seemes looses for ever the makeing " of a groom porter. I have had Mas Douglas a weeke " with me, but he is still a greater mistery to mee. " The man certainely knowes very much, but whither " he came on purpose to declare his knowledge and od " the king service, as he seemes to pretend, and as the " little care he tooke to conceale himselfe gives some " probability to, I know not. If what he sayes of 445 " and 342 be true 726 . 91 . 33 . 425 . 93 . 58 . 384 . 54 . 700 . " 720 but it seemes 732 . 573 . 526 . 32 . 643 . 214 . 55 . 440. " This is a tryall whether you are skilfull in decypher- " ing, els it might have been written in plaine letters. " I desire you would in my name make a visit to Mrs. " Gwyn and assure her of my readines to serve her."

Arran to Ormonde. — " London, 5th March $167\frac{7}{8}$. " I had last night yours of the 26th and 27th of last " month, and will now begin to take pains to write with " fewer blotts, but for the ill sence, which I suppose is " your meaning by ill-written letter, I can't promis to " mend, haueing taken as much care of that in my lettei " of the 19 as the time would permitt. The explana- " tion I make about Cap. Trelany's busness is, in short, " that my Lord Blessington receaved three months' pay " of the arrears due to Cap. Trelany, which by contract " his Lordship ought not to haue done. I was the more " careless in that matter because Mr. Trelany tould mee " his agent would inform your secretary particularly " how the busness stood.

" I heard of the death of Maior Broughton from noe " body but your self, and am not yett informed how all " the vacancys are filled vp; but I hope you have not " forgott my Lord Charlemont's sone. If hee bee pro- " vided for before Bromwich dy's, I think there is one " Mr. Dingley, who treyles a pike in my company, will " very well deserve his colours. I am very glad you " haue favored Major Feilding with Broughton's im- " ployment, and am the more so that itt was done in my " absence, for I confess notwithstanding my great byas " of affection for him, if I had been vpon the place I " should haue apeared for Hungerford, especially since " the account I gaue you of what hee said to mee. I " am also much against Livetenants succeeding Captains " in that regiment, at least against makeing a president " of itt.

" I show'd my Lord Tresurer yesterday your letter " of the 23 last month, and gaue him the proclamation " and proposalls about wool, which he perused before " mee, and has kept them in order to advise with his " officers vpon them, and has promissed an answer " within a little while. Hee is of oppinnion that when " the matter is agreed upon itt ought to bee brought " before the house of commons; but itt is beleived the " bill now passing, prohibiting all french comodeties, " will in a great measure doe the work you desire, for " when wee can haue nothing in truck for our wool, wee " shall be forced to work itt att home; besides there is " a clause in the bill that every body shall wear cloth " or a garment made of wool for 5 months in the year.

" This afternoon I waited vpon my Lord Tresurer att " his house and gaue him your letter of the 27th, which " hee desired mee to leaue with him and to return you " his thanks for the favour you have done him in itt, " which hee will doe himself by letter either this night " or next post. His Lordship, I beleive, intends to show " your letter to the King. Hee vsed me very civilly, " and has invited mee to come often to his house. Hee " seems to wonder very much att this asperssion, for " hee tould mee if he had not singly oposed Mr. Rider " hee had gott 10 a year abated vpon a contrived meeting " with his Majesty at Will Chivars his [sic].

" This night goes away your authorety for your " proceedings in the parlement, as full of all the par- " ticulars you sent over as could bee procured. I have " not had a sight of the paper, and therefore can make " noe observations; all I know is from My Lord Rane- " lagh, whoe intends to goe for Irelande next month, " in order to bee at the meeting of parlement.

" My Lord Burlington desired mee to put you in " minde to send a company again to his town of " Youghall, now the party is come out of the north.

" You sent mee with your last letters two inclosed " for the duke, but not mentioning any thing of them or " the matter they contayned, I was afraid you had " mistaken, and that one of them might bee for the " King; but I delivered them both this morning to " his Royall H., for whom itt seems they were both " designed.

" I suppose itt will bee the middle of May before " the parlement can meet, therefore I designn to " goe towards Ireland some time next month, for itt " would bee to soon to travail with a wife and children " before that time, especially with a wife who had as " live goe to Jemaica as Ireland.

" The Duke declared yesterday that by the first of " May hee would be ready to goe with our army into " Flandrs, and after hee is gone one makes but an ill " figure here.

" Wee had this afternoon att the Committee of " Privileges many long and learned speeches upon the " manner of trying my Lord Pembrock for the killing " one Mr. Cary; itt was agreed that report should be " made to the house, that dureing the sitting of Parle- " ment a peer is to bee tryed by the whole house, and " the king is to apoint a high steward. About 10 days " hence matters will be ready for his tryall.

" The king has not yett sighned my letter for the re- " version, but I beleive hee will this night. I doe not " intend to enter itt att the signett ofice vntell I am " just goeing away."

1677–8. Ormonde to Arran.—" Dub[lin], 9 March. Be- " fore mine of the 7 could get out of the harbour yours " of the 2d was brought mee owneing the receiveing " both mine of the 23 of the last. The proposition " touching wool is like to come too late for the house " of commons, a bill for that affaire haueing proceeded " farr there, so that if any thing I sent shall prove " materiall it must be offered at a Comee of the Lords " when the bill shall be brought thither. When any " occasion shall be fittly offered, I wish you would aske " the king why he may not think it fitt to send one or " more regts of Scotch and Irish out of this kingdome, " which might as well be spared here as easily raysed " if men of their owne nation might haue the command " of them.

" It is and always shall be my rule to prefer men " who attend their charge and do their duty before " those that do not whatever pretence they may haue " to graduall succession, which is the case betwixt " Feilding and Hungerford. Chetwyn I think neuer saw " his company since he bought it, yet if he come in any " reasonable time, that is, before Easter, his absence " till then shall not hurt him. I doubt Sir Cyrrill " Wych will not be pleased with the returne I made to " him upon his pretension. I believe him a very honest " gentleman, and a modest man, but his pressing mee " so hard for the 500*l.* a yeare is no argument of it, " but a strong one that he loves the summe."

1678. Ormonde to Arran.—" Dub[lin], 4 June. You " will by this bearer, Barrington, receiue this dispatch, " which I was not willing to venture by the post; not " that I am affraid of owning it anywhere, but because " I doe not know how it may suit with the king's desire " or service that I should. If what wee heere out of " Scotland be true, that kingdome is not in the posture " I wish it, and I am much afraid the king will not " find that all that pretend zeale to his service there

" will abide a day of tryall; however I am confident a " good party of sure men in the north of Ireland will " haue no ill effect in Scotland, and that cannot be well " spared from hence without we haue recruits, for " Torys begin to grow bold and numerous, and may in " a short tyme, if they are lett alone, arriue at the " dignity of rebells, and I am assured many familys " and some preachers come dayly out of Scotland, and " you may be sure they are not the well-affected. What " these and their numerous bretheren already planted " heere may doe when the flower of the army is trans- " ported into Scotland may well be apprehended, and " possibly the Councell of Scotland may looke againe " for the same countenance from hence which they cald " for the last yeere. This is not the only argument for " his Majesties re-inforceing his army heere. The rest, " as my Lord Chaunsellor say'd in his speech, is fitter " for contemplation then discourse. I would haue you " to take a fitt tyme to beg an audience of his Majestie, " and to shew him my other letter and the proposition " for recruits, and then attend his pleasure for what he " will command to be returned."

1678. Ormonde to Arran.—" Dub[lin], 4 of June. " Our Primate has from great health fallen into the " jaundis and labour'd under it for some dayes, and " I am now told he falls into frequent fainting fitts, " insocmuch that his frends are in greate feare for him. " It is in many respects of greate importance to his " Majestie to haue in that place a man of activity and " courage, which haue not been quallifications soe " eminent in the present primate as his gentlenesse " and piety. If his Majestie would make it his owne " choice to send the bishopp of Rocester to vs, I think " he would fill the place of Archbishopp of Dublin and " Chauncelleur if the present Archbishopp would change " both for the Primacy, and I think he should be " offer'd his choice. If this cannot be effected, the " next best choice his Majestie can make in this king- " dome is of the Archbishopp of Tuam, for whome I " will write to Mr. Secretary, and desire this proposi- " tion may not be taken notice of. If his Majestie " approve of the thing, he will give you leaue to moove " it to the bishopp of Rochester as from himselfe, or " imploy any other he thinks fitter, but lett me know " what his Majesties pleasure is, in case the Primate " should dye."

Ormonde to Arran.—" Dublin, 4 June 1678. Vpon " the best information I haue of the state of affaires " abroad and at home, and vpon the best judgement I " can make of them, I conclude that if his Majestie " shall disband his army in England or any parte of it, " it will be for his service to inforce this heere.

" It is not my part, considering the distance I am " at, to enter vpon a particular enumeration of the " advantages that may accrue to the king and all his " dominions and good subjects by haueing as con- " siderable army heere as can be maintain'd; nor doe I " think long discourses on the subject very proper or " seasonable. But I think it is my duty to lett his " Majestie know that it will exceedingly contribute to " the peace and happynesse of Ireland, and to the " safety of the Protestant English Interest, and I am " hopefull be able to provide for the subsistence of such " recruits as shall be sent ouer, lett them come as soone " as his Majestie pleases. I am sure all my industry, " credit, and fortune shall be imployed towards it.

" I chuse to acquaint his Majestie with my con- " ceptions this way by you rather then by a formall " letter to Mr. Secretary, that it may be in his Majestie's " choice to lett the proposition fall, or to consult who " he pleases in it, as the conjuncture shall direct to " either, and I haue put my opinion of the manner of " re-inforcing this army in a paper by it selfe, that if " his Majestie shall soe think fitt the whole matter may " appear to be the result of his owne thoughts and not " of mine."

Arran to Ormonde.—" London, 15 June [16]78. I " rather chuse to write another letter of the same date " then intermix any other business with what I haue in " command from his Majesty or by his orders to say to " you, least itt may hereafter bee thought necessary to " produce my letter. Att the same time that I atended " the king about your proposall I spoke to him con- " cerning that of the vacancy now like to hapen, and his " Majesty gave mee leave to sound the B. of R., but " before I did, I acquainted his R. H. with itt, who " aproved of itt, and withall said hee would speak to " him himself about itt; but the bishop excuses himself " vpon the account of his bodely infermety, haveing " been lately very sick, and being att present indis- " posed. Hee tould mee hee had formerly some discourse " with you vpon this subject, and ownes himself in- " finitely obliged to you for the favour you desighned " him, and with a great deal of a speaker of the house " of comons, modestly protested hee was not fitt for soe " great a post, and desired mee to tell you (though I " did not own I had any thing in charge from you) that " you might find a thousand persons properer then hee " for soe great a charge, soe that you must pitch vpon " some other, though the king was of oppinnion hee " would have accepted of itt when I said itt was worth " over 4000*li* per an., for hee beleived most bishops " would think that gain is great godlyness. I dont " dout but whom ever you please to recomend will " have the place if the other should dye.

" Mr. Stanop is lately come to town, and hee assures " mee that all the reports concerning my Lord of " Chesterfield's great disquiet of minde are false, and " that altho hee is very much troubled yett for the loss " of his lady, hee goes abroad, and intends to come to " London att Michaelmas, but att best I am affraid " that way of liveing will doe noe small preiudice to " his daughter, who has noebody to converse with but " his young children.

" I was desired by an ould freind and acquaintance " of yours to know of you whether you would part with " your imployment here; his proposall is to give you " soe much a year (and good land securety) as you shall " agree vpon. I would not refuse the giveing you his " proposall, but I shall bee farr from incourageing or " giveing you my advice that you should part with " itt in this coniuncture.

" My Lord Carbery desired mee to write in his " favour that hee may have his creation mony payd " him.

" My brother beeing lately come over, I show'd him " your letters, and acquainted him with the resolutions " vpon them, and would have gone along with him to " the Duke, but hee left itt to mee."

Arran to Ormonde.—" London, 15th June 1678. On " tewsday night last Mr. Barrington brought mee your " dispatch, in which I had four letters from you, all " dated the 4th of this month: the next morning I " waited vpon his Maiestey with the proposall for re- " inforceing the Army of Irelande, and show'd him your " two letters which had relation to itt, with which his " Maiesty was exceedingly well satisfied, and comanded " mee to carry them to the Duke, which I imediatly " did, and his Royall Highnes did also very much " aprove of the desighn, and the whole matter being " left to him hee comanded mee to attend this day for " an answer, which hee gave mee this morning att the " house in presence of my Lord Treasurer; hee com- " anded mee to tell you that 20 companys shall bee very " soon sent over, and that you need take noe farther " care in the matter, for they shall be transported and " sent to the places you mention, with their officers, " who will be contented to bee without pay for the " time you mention, and hee has promissed mee to " chuse such officers whose dependence here shall not " make them desire often lycence to bee absent from " their comands. His H. has your proposalls in his " hands, and when the men are ready to move you shall " have timely notice, that you may dispose them " into such garisons as you shall think fittest for the " worke you desighn them, and for the recruites you " will bee furnished, as you desire, with 500 men of " the best that shall bee disbanded, which may bee " conducted by some of the officers that comand the " other companys, and save the trouble of sending an " officer out of Irelande to comand them. This is the " sum of what I have in charge, from his Maiesty, by " R. H."

Ormonde to Arran.—" Dub[lin], 22 of June [16]78. As " long as the mater of sending men to reinforce the army " here shall bee in agitation, it is lyke you will recieve " two letters a post from mee on the same subject. My " other letter of this date you will soone finde is to bee " offered to his Majestie, the Duke, and my Lord Trea- " surer. If it shall bee looked vpon as a retractation, " because I seeme to add conditions not contained in my " first proposition, it will easily occur to you to answer " that though they were not exprest they must neces- " sarily haue bin suposed, ffor nothing can be expected " from a parlement that shall not bee satisfid that they " shall bee safe in their propertys, incouraged to im- " proue, and in some measure ashured that what " they give is lyke to bee spent amongst them, and " to keepe them in peace; but if any great sum bee " charged on the overplus after the payment of Bridges " it will exceedingly disharten and discompose all " heare, and therefore, though it bee fit to know the

" worst, yet I am affrayd to ask how it stands, or to " presse to know it, haueing once written to Mr. Secretary Coventry about it, and had no answer."

Arran to Ormonde.—" London, 29th June [16]78. I had " yesterday your two letters of the 22 instant, but the " King and the Duke were gone to Windsor, and this day " they had a revew vpon Hounslo heath of a great part " of the new raised men. They made vp, with two squarons and two batallions of the gards, about 10,000 men; " they were all very well clad, and most of them very " promissing men; the Dragoons and grenadiers were " indiferently hors (oblit.) rest of the horsemen were very " well mounted. The King will come back soe late " that I shall not have an oportunity to show him your " letter this night, but on Monday att the house I " beleive I may finde the Duke, his Majesty, and " Lord Treasurer together, and that will bee, in my " opinnion, the properest time to show him your letter, " and I don't dout but I shall give you a satisfactory " answer, for I ventured, knowing how the revennue is " charged allready, to inform his Majesty, before I receaved these letters, that I beleived you depended " vpon what the Parlement would give and the overplus mony when Bridges his contract is satisfied, for " the subsistance of the forces you desired should bee " sent over, and tould the same thing to his H. R. I " never knew before that anything was charged vpon " the overplus found, and I confess I went very much " alarmed imediately to the Secretarys to know how that " matter stood, but hee was gone to his lodge, for I " took itt for granted by some letters I had formerly " from you that the King had granted that found " intirely for this or the like vse. The army is not to " bee disbanded here att soonest vntell the latter end " of next month, as you will finde by the proceedings " of Parlement, soe that your charge will not come soe " soon vpon you as you expected, and if the news now " rife in town bee true you are not like to have any of " these forces, for they say a warr with france is not " to bee doubted of."

Ossory to Ormonde.—Nou. 16th [16]78. I had occasion this morning to speake to the king concerning " my lord Chancellor of Ireland. I finde he intends " him to be translated to the dioces of Armagh; he " spoke very fauuourably of him, but said he was so " taken up with the important affaires of Parliament " that he had not time to thinke of any thinge elswhere. I minded him of a report that in France " many shipps were fitted out, and that it is also said " that ten thousand foot were drawing towards the sea " coasts ouer against us; that the time of the yeare " was too late for any expedition in fauuour of Sweden; " that Mons. de Belfond, that in the yeare 66 was intended for a diversion to be made upon Ireland, was " now in fauuour; and that, as I had bin informed, the " French Ambassador has given out that his master " would see the Irish have the benefit of the peace the " Catholicks made with you. Upon these apprehensions " of myn I begged the king to finde out meanes to know " the truth as to matter of fact of these notions in " France, and afterwards, as he shall see cause, to provide for the security of Ireland. I spoke upon the " subiect of calling a Parliament, and shewed booth the " king and duke that part of your letter which mentions it, but they seeme apprehensive of hauing one " at the time this shall be sitting. Sir Thomas Chichly " says you promised him a troope. Mr. Brabson, who, " I ame informed, has captains pay till he have one, " does also pleade for this vacancy. The king, I ame " told, will leave to you the decision. Every post I " beleeve I shall write to you, though I have very littell " time, by waiting on the house and queen."

Ossory to Ormonde.—" Whitehall, Nov. 28, [16]78. " Upon the orders given for putting all the Roman " Catholicks out of the army, which the Duke of " Monmouth told the house he had performed, I " desired the king that you might have his pleasure " signified so that regiment of Macartys wherin were " many papist officers and souldiers. I spoke to the " duke and Chancellor, Duke of Monmouth, and others " so plainely that you might not be inconvenienced by " their giving no orders, that I ame assured they will, " at the Cabinet Councell tomorrow, take that affaire " to their consideration; the giving on account of the " Irish having of armes at present, and what has formerly " be don on this occasion, will be very requisite. I remember when I was commanded by you to take away " all their gunns; and I thinke none could travell with " or haue any without speciall leave of the chief gouuernor. I leave it to your consideration whether " you should renew any such order on this occasion, " but begg you would transmitt to me what has bin " don, and what is the present methode of the time."

Ossory to Duchess of Ormonde.—" Nouember 30th [16]78. I have bin in actions of importance, but have " not bin more troubled during their being in suspense " then I was all yesterday while wee were debating " whether the poore queen should be so unfortunate as " to have booth houses address to the king that he would " remooue her upon Oteses accusing her to haue undertaken the poisoning of him. At lenght we carried it " in the negative, eight only hauing voted for concurring with the Commons: the king carried himself " most worthily, shewing a detestation of what some " thought might be acceptable to him. On Thursday, " when her Maiesty was in publick, she shewed not " the least emotion; but yesterday, when she was in " private, she ceased not weeping, bewailing her condition, and saying how much the Duke's misfortunes " were short of hers, his sufferings being upon an " honourable score, but here upon what was the most " infamous. I was the first that brought her the good " news of our dissenting with the Commons, which you " may imagine was no small consolation, she being all " day uncertain whether Whitehall, Somersett House, " or perhaps a restraint might not haue bin her destiny. " It fell in my way to have bin a littell servicable to " her by carrying Otes to Somerset House, my lord of " Bridgewater being commanded with me by the king, " where in matter of fact as to the house, wee found " him in a manifest lye, which will appeare under our " hands, the relation wee made being in the Par: " house, a coppy of which, last post, I sent to my " father. I have not bin negligent in my endeauours " upon this occasion, and truly the queen seemes satisfied " with them, and is so gracious as to consider more " my zeale then my weake performances. All her " Roman Catholick seruants are to leaue her this day, " except a few wimen excepted in the Act; it is a " hardship for her to quitt those who haue so long " serued her, and so faithfully and discreetly. Sir " Robert Southwell, who is a worthy and a usefull " friend to my father, will give him an account of " publick affaires; by him it will appeare that I forgett " not things tending to his service. I pray God send " us better times then what wee deserve, or reasonably " are to expect; and give to my father and you all " happines. Be pleased to tell him that a littell time " since Mr. Hide informed me that the ratifications of " the peace were come from Spain."

Ormonde to Ossory.—" Dub[lin] 23 Apr. 1679. I received yours of the 15 late last night, and am just " now to celebrate the day. It is not hard to guesse by " whom the inquiry concerning the grant supposed to " be for the benefitt of Fitzpatrick, is sett on, and since " things of that nature are come in play, possibly I may " be able to informe of some much less justifyable then " that in question. About a weeke hence I may be " better instructed, and I suppose that will be time " enough if the Parl[t] proceeds upon those discoueryes " and matters of greater consequence they haue taken " in hand. It is no lesse easy to guesse whence the " clamor ag[t] my Lord Primate proceeds. I am confident " upon a fair hearing, which I do not doubt but he will " haue, hee will be found to haue administred justice " very ably and uncorruptly.

" I doubt it is not knowne or remembred there that " in the time of my Lord Berkelyes gouernment there " issued a proclamation to lett all papists at one blow " into Corporations, and if Mr. Bridgeman be examined " hee is able to tell at whose sollicitation the letter commanding such a proclamation was procured. It may " concerne my Lord Chamberlain to looke into this " matter if he was then Secretary. Upon this occasion " the glutt of papists gott into townes and cittyes " contrary, I think, to the intent of the Act of Parl[t], " which leaues a power in the Cheife Gou[r] and Councell " to admitt some, which has but sparingly been exercised. " For my townes, first, there is none of them a sea " towne, and what euer they are thus 9 parts of tenn of " the papists that inhabite them are gott in. Wee now " here upon looking into this matter before the votes " of the Lords came to us, and wee have received from " most townes an account of the popish inhabitants, " and from some the number of papists the desire should " remaine amongst them, as some principall traders and " usefull artificers. From Limerick, where my Lord of " Orrery is Gou[r] and in a great part proprietor, wee " haue yet no return, which hee excuses upon the death of " the Mayor, who was one of those who were to make " the inquiry and report; and if it be safe to say so, it is " apparent that trade cannot be carried on in townes

" nor husbandry in the country without some popish " merchants and very many popish tenants, unlesse a " large plantation of English of all sorts could be sent " us, for which wee would be very glad to make a double " returne of Irish papists. The matter of the fast and " humiliation was not unthought of here, but the ap- " pointing of it and the manner of solemnization and " peculiar prerogatives of the king which wee cannot " find imparted to a cheife Gou^r, but I haue sent to " know his Ma^ties pleasure about it, and expect a returne " very speedily.

" This may giue you some light what to answer to " these things, and to avoyd repetition it may be fitt to " giue copyes or extracts of it to our friends. My Lord " Massereen tells mee he does mee justice upon all " occasions; you shall do well to incourage him by " civility and familiarity."

Ormonde to Ossory.—"Dub[lin], 11 May [16]79. I haue " yours of the 3 and 6, and in one of the former date " from my Lord Longford I had the queries relating to " my vaste gettings, small estate before the rebellion " and miscarriages, which it was not hard to find, for " they are at least of tenn years standing, and many of " them composed by Peter Talbot, titular Archbishop " of Dublin, now prisoner in this Castle. So that who- " euer brought them is not to value himselfe vpon the " service. It were of vse to haue any new objections, " if there are any such, really fram'd, as I much suspect " there are not, unlesse hee that brought the Queries " composes them himselfe and would haue them passe " for the worke of some dangerous ingineere. I wish " he may be prest to produce them, yet not so as that " hee should doubt he is suspected, for it is safer as the " world goes to anger twenty quiet honest men then " one busy knave that cares not what he says or sweares. " I haue such computations as you desire, but I am not " of opinion they should be exposed in answer to lybells " or to stop mouths, because it will not do the worke, " but draw on replyes and rejoinders fruitlesse and " endlesse."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"May 13th [16]79. Last night I " receued yovr letters of the 3^d and 6^th of this month; " the first related to the affaire* of my lord Marques of " winchester, of which I can not yet give you an account, " my intention being to deale cautiously and with " aduice, for seuerall reasons. To yovr last, relating to " discourses of accusations, I ame confident my lord of " Shafsbury does all he can, and imployes Thornhill " and one Monsil that was casheered in Ireland. St. " Leger this morning told me of libellovs queres in " the hand of the former, and will endeavovr to gett " me a sight of them. I will vse my endeavours to " gett such a discouery of this fellows practice as to " haue him punished, which consequently may concern " others also. I intend to deliuer Mr. Secretary your " letter, and to coniure him neither to make vse of it or " to lett it be knowen. My lord of Longford hauing " communicated to him the scope of that letter vpon " occasion of a letter my Lord Chancellor writ about him- " self in that concern, I thought he might suspect our " confidence in him if wee should conceale our inten- " tions, though ovr purpose be changed, as will appeare, " I beleeue, reasonable vnto you, by Sir Robert South- " wells last letter writ by my Lord Chamberlines and " my aduice. I did buy a picture for you of Mr. van hill " who printed the paper concerning your transactions " since the plott, I tooke that occasion to gratify him " rather then giue him dry mony; fifty ginnys I gaue " him. They say it is touched by Vandick; the history is " King Solomon, and I will send it by the first opper- " tunity."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"Windsor, Sept. 6th [16]79. " I shall not faile to give you an account of my spanish " iourny. I am not so engaged nor at all resolued to " make it, if I finde not appointments boath certain and " sufficient. My lord of Essex did assure me of his " assistance in this matter. I ame very glad that the late " addresses of the Lords are now vnder your considera- " tion; to give them satisfaction will conduce much to " the king's service as well as your own aduantage. The " affaire of young Aylmer will certainly be made use of " boath to your own and my preiudice, therfore all " dilligence ought to be vsed to bring him hither and " afterwards to ovr religion. Whateuer my lord of " Shaftsbery may say to Sir Richard Stephens, I ame " of opinion that, according to the course he steeres, he " will endeavour to remooue from posts of power all " persons of your principles; however, I thinke it prudent " to receve ciuily any expressions or overtures from " him. I haue formerly sent you the detail of the pay " boath of guards and army of the Prince of Orange; if " you please I shall again transmitt it. I haue had it " from Sir Alexander Colear, who I am sure would not " giue me an imperfect account. Since troopers must " be cloathed, I know no reason why they should not " be contented to haue them of the same sort and colour, " so that in prouiding them they be not abvsd by their " officers. The care you take, and the methode, for hauing " the foot well trained, will be of infinite vse. I doe " easily comprehend the difference and disaduantage " of companies being scattered and not regimented. " I wish some inconsiderable pay in time of peace, if a " Par[liament] in Ireland sitts and giues supplyes, may " be settled vpon field officers, and that regiments might " at some time of the yeare be drawne together, other- " wise you will finde a greate defect wheneuer they " forme a batallion. You will pardon me if vpon this " occasion I reminde you of a company for my self, it " being with out example that any in my station should " be without one. Last post I gaue you an account of the " Duke's arivall; I am informed that generally his " comming is well taken. Whether he returns or re- " mayns here is not as yet knowen; I beleeue you will " howeuer thinke it necessary to complement him vpon " this occasion. Mr. Fitspatrick that formerly was boye " to my Lord of Oxford and since a Captain of foote, " desired me to minde you of some hopes giuen him, " that you would make him Lt. to the guard that tom " Farfax commands."

Ormonde to Ossory.—"Dub[lin], 4 Oct^r [16]79. On " the approach of euery session of Parl^t I haue con- " stantly been alarumd with impeachments, such as " you mention in yours of the 23 of the last, and I " have still been promised to know the authors and the " articles, but could neuer gett any but some collection " of old things taken out of prints or from letters out " of Ireland, or suggested by such fellowes as Sir H. " Ingolsby or one Mansell. If your man of quality " will furnish you with something more solid and " authentick hee will lay a great obligation upon mee. " Wee heare out of Munster that my Lord of Orrery is " past all hope of recouery, but hee has been often sayd " to be so, and yet recouered well enough to trouble all " about him, and the Gouernment to boot. If your " spanish journey be capable of delay I should think it " reasonable you should not leaue England till you see " what state the next session of Parlament [oblit]. If " it shall please God to dispose the Parl^t to moderation " and cooperation with the king, when you see them in " that track, you may safely absent yourselfe for such " a time, but I think the strongest reasons till then are " against it. I am now in my designe settled here for " all the winter, and if it were not a crime I would say " there is no danger of any disturbance here, unlesse " they haue examples from the other kingdomes, and " euen then I think I am able to giue as much trouble " as I shall receive. God keep vs from the tryall."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"Newmarkett, Oct. 6th [16]79. " The king leaves the affaire of the chusing bishops to " you in case the diosis of Kilkenny become voide. If " you haue not fixed vpon a person already, I presume " to recomend Doctor Young, who was my chaplain in " flanders; he is an Oxeford man, eminent for preaching " and for a good life. I beleeve you would receve all

* This refers to a negociation with the Marquis of Winchester as to an arrangement with Ormonde for the post of Lord Steward held by the latter. On the value of that post Sir William Boreman writes as follows to Ormonde, from Whitehall, on 3rd of January 1679:—

" May it please your Grace, to call to remembrance that about 7 or 8 " yeares since you were pleased to command mee to give you a noate of " the profitts and perquisites belonging to the Lord Steward's place, " in the reignes of King James and King Charles the first, which " amounted to 3,100*li.*, besides the disposeall of places, as by the in- " closed paper it doth appeare. In the beginning of this king's reigne " it amounted not to halfe soe much, and nowe (by vertue of this newe " retrenchment) it is dwindled to less then a quarter part, beeing reduct " to 600*li.* per anum, vizt., 100*li.* wages and 500*li.* board wages. And the " dayly paynes and constant attendance of the 2 cla. of the Greencloth " and the 2 cla. comptrollers are valued, or rather undervalued, at 200*li.* " a yeare a peice."

" The Lord Steward of His Maj^ties most Honor^ble Houshold had a hundred pound wages, and a " Dyett served in kind consisting of 16 Dishes of " meate a meale, with a proportionable allowance " of Bread, Beere, and Wyne, which after the rate " of the markett price came yearly to the summe " of - - - - - - -	2,648	06	00
" The Wood, Coales and Lights, Spices, Butter, and " Eggs, Linnen, and all other necessaries incident " to the dressing and serving upp of the said " Dyett, together with the Lord Steward's double " messes and commands, did comunibus annis " amount to the yearly summe of - - -	0,351	14	00
Sm. totall - -	3,100	00	00

" And for the pleasuring of his friends and preferrment of his servant. " hee had twice as many places to dispose off then the present Lord " Steward hath, and each of those places were almost twice the values"

" manner of satisfaction in him boath as to the publick " and your own content: when I know your pleasure I " shall accordingly gouvern myself. I ame iust taking " coach for Evston, where I wish the hawkes out of " Ireland were come."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"Whitehal, Dec. 6th [16]79. " I performed a friendship to Sir Robert Southwell the " other day, much against booth my inclinations and " interest, he has or [sic] a long time desired to part " with bis place of Clerke of the Covncell, and chose me " to speake to the king for leaue to part with it, which " he agreed vnto, in favour of one Mr. Winn, who you " may have often seen with Mr. Seymor, and was a " member of the two last Parliaments, where they say " he behaued himself very dutifully; vpon the king's " declared intentions of dispossessing the Duke of Mon- " moth of all his places, and hearing of many pre- " tenders, I spoke so early in behalfe of my lord of " Chesterfield, and his Maiesty was pleased to confer " vpon him that of iustice and heyers, the thing passed " extreamely well, and the king satesfied with his choice, " and the other very much with the manner as well as " the obligation laid vpon him. I have not seen the " Duke of Monmoth, though most have don it. I will " preferr decency to my master to all other considera- " tions, and I thinke it not consistent with that to " complement any that stands in his present circum- " stances; the friends of the Duke of Monmoth giues " it out that this iourny was with the aduice of the " Prince of Orange, and that he was soone to follow in " order to persue the same ends, but since I have " reason to beleeve that there is not any truth in this " report, and I doubt not but I shall have this in an " authenticall manner."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"Jan. 6th [16]79. I have " since the writing of my letter of this days date spoke " to some of your best friends concerning the pro- " motion of the Bishope of Kilala,* and they are all of " opinion that appearing for this vnhappy Prelate, who " I fear me so, since he could doe so exorbitant a thing " as without law to execute a man, can not but here- " after be of greate preiudice to you, it being no way " justifiable for a private man to kill one outlawed, " unless the malefactor did make resistance. I confess " I have a sorrow for a man in holly orders that has " embrewed his hands in blood, and among many " omissions I thought it a very greate one to see " another of that function to remayn in it since the " kings restauration. I wish wee may not feell the ill " effects of that error. I doe not in the least make a " comparison of the guilt of these and other persons; " my lord of Essex sayd the pardon of that fact was " not don when he was in the gouvernment. I doubt " not but you will pardon my being warme vpon this " occasion, it being absolutely vpon your account, " not having euer seen the person I speake of, and " hauing no other kind of obiection but what I now " mention."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"January 6th [16]79. I have " according to your commands solicited his Maiesty in " behalf of those you would have preferred by the " vacancy of the bishoprick of Derry, all which are " granted, and I beleeue letters to that purpose will be " dispatched to you this night. I have heard much " good of the Bishop of Kilala, but I know not how " liable it may be to sensors to preferr a clergyman " that was so indiscreet and violent as to make a tory's " heade be cutt off in his house, when brought in a " prisoner. My lord of Essex told me the story, and " though he sayd many things of the persons merritt, " yet he is capable to leaue out that part as occasion " may offer; this action, though vniuersally knowen, I " was ignorant of till of very late. I think it vorthy " of your consideration, whether you will proceed vpon " the king's commands or not; perhapps this perticular " may not have come to your knowledge. The king " spoke freely enough of persons recomended by the " Bishope of London, and I beleeve his recomendation " as to any to be preferred in Irelande will be of littell " force. I wish Parson Young, that was in flanders " with me, were preferred in Irelande; he is an extra- " ordinary pious man, and an excellent preacher; he " is an Oxforde man, and very well reputed in the " vniuersity."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"Jan. 17th 1679. Hauing had " seuerall promises to be sett vpon the establishment " in Hollonde according to my articles, and the death " of Prince Maurice of Nassau giuing so easy an " oppertunity of doing me iustice without a new found, " I haue desired my leaue. I thinke it sufficient still as " for the humble part relating to the Prince of Orange, " who I realy beleeve has fovnd himself mistaken, " when he gave me his word to see me have right don, " if vpon what I say my pretensions are satisfied, then " I continue and no harme is don. I haue sometimes " displeased you by engaging myself too svddenly; I " hope I shall not doe so now by withdrawing, hauing " his Maiestys consent and the aduice of my friends. " What comes of this matter, any thing els that I thinke " important I shall not faill to communicate it vnto " you. My lord of Essex makes it his worke to catch " hold of anything that may preiudice you, especialy " in what relates to the late Irish bill; his party blames " the slightingnes of your answer, which when obiec- " tions to seuerall paragrafs were made all the returns " were that here they may be mended or thrown out. " I finde my lord of Burlington very kinde to you, " though some would inflame him, because his name " was not inserted, nor the vicetreasurers, which they " say is of course in most commissions; it is also sayd " that Sir Nicolas Plunkett made the first draught of " that bill. I would be glad to have the deniall of this " from you, though at present I doubt not the falsity of " that report."

Arran to Henry Coventry, Secretary of State.— " Dublin, Jan. the last. My Lord Livetennant is not " yett soe well recover'd as to bee able to write himself " this post; hee has yours of the 24th instant, where " you inform him of his Ma^ty^s purpose to send vs a " Cheif baron from thence to succeed ours, who dyed " about three days scince. You may please to remember " that itt was his desire by my last letters that in case " none of the persons he recomended should bee pitched " vpon, a fitt person should bee sent from England; " the truth is the busness of that court is not very well " managed now, and has been worse as my Lord of " Essex very well knows, but the fault was not soe " much the insufficiency of the late Lord Cheif baron, " as the great power given my Lord Rannelaugh, and " partners, in controuling that court; this with the " reduceing of the officers fees which hapened then, " might make them more negligent then formerly, all " which a person well versd in exchecker proceedings " there may remedy. In case the course taken in that " court may bee found practicable with vs, his grace is " not soe much concernd for any person recomend as " hee is that the king's affairs should bee well managed " in that court, tho hee beleives one of them might bee " as fitt for the place as any either my Lord Privy " Seal or my Lord Essex will recomend."

Ossory to Ormonde.—"Febr. 24th [16]79. I re- " ceued yovrs of the 14th with much satisfaction to " finde your fitt of the goute beginning to leaue you. " Of the affaire of the Chancellorship I have not heard " a word more, perhapps it was a false report or a " wrong information. I alwaise tell you what I heare " and my authors, but will not be answerable for the " truth of my informations. I thinke without vndecency " you cannot putt by my Lord of Sunderland from the " affaires of Irelande, and since that is his portion, I " thinke the soonest and ciuilest advances to be best; in " this Sir Robert Southwell's and my opinion goes " together. Of what wee owe to that worthy friend I " need not vse arguments to perswade you, hauing " fovnd him so vsefull on all occasions; the king has " remitted him his qvitt rents in Ireland, which amount " to about seventy for a yeare. The king's letter with " the vsvall formes from the Lords of the treasvry will " shortly be sent you, and I hope you will lett him see " how ioyfull and ready you will be to dispatch any- " thing of good relating to him. The Duke and Dutches " arriued here in good health, the king mett them at

* Thomas Otway was Bishop of Killala and Achonry from 1670 to 1679. The above-mentioned affair does not appear to have been hitherto published in connection with him. On the destruction of "Tories" George Philips wrote as follows to Ormonde from New Hall, 8th October, 1678: " May it please your Grace,—I presume to acquaint your Grace that in " obedience to your commands and instructions I have used all possible " diligence for the destruction of the Toryes of this country, and for the " discovery and punishment of their harborers and abettors, of w^ch^ I " shall give a more particular and distinct account when I shall have " the honor to kisse your hand. And having continually pursued them, " publicly by the soldjers and secretly by spyes, and costly intelligence, " I made an opportunity at last to doe some good service, for on fryday " last intelligence was given by a fellow (who was their taylor, and " whom I imploy'd as a spy), and two of my brothers, with 5 or 6 " countrymen surprized 2 of them, whereof one escaped being wounded, " the other they killed, and I have sent his head to Derry. His name " was Shane O'Cahan, the captain and leader of all the Toryes of this " country. I dare not compare him with Count Hanlyn, but certainly " next to him he was the most daugerous and active rebel in Ulster. " He hath bin out these 6 years, and hath committed innumerable " robberyes and some murders. Ther are now onely 4 known Toryes " left in this country, in y^e^ pursuit of whom I have imploy'd some " trusty persons, and do confidently hope within a short time to give " your Grace a good account of them."

" the staires foot ivst as they came out of their barges.
" My humble opinion is that to his R.H. you would " write him a letter of complement on this occasion."

The following is in the rare holograph of De Gramont, who married Elizabeth Hamilton, daughter of Ormonde's sister Mary. The loss referred to was the death, in July 1665, of the Duke's daughter Elizabeth, wife of Philip Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield:—" Monsieur, faites moy

In connexion with William Penn, Sir Mathew Hale, Sir W. Temple, and John Evelyn, the following are of interest:—

" Hon^rd S^r,—I cannot leave his Majesties seruice in " England to attend my owne affaires in Ireland as " things now stand. I haue therefore sent the bearer
" my son in my stead, and humbly desire the con-
" tinuation of your fauour to him as it hath unfaylingly
" been hitherto to mee. I haue instructed him how great

Sir William Temple to Ormonde.—" Hague, Jan. 24
" S.N. [16]76. My Lord,—I receaved this weeke the " honor of two letters from your Grace by Captaine
" Ire and another gentleman, but both upon the same " subject, which was that of their late misfortune heere,
" which I thought a very great one since I began to

" the confession of Capt. Platt and the flight of Capt.
" La Valyn their two accusers, of whom I am forced to " beleeve more ill upon this occasion then I could
" allmost have imagind mankinde capable of, which " was by forging accusations upon counterfeited letters
" to offer at taking away not onely the imployments
" and honors, but the lives of severall gentlemen, onely
" to advance one of them to bee major and revenge the " other upon some little quarrels between them. The " prince himself confesses hee beleeves this forgery
" which is come out within thees ten days and so not
" unseasonably for thees gentlemens coming over, yett
" his Highnesse saies hee is sure there was intelligence
" between some officers of that regiment and the " garrison of Mastricht, and that a trope of horse from " thence attended them severall days in their march,
" so that though Mr. Skelton spoke to him from the " king, yett I found hee was unwilling to give them a
" discharge in the usuall and honorable tearms they " desired, but said if they would have a tryall by a
" councill of warre they should. What the gentlemen
" have by Mr. Skelton's advice resolved on I cannot " tell, having not seen them since hee left this place
" upon his journey towards Vienna; but that day Cap" tain Ire dined with mee and seemed unresolved what
" to desire. When I hear further of him I shall doe
" him any service I can, both from the opinion of his
" innocency, and from the very great deference I shall " ever have for any of your Grace's recomendations.
" Otherwise I avoyd concerning myself in anything that " passes among thees troops as having been levyed
" without his Majesty's permission, and in a measure
" against his commands, and thereby lying out of the " protection of his ambassador heer. I am very sorry
" to finde what your Grace is pleased to tell mee of your
" ignorance in some of those things which passe there,
" and seem to concerne you so much, yett I doubt not
" but you know as much of them as you desire. I am " sure your Grace has as much parte as you please in
" all my dispatches to the secretarys from hence,
" finding they are still communicated to the Committee
" of foreign affairs, and the resolutions upon them taken
" there, which makes mee not trouble your Grace with
" accounts of matters already knowne. I will onely say
" that upon the whole matter the campagne seems to
" goe on as fast as the treaty, on all hands, and if it
" beginns before to ther endes. I beleeve the Prince of " Orange will certainly bring it to a battaile, and that
" must give measures afterwards. I begg your Grace's
" pardon for this interuption, and your beleefe that I
" am ever, with equall passoin and truth, my Lord, your
" Grace's most faithfull and most humble servant,
" W. TEMPLE."

Ormonde to Sir William Temple.—" Windsor, 12 June
" [16]77. Haueing had notice of your son's purpose to
" passe ouer to you, I thought I could not better then
" by him acknowledg your Excellencyes kindnesse and
" favour upon occasion of his Majesties makeing choyce
" of mee once more in his service for the gouernement
" of Ireland. Considering my age, I am like there to " act the last public part of my life, and shall therefore
" endeavour to make it the best, that I may in some " measure redeem all the errors of ignorance and inad-
" vertency I may haue been guilty of; for others I shall
" want humility to owne, and this advantage I haue,
" that my carriage heretofore in that gouernement hath
" been exposed to so strict, not to say malitious exami-
" nation, that I am reasonably well instructed and
" warned for my future deportment, a benefitt which I
" doubt was not intended mee or foreseen by some of
" the inquisitors. There is no circumstance attending
" the honour his Majestie lays upon mee that satisfyes
" mee more then that I find my Lord of Essex is not
" displeased at my succeeding him, and does not mis-
" understand the part I had in obtaining the succession;
" but on the contrary all things have passed betwixt us
" upon the occasion as they ought to do betwixt men of " our condition and profest friendship. With this as
" with what I beleeve will not displease you, I shall
" conclude my letter, when I haue repeated to you that " I still am and resolue to be, my Lord, your Ex^cyes most
" faithfull and most obedient servant, ORMONDE."

Sir William Temple to Ormonde.—" Shene, Nov^br. 27,
" 1677. My Lord,—As I can never neglect any occasions
" of your Grace's service, so I fall unwillingly into " those which can bee onely of trouble, and yett at " this time and upon the late losse fallen upon our " family, I cannot forbeare the sensible acknowledg-
" ments I owe your Grace, both for the last honor you
" were pleased to doe to the memory of my father,
" and for the favor you were pleased to expresse to" wards my easy succeeding him in his office, by your
" Graces dispatch to Courte upon that occasion which
" my brother gave mee an account of. I cannot but
" renew to your Grace the memory I shall ever retaine
" of having owed the reversion of that place (many " years since) intirely to your favor, and so I shall now
" reckon that I doe the possession of it, since I finde it
" was so early in your Graces thought and intentions,
" nor should I have made my application heer to his " Majesty upon that occasion before I might have done
" it under your protection, but that my stay in England
" depends upon such uncertaintys that, though it has
" drawne out into lengths I could not expect, yett I
" can seldome reckon upon one post before mee. The " retirement I have past heer in the country for neer
" this weeke since the news of my father's losse allows
" mee no pretence to say anything of publique, besides
" that I know your Grace receaves it constantly from
" better hands. Yett I will venture to say this onely,
" in shorte, that wee are very neere the greatest crisis
" that has yet happend in his Majestys affaires, or
" those of Christendome, for upon my Lord Fever-
" shams returne, which must now bee very neere, wee
" shall see whether France will bee content to make
" the peace without the conquest of Flanders, or such
" tearms as must evidently make way for it upon the " next invasion. If they will not, his Majesty must in " a very little time, and once for all, resolve whether " hee will looke on and see that country lost the next " campagne, and feele the consequences that will have " upon Holland, or whether hee will by some newe " measures endeavor to prevent it, and upon this the " fate of most affairs at present on foot will certainly " depend. I aske your Grace's pardon for this pre- " sumption, and your beleefe that what place or condition " of life soever I may fall into no man can bee ever " with more constant passion or greater truth then I " am, my Lord, your Grace's most obedient and most " humble servant, W. TEMPLE,"

John Evelyn to Earl of Ossory.—" 14 Feb. [1679]. " My Lord,—I am extreamely sorry for my Lord Dukes " sake, but especialy for your Lordships, that you " reject the opportunity is presented to you for the " purchasing of that sweete place at Chelsey, vpon so " easy termes, because I am certaine that if ever the " times should settle into any tollerable composure, it " will not lie vpon their hands who haue interest in it " for a much more considerable summ than what is now " demanded for it, and that then it may not possibly be " in my power to serve your Lordship as now it is. " I haue formerly acquainted your Lordship with the " particulars; that besides a magnificent house capable " of being made (with small expense) perfectly modish : " the offices, gardens, and other accommodations for " aire, water, situation, vicinity to London, benefit of " the riuer, and mediocrity of price nowhere to be " paralell'd I am sure about this towne, or any that I " know in England. There are with it, to be added, as " many orange-trees, and other precious greenes, as " are worth 500*l.* The fruite of the gardene are ex- " quisite; there is a snow house—in a word, I know of " no place more capable of being made the envie of all " the noble retreates of the greatest persons, neere this " Court and citty, so that it euer grieves me your Lord- " ship should not be master of it. I almost forgot to " tell your Lordship that there is neere one hundred " pounds a yeare in good tennements, vnder-rented; so " as vpon the matter I do not esteeme your Lordship " gines aboue 3,500*l.* for the whole, which realy is not " aboue a third part of what it would sell in other cir- " cumstances. Not one argument of all this would I vse " to your Lordship after what your Lordship has com- " municated to me, since you went into Ireland (where " my Lord Duke cannot haue so perfect an notion of it as " your Lordship, who is so neere it, euery day), because " methinks I cannot haue acquitted myselfe of the " many obligations I remaine vnder to your Lordship " without making your Lordship this second offer of " my service, whilst it is in my power, who am, my " Lord, your Lordship's most humble and most dutiful " servant, J. EVELYN. Feb. 14,—$\frac{9}{80}$."

Earl of Ossory to Ormonde. — " Febr. 21, [16]79. " Hauing receiued from Mr. Evelyn the enclosed, " which by Sir Stephen Fox, who was once about pur- " chasing the house mentioned in it, I doe finde to be " a very greate bargain, and the summe demanded not " very considerable, besids a morall certainty, if the " times be quiet, that at any time it may be parted " with at aduantage. I thought it not amiss to send " you the proposall; the conveniency and indeed " decency of your hauing an aboade in England, if " your affaires can permitt your laying out so much " mony, hauing inclined me to make this stepp, which, " if proceeded in, I doubt not but you will be satisfied " of the price and the good repayre that boath house " and gardens are in. I ame desired to intreate your " fauuour in some affaires of Sir Richard Belings, " which I did vndertake for, as farr as consisted with " formes and your power to assist him. By coniectures " of the winde since Monday last, which was the day " the Duke embarked, wee expect him tomorrow or next " day. I am extreame sorry that you have bin so much " troubled with the goute. I wish you a perfect re- " couery and all happines."

" A perticular of Chelseyhouse.

" There belongs to Chelseyhouse 16 acres of ground, " with severall large gardens and courts, all wald in, " and planted with the choycest fruite that could be " collected either from abroad or in England.

" The whole house is in perfect good repaire, the " apartements alterd according to the mode, my Lord " of Bristoll hauing laid out upon it 2,000*li.*

" The outhouseing is very good, ample, and com- " modious, and all the offices supplied with excellent " water.

" The tenements belonging to it are now let for 100*li.* " per ann., and may very considerably be improved as " the leases expire.

" The purchase was at first 7,000*li.*

" For this particular, with the addition of all " orange trees, and other greenes, fruite, and " flowers of all kinds, with seates, rowlers, " tables, and all garden vtincills. Alsoe, within " the house all fixt necessarys, as greates, " chimney peices, and wainscot, the billiard " table, and a pare of marble tables and house " clock, there will be p^d - - - 5,000*li.*

" Thus offerd 26^th June 1679.

" By Sir Step: Fox."

The following are specimens of the letters concerning the English and Irish in military service abroad, and the relations of the Earl of Ossory with the Prince of Orange :—

Lord Clare to Earl of Ossory.—" from Perrois, 6 " leags from Charleroye, 30^th July 1674. My last was " of the 23^d to your lordship uppon our march from " Park neer Lovaine, which we continued all that night " to joyne next day with 10,000 German horse at Bonuff; " thire ffoot, being but 10,000 more, came last night to " us, we haueing layed between them and ye enemie. " Ther went 5,000 German foot and 3,000 horse from " us to assist the Pallatinatt armye; we have the finest " armie that ever was seen, we are at least 17,000 horse " and 35,000 foott.

" The Prence of Conde fortifies himselfe close to " Charleroye, and it seems he hath noe minde to us, " though we be come heer to him. I beseech your " lordship to send this to my Lord Duke for Ireland, " since I cannot write by a quicker way to his Grace, " and that heer in our campe we have noe certaine way " of sending by reason of ye boors and enemie, but as " by chance we meet with convoyes."

Lord Clare to Earl of Ossory.—" 16 Augt. 1674. I " have writ to your lordship from our campe neer Niuel " and from Senef, wher we came neerer to the enemyes " campe at Tresini: we wer at Senef two nights in vew " of the enemie, and uppon Sathurday the ii^th of this " moneth we marchd from thence towards Mariemont, " leaueing a thowsand foot and 2,000 horse and dragones " in the rear garde under the Prence of Vodemons " command. Our armie marchd in 3 seuerall ways to " Marie Mont, and our bagage in 3 more; the dispos- " sition of the march being allways left to the Spanish " comanders in this countrie, though that day the " Prence would have his bagage goe further about to " the right hand rather then take the neerer way that " was full of ill passages and verie narrow, but it was " not observed which obliged our gardes to keep thire " poste soe longe that the Germans wer encamped and " most of the Spanish and Holland armie got to Marie- " mont two leages and halfe from our garde to see our " wagens passe the first narrow way thy met with. " In the mean while the Prence of Conde drew out his " armie behinde a hill which was oposit to our garde, " and which he attackt with two regiments of dragones " and foot on 9 of the clock in the morning, and we " disputeing the ground, he brought to peeces of artil- " lerie and sent more men to fire uppon us. When we " saw our wagens passed the first narrow passage we " retired to a bridge that was behinde us, and there " we disputed the passage, but being overpowered by " the enemies foott we wer forced to give way, haveing " lost yonge Prence Moris of Nasaw, colonel to one of " the foot battallions, and the colonel that commanded " the other batallion, with most of thire officers. Then " our horse kept noe ground, being all inclosures about " us untill we came a leage further, wher we wer " receavd by Count Valdeck, Margrave de Asentar, and " Duke de Villahermosa in the head of 5 regements of " foott and a thowsand horse; thy allsoe had 2 smalle " peeces of artillerie planted on a riseing grownd before " them, and there after a sharp dispute and giveing a " stopp to ye enemie the Prence left the poste to those " great comanders and went to putt ye rest of his armie " in a posture of fighting . . About halfe a leage " further he found his artillerie and the winge of the " Holland foott, which the Reigne Graue (a brave man " and leutenant generall of ye foott) comanded. His " Highnesse got this artillerie planted on a hight neer " Mariemont, and drew his foot and some horse to " defend it. In the mean while the Marquis of As- " sentar was taken prisoner, Count Valdeck wounded, " and most of the comanders and soldiers of those 5 " regiments lost, and thire 2 guns, our horse haveing " not stuck well to them, onely the Duke de Villaher-

" mosa behaved himselfe like a brave man. Then the " Prence of Conde attackt our artillerie about 1 of the " clock with all his force, but it was resolutely and " bravely defended by the Prence of Orrange: he drew " thither all his foott, who fought admirable well, and 5 " German regiments; he had allsoe some squadrons of " horse, but the grosse of our horse wer on the bottom " and plaines neer us towards Mons, to which plaines " some of our great comanders would perswad the " Prence to retire. But his Highnes tould them he " would make good that place, and it was necessarie, " for if we had lost it we had been in danger of looseing " all. The hill was leuell and large on ye topp and " surrounded with woods and orchards; the enemie " pressd through these orchards to come uppon, us and " planted thire artillerie uppon some houses and heights " which wer in them, and continued sharpp fighting " untill 12 of the clock at night, haveing broak in twice " in the night with some squadrons of horse on our " flanck, crying to us to lay downe armes, but thy wer " beaten out againe. The enemie and we set many " houses afire to give us light in ye night. Thy retired " about 1 of the clock in the morning, and we continued " untill 8 in the same place wher we fought, then " haveing taken all the wounded men with us, and the " bodys of ye dead which were of quallitye, we marchd " as formerly we intended to the plains between Marie " Mont and Mons, wher we now are; but few of our " horse could come that day to service. Count Sours " and all our generalls wer on ye place, but none soe " active, soe steddie, and soe brave as ye Prence of " Orrange, who from 9 of the clock in the morning " untill 12 at night was in the heat of all ingagements, " and indeed all that while it was a continued one. His " Highnesse fortunatly escaped, haueing once or twice " come to ye head of one of the enemy's squadrons of " horse to comand them to follow him, and the second " time asking the Captain whye he did not follow at ye " first comand, he answerd he was puting his men in " order. Uppon which the Prence discovering his " white scarffe, he clapt spurrs to his horse and went " to ye head of another squadron, which imediatly he " broght uppon the enemie and defeated him. We lost " 2 smalle peeces of canon, and ye greatest parte of " our Holland army's bagage. I belive ther was 4,000 " of our side kil'd, and aboue 2,000 wounded, and that " the enemie had as many kild and wounded of thires. " The Prence of Loraine, Prence Pio, the Reigne graue, " the Prence of Furtenbergh, the Duke of Holstin, " Leutenant Generall Alnay, and a great many more " officers of quallitie wounded. Prence Salmes, Count " Solmes, Colonel of the Prence of Orrange's gards of " foott, and a great many other officers of ours, prisoners. " Yow shall have a perfecter acount of what wer kild, " wounded, and take by the next, but I give yow now " a true and impartiall account of the engagement, " as I have been eye witnesse to it from first to last, " haueing noe other charge that day but the honor of " following the Prence. Sir Walter Fane dyed this " morning of his wounds, haueing behaued himselfe " with much credit and aplause. It was a sharpp " ingagement, and obstinatly pursued by the French. " Your brother Ouerkirk behaued himselfe gallantly, " and receaud a musket bullet in his head, but did " not break his scull; he is now ready for another " bout. The Conde Monte Rey' sent us this day a " good body of fresh horse and 5,000 Spanish foott. The " Prence atributes our disaster to Monsieur Lavinge, " as designed to haue us afronted, and soe much his " Highnesse tould him before Duke de Villahermosa, " Prence of Vademont, and many others. I pray send " this to my lord Duke your father, with my most " humble dutie.

" Marquis de Assentar dyed of his wounds, and I pray " excuse my blotts."

Lord Clare to Ossory.—" from ye Prence of Orranges " Campe, neer St. Gilline, 25th Augt. 1674 new stile. " I cannot give your lordship a more perticular account " of our engagement with ye Prence of Conde on ye " 11th, then I gaue your lordship of ye 15th enclosed to " Sir Jo. Williamson, onely that most of the officers of " our Holland foott wer ither kild, wounded, or taken; " 6 Colonels kild, 5 taken, and 8 wounded: by that your " lordship may judge of ye rest. The brunt of the day " fell uppon our foot, and its noe better with the " French, we heer they lost 8,000 men; and notwith- " standing our losse we are now marching towards " Valencian, 40,000 foott and 24,000 horse effective. " The Prence of Conde removed from Tregini, and " passed ye Sambre, thy say to meet some forces which " are to joyne with him from Monsieur Turene. Ther " are 17,000 men of ye Duke of Brandenborogh's on " there march to ioyne with us, but I should thinke we " have men enogh, if we had more.—Ther was neuer " such a thinge as our comeing on such ground in sight " of the Prence of Conde's armie without resolution to " falle uppon him, and with soe little care in our march " from him, all which I presumed to tell his Highnesse " beforehand, but he is led by wiser men.—We wer " the day we came to Senef taken in ye strangest con- " fution that could be, had ye enemie come uppon us, " for our entelligence and parties abroad goes noe " further then our generalls can see; and then (as we " thought) the Prence of Conde and his armie wer in " battallia close to us on ye other side of a little wood. " My lord, I fear it will be the same still with us. " Wher in my last letter I tould your lordship we had but " 2,000 horse our rear garde we had 4,000, but by " what they did a man should not take them to be 400. " We are allsoe verie uncertaine in our resolutions. " The Prence hath a hard tugge of it. What one " generall promises ouer night he forgetts it in ye " morning, and the other is not willing that any great " action should be don by another in this countrie, " though he knows not how to doe it; and the under " generalls which manages all the affaire according to " thire severall factions and abillities, are such a " of people as thire actions hitherto have shewd, and I " fear will shew. But not a word of this to Sir Gabriel " who goes thither this day. I hope your lordship " sends these letters to my lord duke, or that yow would " tell me, soe that I may write aparte to his Grace in " order to my dutie.'

Prince of Orange to Duke of Ormonde.—" Au Camp " de Lokeren, ce 15 Juin 1677. Monsieur,—Je crois estre " oblige de vous temoigner ma recognoissance de tous " les honneurs que vous avez fait a Mr. Bentinck, et des " bons conseils que vous lui avez donne. Lord Clare to Ormonde.—" Hague, 15th January 1675. " I thinke it alonge while since I had the honor of " kisseing your Graces hand, but it was some satisfac- " tion me to haue my Lord Ossorie heer these six weeks " past to wait on him. Vppon Sunday, in the after- " noen, thy saild from the Brill, and the Prence went " allmost out of seight of land with them, haueing that " day dined aboard thire yaght. I hope thy are landed " ear this in England, the weather being verie faire. " Admiral Trump went with my Lord Ossorie to see " the King. It is certaine that Brisak is releeued by " Mons^r^. Turene, and some say the confederats are " beatten, at least they retired. We are prepareing of " some troops to stop the Swede from ouerrunning the " Elector of Brandenbourgs countrie, wher he is now " enterd with an armie of 18,000 men and a great " traine of artillerie."

MARQUIS OF ORMONDE.

Justin McCartie to Ormonde.—" Paris, Mar. the 17th " [1676]. I haue once since my coming hither giuen " your Grace the trouble of a letter, but I know not " whether it came to your hands; and now, my Lord, " I must importune you again, for I am so allarmed at " the bill I heare that has past the house of commons " for the recalling of us out of the french seruice, that " I know not what to doe, unless your Grace can by " your interest get me particularly excepted, which is " the onely hopes I haue that can preuent my ruin, " haueing beene at vast expence to equip myselfe for " the field, besides a certaine disappointment of making " my fortune, which I am in a good way of doeing, if " I were permitted to continue here. I beseech your " Grace, if nothing can be done in this business, at the " least that I may haue your aduise how I shall cary " my selfe, for without it I shall not stir."

Lord Clare to Ormonde.—" Carigahoulte, 1 Decr. " [1678]. The place I liue in, and the pleasure and " profit of a countrie life, to which I betook myselfe to " recouer the losses I had by a heavy quit rent, makes " me ignorant of all matters that stir abroad. Yet I " hear a nois of militia and rumours as if some vn- " fortunat troubles wer like to be in the King's Domi- " nions, which obliges me to offer my seruice to the " Crowne, with the affection I euer professed to Your " Grace, and perticularly vnder your comand, and to " let your Grace know that there are a sorte of people " of this nation, to a considerable number, that will " therein follow me, let what speties soeuer of religion " be suggested to them to the contrarie; at least I will " secure Your Grace the force of this countie to what- " euer you please to comand."

The correspondence with Henry Coventry, Secretary of State, may be illustrated by the following:—

Coventry to Ormonde.—" Whitehall, March 1st. 1678. " Since my last to your Grace of the 2d instant I have " perused the results of these Lords to whom the king " committed the consideration of the points in your " letter of the 22 of Jan., concerning the things likely " to be demanded and fitting to bee proposed in Par- " liament, which are these following:—

" 1. His Majesty resolveth a Parliament shall bee " calld in Ireland as soone as the necessary formes will " allow it.

" 2. That in it the Decrees of the Court of Claymes " may bee confirmed by Act of Parliament.

" 3. That means may bee found to free the interests " from the vexation of Commissions of inquiry.

" 4. That there may bee a remission of all old debts, " forfeitures, and arrears due to the Crowne, but a par- " ticular care taken that the so doing bring not out de- " mand of defalcation upon his Majesty, or, at least, if " it doe, that the quantum of yt bee ascertained and " his Majesty enformed of it.

" That all care that canne bee reasonably desird " bee given the people from the vexatious clauses in " the Chymney Acts. That such Acts bee prepared for " the settling and securing the Protestant religion as " shall be approved of by the Lord Lieutenant and " Councell.

" On the other side his Majesty expects from the " Parliament a grant of subsidys, which hee is willing " shall bee wholy and entirely appropriated to the " building and repayring of the fortifications, and the " furnishing of stores, and therefore leavith the naming " of the summe necesary for those uses to your Grace " and the Councell with you. Upon many accompts " his Majesty findeth it absolutely necessary to en- " crease his army in that kyngdom, and that when it " is so there will bee the lesse neede upon any sud- " daine occasion to arme either the Scots, the Non- " conformists, or the old Militia, none of which canne " be done without some danger. Hee iudgeth that tenne " thousand men effective, besides officers, is the num- " ber he would constantly maintayne; then hee esti- " mateth that increase of men cannot bee maintayned " without an addition of betweene 30,000*l.* and 40,000*l.* " a yeare to his constant revenue. Therefore hee " requireth that your Grace and the Councell prepare " one or more Acts for imposing such new or additional " dutys upon commoditys exported or imported as may " encrease the revenue to that yearly summe. Still " provided that care be taken that no such impositions " may either preiudice the trade of that kingdome or " entitle the farmers to a demand of defalcations. In " the preamble of such Act or Acts his Majesty is willing " it should bee declared that what is thereby graunted " is the better to enable him constantly to support " such an army there; and for the further satisfaction " of the people that hee desires the encrease of his " revenue for that onely use, hee would have orders " given out before the meeting of the Parliament for " raysing the recruits necessary. His Majesty likewise " desireth your advice whether it will bee more ad- " visable to encrease the army by filling up the old " companys or by raysing new ones, and that you send " an estimate of the charge along with your advice. " His Majesty is fully resolved to employ that part of his " new revenue which is made ouer to repay the money " lent by Mr. Bridges, for the constant supply of his " stores there, and such other publique uses as shall be " thought necessary, the sayd repayment and such " other debts which must unavoydably come upon it " being first cleard. And now, my Lord, I have per- " formed what his Majesty hath commanded mee as to " this matter, and I believe have I beleive made a compli- " ment to your gout by releeving it with a fitt of a letter " much more troublesome."

Ormonde to Henry Coventry.—"Dub[lin], 17 Mar. " [16]$7\frac{4}{5}$. I have yours of the 5 instant containing his " Majesties directions concerning the calling of a Par- " lement. I am confident hee will receeue the fruits of " his great goodnesse and care expressed towards his " subiects of this kingdome to the vtermost of their " abillity, and that there will bee more dificulty to finde " what and how they shall give then to perswade them " to giue.

" The leadeing bills shall bee prepared with all " dilligence for transmision, and had bin more ready " then they are if his Majesties pleasure had bin sooner " known.

" That which is to confirme the decrees of the Court " of Claimes, I am tould, will not so easily bee drawn as " was suposed. If it shall not put an end to all the " feares of those in possession, and to the hopes of those " that are not, it will not reach the end designed; and if " it shall many hard cases will want releaf, which if " they shall endeavour to get by particular provisos " much time will bee lost, and perhaps the bill vpon " which that of suplys will depend. Wee shall there- " fore here view all such as shall bee offered, and doe " hope his Majestie may think fit to doe soe there.

" The bill of subsedys will soone and easily bee drawn, " if the augmentation of the revenue must not bee com- " prehended in it; but if it must, it may take vp more " time, by reason of his Majesties two most necessary cau- " tions not to overcharge trade nor intitle the ffarmers " to defalcations. How to rayse the revenue to the pro- " portion proposd, that is, vpon what to impose aditions " and not to obstruct trade, and how to satisfie the " Parliament that they shall not bee kept perpetuall " beggers by the exportation of the ouerplus of the " revenue (which may by the retrenchment of the " establishment bee at any time inlarged), are the most " difficult partes of the work.

" I am for the present humbly of opinion that it will " bee beter to rayse new companys than to fill vp the " old; but the later being the more frugal way, it will " bee hard to resolue vpon the other till the estimat I " am comanded to send shall be compard with what " wee may hope to rayse in adition to the revenue.

" How farr the remiting of old debts, forfeitures, and " arreares will entitle the old farmers or the Lord " Ranellagh and his partners to defalcations may very " well bee iudged of there where both the bargains were " made, and where all pretences to defalcations haue " bin heard and determined; yet the judges and the " kings councell here shall bee consulted about it, but " I conceue it will bee very dificult to ascertaine the " proportion of what will bee remited till the E. of " Ranellagh and his partners shall haue fully accounted " or at leaste giuen in a lyste of arreares standing out, " which also must bee done by the old ffarmers, that " care may be taken that no allowance bee giuen for " desperate arreares in case of remitall.

" I am humbly of opinion that it will bee enough that " I declare his Majestie's intention to reinforce his " army to 10m, and keepe it so till wee haue some more " certaine prospect of what may be raysed to suport it, " and till his Majestie shall think fit to declare and " ascertaine what those vnavoydable debts amount to " which must bee payd, besides the money lent by Mr. " Bridges, before that parte of the new revenue can bee " aplyd to the vses mentioned in the later end of your " leter.

" I conceiue it is not his Majestie's intention I should " make any publick vse of the caution hee comands " concerneing the arming of the Scots, the noncon- " formists, or the old militia. Any distrust of the last " would bee very vnseasonably exprest at this time, and " I think not very reasonable in it self, considering the " time that may bee spent in the discourse of it and " prepareations towards it, the care that may bee taken " in the choyce of oficers, and the great dificulty there " is in bringing it to anything serviceable or dangerous; " if more paines should bee taken in it, then, now I know " his Majestie's pleasure, I meane to imploy vpon it.

"I am afraid I shall not bee able to satisfie Mr. Ryder " by my proceedings vpon his Majesties leters of the " 3d of February, and yet my inclinations are (as far as " they ought to bee) for him, not because I know him " beter, but because I doe not know him so well as some " of the others. The king will haue that mater once " more represented to him to recieue his finall deter- " mination, and care shall bee in the meane time taken " that his revenue shall not sufer by the delay."

Ormonde to Henry Coventry.—"Dub[lin], 30 Apr. " 1679. I do not remember any session of Parliament " held when I was out of England, but that I was hoely " alarum'd by my friends of preparations and con- " trivances to accuse mee, and I haue sometimes made " voyages thither principally to prevent or to be ready to " answer anything that could be objected against mee, " and it has fallen out that vpon my arrival I haue " still been suffered to be quiet. I have now again " the same informations, and I haue at least as much " reason to giue credit to them as heretofore, and if I " were at liberty would hasten over to defend my honor, " innocence, and conduct in the trusts that haue been " reposed in mee as well as I could. I know the " chiefe grounds of men's ill will to mee are malice, " because I would not beare calumny and envy to the " places I hold, which are motives that will neuer dye " or be at rest as long as the object remaines, and " I am now come to an age and inclination so fitt for " retirement that I would be content to purchase it " at any rate but that of dishonour or prejudice to " my fortune and family. Therefore, though I could " with all imaginable cheerfulnesse and content lay " this great and envyed place at his Majestie's foot " from whose hands I received it, yet I cannot bring " myselfe to offer it as a ransome or composition, but " had rather undergo the strictest inquiries and tryall " of my actions. Thus you know my case and present " disposition as well as I know it myselfe, and it is now " time you should know that my humble desire is that " his Majestie would send mee ouer a permission to " attend upon him at court in the usuall formes, which " I think may be found in your office, that I may be at " liberty to make use of it when I shall think fitt; that " my sonn Ossory may be sent with it, and power given " that he may remaine deputy in my absence; or if his " Majestie approues not of him in this conjuncture, that " the lord chancelor and my sonn Arran may be surties, " or in the last place, if his Majestie finde reason not to appoint any of these, of whom I would not have proposed any if I could think of fitter, that he would " direct into what other hands to put the gouernment " till he shall haue resolued either to returne mee to " it or where else to fix it. I do not intend that who- " euer his Majestie shall place here in my absence be " any addition of charge, but am content that the " usuall allowance shall be taken out of my appoint- " ments. That which I would farther desire is as " much secrecy as the matter will beare, and a speedy " signification of his Majestie's pleasure."

Ormonde to Henry Coventry.—"Dub[lin], 25 May " 1679. I am abundantly satisfyed that my remoue " from this place at this time upon my own desire " would bring all the inconveniencyes you mention " upon mee, and perhaps some that cannot be foreseen, " nor do I know but that the knowledge of my supposeing " there may be such a conjuncture wherein I ought to " beg his Majesties leaue, for it may be taken advantage " of to my prejudice; yet I could not refuse the putting " such a letter as mine of the 30 of the last month into your " hands, upon the advice of my friends and in confidence " you would not present it but at a fitt time, if any such " could happen. My head is so filld with the expecta- " tion of some great event, from the state affaires were " in when you writt, that all I can do is but to keep up " the outward shew of gouernment and the formal part " of businesse, with the same preparation you expresse " of doing my duty when I shall understand wherein. " The course held with the Duke and D. Lauderdaill is " not a greater argument of hast then it is an instance " and exercise of power. There is indeed great disparity " in the cases; the subject matter about the Duke, as " well as his person, are the highest that can come in " question in our world, but since to the determination " of that the Commons allow the king and house of " Lords a share from which upon the matter they are " both excluded in the other case, for the Lords are not " invited to joyne in the addresse, and it is worded as " if little were left to the king's consideration. This I " say considered, and the unlimited consequence of such " a proceeding, I do not know to which to giue the " preheminence. At the very time this may come to " your hands these reflections may serue, or in truth " they may be frivolous and insipid."

The collection comprises unpublished letters of Roger Boyle, first Earl of Orrery, all of whose papers of this period were hitherto supposed to have perished. Roger Boyle took an active part, both as a soldier and a statesman, in England and Ireland, and in connexion both with Cromwellians and Royalists. On the Restoration, he obtained the title of Earl of Orrery, and the office of President of Munster, in which province he exercised extensive power. He was suspected by the Duke of Ormonde to be frequently engaged in promotion of political schemes for his own purposes, but nominally for the advancement and protection of the English interest. Orrery unsuccessfully sought reputation as a poet and dramatist, and as a military engineer and writer on the art of war. Ormonde, who for some years had not been on terms with Orrery, was directed by the king to consult him with reference to the projected Parliament for Ireland.

The following are specimens of the letters of Orrery, and of his relatives Michael Boyle, Primate and Chancellor of Ireland, Richard Boyle, Earl of Burlington, and Francis Boyle, Viscount Shannon.

Michael Boyle, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, to Ormonde.—"April 28, 1677. Your Grace haue such a " perfect and experienced knowledge of the condition " and government of this kingdom that it were a greate " impertinency and presumption to say anything to your " Grace upon that subiect; but ye difficultyes that are " most likely to press you, being such as shal bee put " upon yow out of England (as your Grace well knowes) " rather then any yow shall (in probability) meete upon " tho place, give me leave to hinte unto your Grace 2 " or 3 of them which I have observed since your Grace's " access from hence, and which, in my opinion, have " made the government somewhat easy. Your Grace " may make what use of them you please.

"1. That no letters from ye king for any graunt, &c., " are to be alowed and proceeded on by ye chiefe gover- " nor, unless they have first had ye approbation of the " Lord Treasurer of England. There is (as I suppose) " some private instruction to this purpose. What re- " straint this puts upon ye Cheife Governor your Grace " can best judge.

"2. The Lord Treasurer hath in some matters of " money underwritten ye kings warrant with his owne " name onely, and without ye privy signet; which is " not thought a legal authority sufficient to justify ye " Cheife Governor eyther for payment or dischardge " of ye kings money, if ever he should be called to an " accompt for it. Besides, if such a letter should come " unto your Grace, eyther you must pursue it, or refuse " it: if ye former, yow doe that which perhaps yow " cannot answere; if ye later, yow will give occasion " of some difference, or jealousyes, which may be very " inconvenient. This I know hath bin presed upon our " present Cheife Governor in 2 or 3 instances; but he " hath alwayes (as I beleeve) waved them as unsecure " and unjustifiable.

"3. I have heard by a very good hand that the Lord " Conway (who it is sayd was once upon the expectation " to come over our Deputy) declared it as his oppinion " that the Lord Treasurer of England hath as good " authority, even by virtue of his office, to dispose of the " king's revenue in Ireland, as of the revenue of Eng- " land. If this should become a receaved opinion, this " government would indeed be uneasye, and ye con- " sequences may be fatall.

"4. Another thing which hath of late subjected this " government to greate inconveniences, is the contract- " ing in England for concernes of Ireland, and ye " alowing of defalcations upon those contracts without " ye knowledge or privity of the cheife governor here, " who, being upon ye place, must certainly understand " them best, and would doubtless be ye best husband " for ye kings revenue, since ye lesning of that must " necessarily conduce to the uneasiness of ye govern- " ment. I doubt it is much easier to reflect upon these " things then to remove them; but perhaps, while your " Grace are there upon the place where yow may dis- " course freely, matters may be better adjusted and " made smoother then by ye debate of letters at a " distance. As to the business of ye revenue, which " indeed is ye greate business of this kingdom, your

" Grace will receave an accompt thereof from another " hand."

Earl of Orrery to Ormonde.—" Castlemartyr, the 17th " of Septr. 1677. I pay your Grace my most humble " and reall acknowledgments for the very greate " honour of your letter of ye 15th instant, which I " received this eveninge, and for the many high obli- " gations your Grace has heaped upon me in it. I will " not so much iniure the liuely sense I haue of them as " to attempt to express it by my words, but when- " ever my actions and services can doe it, they shall " speake for me. I most faithfully assure your Grace " that, tho I am in effect a man retired out of ye world, " yet whenever you command my poore opinion I will " with all truth freely present it to you and lay it at " your feet. Not that I am soe vaine as to fancy it can " be of any use to a person of such greate experience " and of soe excellent a judgment as your Grace is " happy in, but to evidence I will obey you in every " thinge, since I will doe it even in what must too " much demonstrat my weakness and folly. The two " heads your Grace mentions of ye Treasury and of a " Parliament, under which, as your Grace most truly " observes, all other dependent things are compre- " hended, and on which your Grace would have me " employ my thoughts, I will not faile to doe it, and at " present humbly lay before you what at first blush " occurs to me. I humbly beleeue ye true state of ye " first wilbe easilier knowne then remedied. I am not " ignorant greate art and industry haue bin of late " made use of to disguise it; but tricks in publik " affares are neuer longe liued, and noe sophistry can " resist ye mathematicks, since it is a science that " depends on demonstrations, as I beleeve ye good or " euill manadgment of a Treasury does and ever will. " I am perfectly satisfyed that your Grace desyres to " haue the ills of it cured; and, if I were conuinced " that all others concerned in it were soe too, I might " with som confidence presume to say the remedy " would be easy, sure, and lastinge, since the most " difficult steps to ye cure are to be sensible of the " disease, and then really desyrous to be freed from it. " I speake this with the less diffidence because the " noble person who was your Grace's immediat pre- " decessor in the government of this kingdome was " pleasd to honour me from time to time with all his " transactions in that affaire, and sometimes to com- " mand my insignificant opinion on it; which I could " not refuse either to his authority, or to his person, " wherby I was but too much satisfied that ye desyer " of the remedy was not a little, if not most needfull " to the obtayninge of it. But of all this your Grace " is ye most competent judg, only I cannot but say " unless the justice, if not the absolute necessity of the " thinge itselfe, and your Grace's interest ther, cannot " preuent the determinations in England concerninge " the Treasury heere, and ye disposall of it ther before " you are fully consulted with, I feare the consequences " will not be good. As to ye other great head, that of " a Parliament, I was engaged about two yeers since " to busy my unworthy thoughts on that subiect, and " now since your Grace commands me, I will more " intently imploy them on that affaire. But I must " ingenuously acknowledg unless I could know from " your Grace how farr his Majestys owne royall good- " ness and your Graces fauorable mediation would " goe as to passinge of bills to oblidge his subiects, and " if I did not also know how much is expected to be " added to the reuenue, on what such addition shalbe " rais'd, how longe it should continue, and to what " ends it should be imployd for ye safty and benefitt " of the land, while the power of ye kingdom may " enable his Majesty to dedicat it to thos ends, without " preiudice to his affairs in his other kingdoms, or in " forraighn ports, I should not be able to present your " Grace with my humble thoughts on this considerable " affaire, with those reasons which I heartily wish may " still accompany whatever I write or speake to your " Grace. But this I may say in generall: nothinge " probably can happen in ye time of your Graces " government which will need more consideration then " this one thinge will. And tho I foresee many great " difficultyes both in the layinge and manadgment of " it, yet I will not dispaire but that by his Majestys " gracious concessions to his subiects their loyalty " and gratitude, together with your Graces greate " knowledge of men and intrest in the kingdom, and " ye deepe prudence which formes and guides your " actings, thos many difficultyes may be overcome. " And really, my lord, I would not for more then I " will mention that, if his Majesty desyres a supply, he " should faile of it, and alsoe doe it under your govern- " ment. In what I have presumed to write on thes " two considerable heads, your Grace I hope will see I " am resolued to haue nothinge in reserue in whatever " you command my opinion. And also that I will to " ye utmost of my power (which is very insignificant) " contribute to make your government as acceptable " to the kinge as engaginge to the kingdom; and as " easy and honorable to your selfe as if my brother " were in your Grace's station. I am heartily sorry to " finde in ye extracts of newse that your Grace con- " descended to import unto me that soe gracious and " truly noble a person as my lord Ossory should present " his assistance to a people whos present demeanour " makes them unworthy of that honour. I had a letter " last night from a very authentick hand in Court, " which has thes very words in it; viz.—[notwith- " standing ye Spanish Ambassadors (or rather enuoy's) " rantinge, yet he offers as a firme alliance, ports and " fortresses in Flanders, nay, carte blanche, or what " we please, if we will ioyne in ye confedracy and " make warr in France], to which he adds [this has " alreddy much deuided us, and I doubt will more]. " And that I belieue is more intended by ye Spaniard " then an embargo, and consequently a war. I should " be very unworthy of your Grace's favours if I were " not highly satisfyed with them, and more unworthy " of them could I hope to merrit them."

Ormonde to Earl of Orrery.—" Dublin, 26 Jan. 1677. " I am incouraged, by finding your lordship is of my " opinion touching the securing of the harbour of Kin- " sale, to desire your assistance in so good a worke. " The trouble I would giue you for the present is that " you would make a computation of what your lord- " ship conceives will serve to begin, and what weekely " to continue, the whole, so as that it may not stand " still. I know your lordship will take in all par- " ticulars, and therefore I forbeare to mention any. " Wee have two engineers, of which for one I mean " Mr. Robinson, who I conceive to be very knowing; " the other one Capt. Archer, who has had more " practice, haueing been at ye takeing and defending " of many places in the French service, an Irish man " and a Papist, and yet one for whose fidelity I will " answer, haveing had long experience of him. His " eldest sonn is of his owne profession—I mean an in- " geneer—and a major in the service of ye Prince of " Orange. Hee himselfe is in the king's pay in Eng- " land, and another sonn of his was sent to Virginia, " upon Bacon's rebellion, to lay out something of for- " tification there. These in their seuerall wayes will " be usefull. Archer will have leasure to be constantly " upon the place to ouersee the worke, which the other " cannot, haveing an imployment in the office of ye " ordnance that will take him intirely up, for though " wee have no money I am upon credit fitting a " marching train of artilery."

Earl of Orrery to Edward Denny, Esq., at Tralee.— " Castle Martir, ye 28° Janu. 1677. I doubt not but " you knowe the probabilitie there is of his Maiestie " haueing a warr with France, and I am sure you " cannott but beleeue, if that should happen, that the " disconted natiues will be forward to disturbe the " peace of his Maiesties kingdom, and all his good " subiects in itt. Wee are prepareinge the best we " cann to whether such a storme, should God permitt " itt to fall on us; butt in regard timely intelligence " is essentially requissitt, and that the countie of " Kierry is one of the most suspected parts, and allsoe " that I knowe yow to be zealous for his Majesties " seruice, and verry actiue and vigelent, I write this " expresly to yow, and send itt to Sir Boyle Maynor " with a flyeinge seale, to conuay it safely and speedely " to yow, and to desire yow earnestly and diligently to " lay out for the early discouery of any designes " against his Maiesties gouernment which may be " brewinge in that countie, and by express messengers " (whome I will pay) to giue me speedie notice if any " thinge be discouered by yow which is considerable. " and allsoe to doe this from time to time. Who- " cuer yow shall employ therein that shall make dis- " coueries which are materiall, I will both see them " sufficiently rewarded and have their names allwayes " concealed. I haue seuerall such now abroad in " other parts who have allready brought me an " originall letter of an Irish officer in the French " service, of a great famelie neer this place, where he " enioynes his correspondence to list men secretly, " and to assure them they shall not want money. L t

" me knowe as soone as yow cann what yow judg is " the best course to keep the disconted Irish in that " county quiet; either (if itt should be judged fitt by " Lord Lieutenant) to demand hostages, and what " hostages, or otherwise. I write not to my lord of " Kierry, for I heare he is nott in Kierry; and I pray " desire Mr. Hassett, Capt. Henry Ponseby, Mr. " Thomas Crosbie, my coussen Patricke Crosbie, and " such loyall protestant gentery in those parts who " yow knowe best, from me to be aideinge to yow " herein for his Majestie's service, and doe it without " noyse. In all this your best care and diligence is " desired."

Earl of Orrery to Ormonde.—" Castlemartyr, ye 22 " of Feb. 1677. I presume to present your Grace with " a Treatise of ye Art of Warr, which I fynished last " springe, but could not get it printed off by reason of " ye cuts till ye beginning of this winter. I have two " excuses for this confidence; the one is that your " Grace was ye first generall who gave me a com- " mission to be an officer, the other is that your Grace " is ye last generall I haue ye honour to serve under, " soe that your Excellencie has a double title to this " booke. Thos who are not accustomed to flattery " assure me it has mett with a much better reception " in England then I could reasonable hope it should, " or then I feare it does deserve. I atribute wholy to its " being ye first booke on this subiect that has bin " published in our language, and therefore ye nouelty " more then ye treatise it selfe may be liked. Thos " books sent me over stayed six weeks at Bristoll, and " I have stayed 3 weeks for a conveniency to send this " to Dublin, which are ye causes why this meane " tribute has bin noe sooner layd at your Grace's " feet."

Earl of Orrery to Ormonde.—" Castlemartyr, the 10 of " June [1678]. From the time that I received ye honour " of your Excellency's commands concerninge the for- " fications at Rincorran, I have not omitted my duty " ther. Tho I doe not often trouble your Excellency " with accounts of what progress is made, I haue " every ten days an accounte from Capt. Archer (who " is very diligent) what they doe, and a draft of what " is done from ten dayse to ten dayse. But I never knew " till of late that ye lower batteries were generally " about 14 foot above high water marke at platforme " high, at which I was troubled, because ye cannon " in them must shoot under-mettle to doe execution on " any ships of ye enemy, for usually men of warr which " atempte shippinge in a harbour fall in about ¾ flood, " that if in 2 or 3 houres they succeed not they may " have ye ebb to carry them out. And at ye water " risinge about 14 foot, the cannon wilbe at ¾ flood " aboute 17 foot higher than ye water, which is higher " than ye hull of most men of warr. I could not see " this in Mr. Robinsons platt, for in it was no proof " of ye batteries, nor indeed could be, because they " were neither to have rampart or graff. But when at " my desyr to Capt. Archer he sent me howe euery part " of ye worke did rise from ten dayse to ten, I found " ye batteries were 14 foot high at platforme height, " on which I writt instantly my apprehensions to him, " and my thoughts that a battery might easily be raisd " for 8 cannon neere high water marke, the lengthe of " ye curtaine 18 I., which would doe most execution. " This is begun, but ye most part towards ye shoulder " G. is a thicker and a harder rock then towards ye " east end by ye shoulder K. But what Capt. Archer " writt to me yesterday, and ye pla he sent me, and " my answer to his letter, I humbly present to your " Excellencie. And upon ye whole beg your Graces " orders for the followinge particulars, and such others " as your Excellencie shall judge fitt. First, whether " Capt. Archer shall begin to imploy his masons and " labourers on ye bastions 1 & 2, that is, begin ye maine " forte. Secondly, whether it be not more advisable to " compleate ye crowne worke on ye 4 sides MA., AE., " EL., and RN., before we goe on any thinge of ye maine " forte; for tis the crowne worke only which is ye " security of ye harbour, and ye forte is to secure the " crowne worke from ye landward. 3ly. It is now " time to know your Graces pleasure whether or noe " your Excellencie will soone proceed on ye mayne " forte, for if you resolue to goe on with ye forte, our " next worke must be on the ravelin 3, and ye bastions " 1 & 2 of ye forte. Wheras if your Excellencie will " not soone goe on with ye forte, in my humble " opinion we should with speed goe upon ye shuttinge " up of the crowne worke between N and M soe as to " make ye crowne worke defensible by land, as well as " usefull for ye safety of ye harbour; and also that ye " works which shall shutt it up betweene N and M may " be, with as little charge as we can deuise, cast downe " again when ye maine forte is gon upon, the resolution " of carryinge of which on I hope and beg may not be " out of your thoughts. If ye present shuttinge up " ye crowne worke be orderd by your Grace, and that " you thinke fitt to leave ye manner of doeinge it to " Capt. Archer and your seruant, we will contriue in " ye best we can; and if this be your Excellencys " pleasure, I wish Mr. Robinson could be spared in " a few dayse to be with us, that we might also have " his advice, which to me is very desirable. Your " Grace will see how pressinge Capt. Archer is to haue " me to goe to Rincorron (but as to his opinion of " my skill I looke on it meerly as a compliment), " and therfore, if I am able, I intend to goe rather " then ye worke shoulde be at a stand, or that my " little assistance and aduice should be wantinge. My " unhappy distemper is such that I am still carryed in " a chaire, and therfore cannot be carryed up stares " that are not very broad and easy; my brother Shan- " non therfore has provided me at his howse a lower " rome, and all thos conveniencies which necessity has " made me inuent in my owne howse and his howse " beinge but 8 mile from Rincorron, I intend to ly " ther and goe in ye morninge early to Rincorron, " and returne at night to my brothers. I therfore " beg your Excellencys commands on the aboue par- " ticulars, and that I may order ye sinkinge of that " battery for ye 8 cannon if I finde it compassable with " noe greate expense, for that little battery wilbe highly " usefull. I beg also your Excellencys commands " whether you will allow me then to name ye crowne " worke, and what name your Excellencie will order " shalbe giuen to ye forte. Ther has bin last weeke " much heate and dispute betweene ye magistrats of " Kinsale and ye soldiery at Rincorran, and Capt. Archer; " for workmen have bin arested on ye works by execu- " tion out of ye Tolsell of Kinsale, which both Capt. Ar- " cher and Capt. Hamon haue resented, and ye arested " person has bin rescued. The soueraghan also sends " his officers to wey bread, etc., within ye Crowne " worke, and therfore their officers haue bin clapt up " on ye guard, which clappinge up on ye guarde such " as are civill officers I did much dislike. I spent most " part of yesterday in hearinge their ugly disputes, and " at last I haue pacifyed all; but I beg your Grace to " know what priuiledge shalbe alowed to workemen " within ye Crowne worke, and how ye magistrats, " Capt. Archer, and Capt. Hamon shall be regulated as " to prueledges within that place, which is within their " charter, but now ye king's forte. I haue made them " agree that noethinge shalbe done by ye ciuill autho- " rity against workemen or soldier before Capt. Archer " and Capt. Hamon haue notice, and noe thinge done " by them against townesmen but on complaint to ye " souerain. And I haue orderd that Capt. Hamons " sergeant who committed on ye guard for 40 hours " 8 under officers ye soueraigne sent, should openly " acknowledge his fault and desyr ye corporations for- " giveness, which both his Capt. and he are willinge " should be done, for it was a very ill action. We doe " very much want ye wheeles and axletrees which were " bespoken at Dublin, for we haue ye bodys of carriages " reddy at Kinsale for 40 ordnance, and I would as " soone as I could gett ye cannon mounted on ye plat- " formes, and both their brest works and embrazures " finished, that somthinge might be compleated of ye " worke, and the harbour be secured. I humbly beg " your Excellencys pardon for this longe letter, and as " soone a signification of your commands as may consist " with your Graces conuenience, least els ye work " should be at a stand."

Michael Boyle, Primate and Chancellor of Ireland, to Ormonde.—" Blessington, Aug. 17 [16]78. I must beg " your Grace's pardon that I forgot in my letter of " this dayes date to your Grace to give your Grace " intimation that Sir Maurice Eustace being lately " here, he tooke occasion to aske me whether I had " sent any order about putting Sir Rich. Bulkley out " of the Com^n. of peace, according to your Grace's " directions. I told him that I had, to which he re- " plyed that he doubted your Grace had bin misin- " formed concerning him, for he had enquired into the " matter, and he found that Sir Richard Bulkley went " to his parish church as well as to the conventicles, " and he did beleeue that if your Grace knew so much " you would not deale more seuerely with him in that " particular than you would doe with many others.

MARQUIS OF ORMONDE.

" I made him no returne, but diverted the discourse " to another subject. Now that affayre stands thus: I " sent a warrant to the Hanapier to prepare a writ for " the seale to superseade Sir Richard Bulkley; that " warrant was returned me the same day that Sir " Maurice spoke to me, but I haue since forborne to " put the seale to it vntil I know your Graces farther " pleasure therein, for I suposed that your Grace's dis- " course to me concerning Sir Richard Bulkley had " bin vpon something that Sir Maurice had enformed " you."

Earl of Orrery to Ormonde.—" Castle martyr, 29th of " November 1678. I received last night at once the " great honour of both your Excellencie's letters of " the 23rd and the 26th instant. Your Excellencie's " commands in them concerneing Bantry Fort and " Major Beversham's Company shall, with all diligence, " bee punctually obeyed.

" There is noe place that I know of or can heare of in " Kerry that is tenable and of consequence but Rosse; " for I did believe (till my cozen Ed. Denny better " inform'd me) that Tralee, which held out so long a " siedge, was strong; but both his father, Sir Arthur " Denny, and himselfe have made it a convenient country " gentleman's house.

" I am very sorry to find by the honour of your Ex- " cellencies letter of the 23rd instant, that any haue " attempted malitiously and cunningly to cast the false " scandall on the Government, as that they wanted " zeale and care for the preservation of the Protestants. " I hope that such as haue attempted to cast the scan- " dall on it will be punished for it.

" Possibly some honest men, who love the Govern- " ment, being frighted with the daily alarmes, may " may have thought that the remedyes not being soe " hasty as the danger seemed pressing, may haue too " much lamented that the motions of the Government " did not keep pace with their desires, nor considering " how many difficultyes those in authority are to strug- " gle with, the circumstances they are vnder being " duely weighed. But malitiously and cunningly to " asperse the Government merritts an exemplary punish- " ment, which I heartily hope those guilty of it will not " escape.

" I most humbly begg your Graces permission to " assure you that, whatever former misvnderstandings " I might haue had the vnhappinesse to be vnder as " towards your Grace, yett, ever since the discourse " your Grace had with my brother Burlington at my " Lord Devonshire's concerninge mee, and ever since " those letters you were pleased to oblidge me with " soone after your landeing, I haue in all things vnder " my little power as vnfeinedly endeavoured to make " your Government prosperous as if that brother had " bin in your Grace's station.

" I was, therefore, pressing in the beginning of this " yeare, when most believed we should haue a quarrell " with France, that the militia might be sett up, it " being so great a security, and of soe little charge; " and I did then presume to acquaint your Excellencie " that severall who I know were fitt to supply the va- " cancies in it, had desired me humbly to recommend " them to your Grace, but that I would not doe it till I " had your Graces good liking to doe it.

" But to this I received no answer from your Grace, " and therefore I was silent, for I am not an importu- " nate sollicitor in things meerly of favour.

" Nor should I euer have renewed the motion had I " not been urged to it lately, both for his Majesties " service and your Graces. For I saw that the method " the raising the militia was putt into would neither " be expeditious nor soe effectual as I am sure your " Grace desires it should be.

" Since I think, without vanity, I may say, there are " not very many which know better then I persons " and the state of things in these western countyes. " And experience had taught me, that when the militia " was first raised, had I not bin armed with full autho- " rity, and bin very pressing, the Comrs of aray would " never haue done the worke, and if then it had bin " hardly compassable when we were quiett at home, " and had only the Dutch for enemies, in degrees of " proportion the difficulties would be vnconquerable " when every country gentleman and Protestant out of " a garrison goes to bed in feares.

" And since the militia is to be filld, and kept vp " when filld, by the influence the Captains of it haue " on the inferiour officers and private men, I too " easily foresaw it afarr, being managed only by the " Comrs of Aray, would haue a very slow progresse " and no expected resulte, for their number is 13 in " this county, and the quorum seven, five whereof " must still, of course, be merchants, or men of much " lower degree, and what interest such were likely to " haue on the numerous gentry of this the largest " county in all his Majestie's kingdoms was not hard to " determine. The rest, though gentlemen of good " quality, yett being really or in their own esteem " equalls, the advances therefore could not be soe quick " as the need seem'd to require.

" Your Graces long absence having much alterd " persons and things, it was naturall enough to doe as " your Grace did, referr it to a Comtee of the Councell. " But so few of any Lords who now sitt at the Board " having euer lived in this province, and that one noble " Lord onely who did (my Lord Chancellor) having not " resided in it for above 2 prenteships of yeares, I did " presume to think they might haue needed informa- " tion.

" This I take the confidence to belieue, had they " commanded mine, the Militia might ere this haue " bin in a better posture; but I love not to intrude " where I am not call'd, and indeed, my Lord, I retired " into Ireland, in hopes that I might spend the little " life I haue remaineing in this solitude, but seeing the " times grow cloudy, I was sendeing my wife for Eng- " land, and intended to haue followed as these times " did mend; but I was forced from those designs by " the vniversall application which the poor Protestants " made to me, and I assure your Grace they were " made without my own seekeing; and when I found " that my humble applications to your Grace in their " behalfes was belieued would be more effectual then " their own, I could not in duty but stay and make " them.

" Many were troubled, and I confesse I was one, that " tho' the beginning of 7br the horrid plot was detected, " yett till the 11th of November not soe much as a letter " came for setting vp the militia, and when it came " some of those to whom it was directed did not find it " answer their hopes or feares. And though it was " dated the 11th, yett they mett not till Tuesday last, " the 25th instant, and when they were mett, they " found many things soe lye in their way that they " resolved to imploy 5 or 6 of their number to me, to " desire my help and advice. They came here yester- " day, and I assure your Grace I was surprized at it.

" It had not bin soe long before I had written that " large letter to my Ld Chancr which he troubled your " Excellencie and the Councell with, but that I still " apprehended that representing what I thought could " only doe the businesse, such representation might " looke as I sought something for myselfe, or would " I ever therefore haue made it, but in duty to my " King, my country, and your Grace. This I solemnly " protest; for had I affected to be in the streame of the " world again, I could haue bin in it more advanta- " giously in England then in any thing I could pretend " unto in Ireland, and I should not lye did I assure " your Grace that my best friends in England, and " some in power, haue halfe fallen out with me for not " taking there two imployments better then the go- " vernment of this province. But I had seen and felt " enough of the world not to embarque into it again by " my own choice.

" But possibly written assurances may not be so con- " vinceing evidence of this truth as demonstracion. " Therefore I presume to acquaint your Grace that " tho' the 6 gentlemen imployed by all the rest of the " Comrs of array, findeing themselves at a losse how, " with secrecy, to apointe rendezvous for the militia, " and to order them as the King's service required, did " more then five times presse me earnestly for my per- " mission that they might move your Excellencie to " name me for those ends, yett I as often flattly refused " them.

" And because my Ld Chancr, in his letter to me of " the 26th, intimates writes something, as if your Excel- " lencie and the Lords had some thoughts of putting " that employment on me, and haveing some blank " commissions sent me to fill vp the vacancies of the " commissd officers vnder captaines; I most humbly " and heartily begg your Grace and their Lordships to " free me from that honour and burthen. Not but that " if your Grace and their Lordshipps comand my best " help and advice, to whomsoever your Excellencie " shall comisst for that end, I will most cheerfully obey " in both, and as zealously as if I were to haue the " honnour of the success or to beare the burthen of the " want of it; but really I would practically euidence " not only that I sought not myselfe in what I writt to " my Lord Chancellor, but also that I vndisguisedly

" covett to liue in that retirednesse which both my " mind and my body affects and needs.

" And if your Excellencie will allow me the favour " while I stay in Ireland humbly to lay at your feet " what I shall believe conducible to his Majestie's " service, your Grace's, and the quiett of my country, " I shall faithfully doe it, and be as intirely pleased to " see the peace and good governement of the kingdome " continued, as if I were wholy to engrosse the honour " and benefitt of it.

" I did not omitt both to ask of my brother Shannon " and others who were privately advised by a priest and " other well affected Irish, to send vnto garrisons their " best goods, what was the reason of their giueing such " advice; nay, I promis't myselfe to one Irish gentle- " man of Kerry, who warn'd an English neighbour of his " to desist from buildeing (the Englishman who came " on purpose out of Kerry to informe me of it) for the " times were likely to be troublesome, that if he would " discover any materiall thing of any designe of the " Irish, that I would mediate for your Graces par- " doneing, concealing his name, and rewarding him. " But all agree in one answer, viz., that these are " distracted times; that there are many loose and " necessitous people in the country, who are but too " apt to breake into houses and to robb things of value, " and beyond this none of them will speake, though " never soe much promised or threatned.

" By the words of your Graces letter to me on this " subject, I am apprehensive that some unhappy ex- " pression in my letter might have seem'd to make " your Grace thinke I thought you looked on these " advertisements as a jest; if they did, I am sure that " was farr from my thought, and I meant to say that " your Grace would not believe the priest was in jest, " since he durst send my brother that advice.

" I doe not thinke euer the late plott has been more " talked of in all these partes then the businesse of " Bennett's bridge, and the news of it dispersed by " severall creditable persons who then coming from " Dublin into these partes either lay or bated ther. I " will to-morrow send for some of these gentlemen " who with their own mouthes told it mee, and, in " obedience to your Graces comands, I will, in writing, " returne you what they said.

" Yesterday, about 3 o'clock, afternoone, I receiued " a letter from my brother Shannon; a branch of it I " heere humbly present your Grace. I am confidently " assured the thing is absolutely false, for had it been " true, I should haue had expresses of it last night; " however the noise is flown farr. I haue this morning, " early, sent an expresse to my brother Shannon to " secure the men, and to send to Captain Hodder for to " know if he told this alarm-bearer what he said he " did, that if he did not he may be soundly punished, " for it is such confident lyes that does make men half " distracted.

" I humbly begg to know of your Grace if lately one " Mr. Fitzgerald, of the province of Connaught, assured " your Excellencie that the plott would take effect, there " were soe many great persons engaged in it, and that " the Irish by the help of the French, would be masters " of Ireland by March next, for this has lately bin " written by a news writer of Dublin to two gentlemen " of this county, and the letter itselfe has been read by " divers, two of which, being honest men, come from " beyond Bandon hither yesterday to assure me they " themselves read the letter, and the noise of it has " much amazed the people. I assured them I was " confident it was a notorious lye, and bid them assure " all they spoke with that I was confident it was soe. " The letter was directed (as those two gentlemen told " mee) to Lt.-Coll. Mead and one Mr. Briggs. I sent " an expresse this morning to Lt.-Coll. Meade with a " letter of which the inclosed is the copy; for I believe " this one businesse well traced will find out those " who make the people halfe madd, and they, if well " punished, will deter others.

" The master of the Plymouth ship which came into " the west, and made it the Exchange discourse at " Corke that the Governers of Portsmouth and Dover " were fledd, I haue sent to stop, that he may be " legally punished for raising such scandalls of such " persons.

" The Provost of Bandon, and the cheife of that truly " Protestant Corporation, were heere with mee on " Wednesday, and gave mee a most sadd accompt of " that place. They haue not one pound of powder or " bullett, all their plattformes in their towers are " fallen, their iron ordnance haue been gone they " know not how, and the last great raines have carryed " away two arches which supported neare fifty foot in " length of their town wall. They did earnestly desire " me that I would relieve them all I could, and what " I could not doe, that I would mediate for them to " your Excellencie.

" I admired their ordnance were gone they know not " how, but they explained the expression thus. That " in the beginning of the troubles in 1641, Sir W^m^ " Hull and others who had ships lent them ordnance, " and that they were carried away without their " consents by those who did pretend to be owners of " them.

" I have this post writt to my brother Burlington to " desire him to contribute to make vp their walls, I " haue made them promise to make vp their plat- " formes, and I haue six or 7 Iron ordnance which I " kept for the safety of my family in the warr, that I " am ready to lend them to plant on their towers, in " case your Grace gives me leave. And in regard " they have in that towne a good militia troop, & 2 or " 3 foot companyes, if they might haue one barrell of " powder, and one of ball, with match proportionable " for their militia, it might serve till more might " be gott.

" The Mayor of Corke hauing sent me the deposition " of a soldier of the garrison that went formerly to " masse, but now is an officer's servant, one musterd, " that one Garrett Fitzgerald, a popish priest, had " since Auguste last in his hearing often taught his " parishioners that the king of England was only king " of the protestants of Ireland, but the king of France " was king of the papists; I sent him to goale. I haue " writt severall other things to my Lord Chancellor, " haveing too much tired your Grace, for which your " pardon is beggd."

Viscount Shannon to Ormonde.—" Corke, 17 Dec^r^ " 1678. I most humbly beg your Graces pardon for " this confidence, which is occasioned by severall letters " I recieued from my brother Orrery about an account " was given your Grace that I should recieue advice " from a preist to send my plate out of my house to " this towne. I do assure your Grace my brother much " misunderstood mee, and much misinformed your " Grace, for I neuer had advise or message or anything " like it from any preist to send away my plate, and all " I knew relateing to this businesse is that a cousin of " mine, called Dick Poore, liveing in a mile of mee, " advised mee to send my plate to Corke, being I was " alwayes ther myselfe, and my house very open, and " my servants very carelesse, and often rambling " abroad, might giue encouragement to loose rogues " to steale my plate; and one that was a preist's brother " sayd hee gaue me good advice, for now and then " there was but one servant left in my house. This I " assure your Grace was every word that was sayd, " without the least mentioning of a plott or anything " that tended to it; so that I have nothing to say " against any preist, and my cousin Dick Poore is a " very good Protestant, and I am confident as little " knowing in this wicked plott as myselfe. Therefore I " most humbly beg your Grace not to punish them " with your commands to wait on your Grace att " Dublin, for I know of no fault they haue committed, " nor haue I a word to say against them, nor is my " cousin Poore at present able to travayle to Dublin, " haueing been dying of a cold these three weekes. I " beseech your Grace to believe this reall account and " pardon this tedious trouble."

Earl of Burlington to Ormonde.—" 10th Jan. [1678]. " The honor of your letre of the 21^st^ of 10^br^ found me " laid vpp of the gowt, which has held me neer 16 " weekes, and falling most heauilye oppon my right " hand and arme has made them as yett vselesse vnto " me, soe as I am forced to make vse of a shee secre- " tarye to expresse the just sence I haue of your Graces " fauor in the obliging expressions you vouchsafe me in " it, and I hartilye wish that there had bin noe occa- " sion giuen you to lenthen it with any other matter; " butt much to my greefe I find that your Grace has " received great dissatisfaction by my brother Orreryes " late actings towards you, to which I was wholly a " stranger till your Grace was now pleased to acquaint " me with them, whoe presumes on your pardon if I yett " retain a hope that his intentions may proue less " faultye then they yett seem to be. This I say nott to " lessen his miscarryage, if it proue such, as your " Grace conceaues it to be; butt a great part of the " exception you take against him being for misrepre- " senting the state of thinges in Ireland to courtiers, " parliament men, and others heer in England, it is " possible a worse glosse may from thence be putt

" vppon his representations then he intended. Howeuer,
" I haue nott failed to lay that charge home to him in
" all the circumstances theroff as your Grace has made
" it to me, and haue therebye giuen him the opper-
" tunitye to say to your Grace what he justlye can in
" his owne vindication, or if he transmitts it to me I
" shall offer it to your Grace, who will I hope doe me
" the justice to beleeve that nott anye one action of " mine shall contradict the professions I haue made
" you of a constant and faithfull seruice, which during " my life shall be alwayes made good.

" I returne your Grace my most thankfull acknow-
" ledgments for your fauor in comanding a companye
" to be garrisond at Youghall."

Primate Boyle to Lady Ranelagh.—" Dublin, Ap. 14,
" [16]79. I am infinitly obliged to your Ladyship for
" the honour of your Ladyships of the 8th instant,
" which I receaved yesterday, wherein you haue bene
" pleasd to giue me the greatest argument of friendship
" that is expressible, by letting me know what in these
" busy times those who haue no kindness for me haue
" been pleasd to speake to my disadvantage. To what " your Ladship writes of Coll. fitzpatricke, I must not
" deny but that I haue a respect and kindness for him;
" he was a neere relation to my wife; he is one whom
" I haue long bin acquainted with, and who hath bin
" civill to me by many obligations. I must acknowledge
" that he had a more then ordinary interest in this
" cuntrey, and espetially upon his owne cuntreymen;
" but I must inform you that he hath euer had dis-
" agreem[t] with the titular Archbp. Talbot and his
" partizans, and (as I beleeue) shockd them more then
" any one of his perswasion did in this whole kingdoms
" affayres. Standing thus betweene them, why it should " not be reasonably supposed that I might make as good
" vse of him for the advantage of the protestant interest,
" and for his Majestie's seruice as he should influence
" to there prejudice, I cannot readily assigne a reason.
" But that occasion of offence is now remoued, for
" neere a weeke since he hath quit this place upon the " commands which his Majestie sent ouer for that " purpose uppon the address from the House of Lords.
" As to the Bills were sent ouer preparitory for a parlia-
" ment here, which your Ladyship are pleasd to tell me
" haue some reflection uppon me, I answere: the whole
" counsell that were in towne signed them as much
" as I did; every perticular paragraph and line of " them were argued with all the freedom that was " desired, as well at a committee as at the councell
" table; and when they were transmitted hence they
" were submitted to such amendments and alterations
" as the king and councell of England should think fitt.
" And how the protestant interest in this kingdom should " be designed to be prejudiced by those Bills is beyond
" imagination; they were to pass a Protestant councell
" here, a Protestant councell in England, a Protestant
" parliament in this kingdom, and what is more, a Pro-
" testant parliament whose fortunes were for the " greatest part of them made up of the new and for" feited intrests in this countrey. And how under the " test and tryall of all these it could be possibly sup-
" posed that bills designing the prejudice of the protes-
" tant intrest should pass, seemes to me a kind of
" ridle which I cannot resolue. Perhaps indeed there " may be differences, and by consequence mistakes, in " opinion; and some may think one way best for the " settlement of the intrest which others do not aproue;
" but that there could be any designe or intension to
" wrong the protestant intrest cannot be well conceaued.
" I must acckowledge that times are much chainged
" and the face of affayres much alterd since those bills
" were sent away; we had then no knowledge or sus-
" pition of any plotts and conspiracies by the papists,
" and therefore those measures which might haue been
" thought convenient at that time to perfect the finall
" settlement of the English intrest may be very resonably
" rejected now, and this lyes still before his Majestie
" and councell to consider; but why this should haue
" any reflection upon me, or upon any other single " person of the councell, I cannot apprehend; but I find
" by some letters out of England, as I doe likewise by
" the honour of your Ladyships, that I am discoursd of
" there by very many that I am a great favourer of the
" papists (whither it be upon the occasion of those bils
" or no I cannot say), or upon what other reason I
" cannot guess; truly I cannot recolect how the papists
" haue deserued any such kindness from me, unless it
" be by haueing bin as great a sufferer by them, euen
" from the beginning of the rebellion, as they could " make me. But as to the objection. If by being a
" favourer of the papists they intend that I am a
" favourer of there religion, it is a scandall which I
" disdayne to answere, since my whole life, conversation,
" and profession from my youth up untill this day hath
" bin a constant uninterupted testimony against, to the " utmost of my capacity. If they meane that I am a
" favourer of there intrests in this kingdom, it can imply
" no less then that I am a traytor both to my religion
" and my cuntrey, which is more uncharitable and
" seuere then the former; for to the former imputations
" this must likewise be added, that I am a mad man to.
" Few sober men designe against there owne intrest:
" that little fortune which I haue is for the greatest
" part of it upon the new intrest; I haue many children,
" and relations, and freinds, and those not very incon-
" siderable whose being and subsistence depends upon
" the acts of setlement and explanation; and for me at " this time of the day (being about 64 years old) to " decline the consideracion of my selfe, my children,
" my freinds and relations, for nothing but a vayne,
" aery, and impossible supposition that I should expect
" a better provision for myselfe and them under an Irish-
" papist intrest then I now enjoy, must needs conclude
" that I stood more in need of helebore to cure my
" madness then of any other conviction or reproofe.
" Besides, those who know how farr I haue been pub-
" liquly engagd against the pretentions of the Irish
" Intrest before the king and Councell in England, in
" my attendance upon the act of setlement for the Pro-
" testant intrest in this kingdom (whereof my Lord of " Orrerie is a competent witness), for I was then em" ployed by the Lords Justices (whereof his Lordship
" was one) upon that seruice, must conclude that I who " went so farr and was so successfull against them in
" the greatest concern that I had in the world (viz[t]
" there fortunes and estates), ought neuer expect any
" saftie, much less advantage, from there favour.

" Another objection which I am informed is taken
" up against me is that my two employments of Primate
" and Chancellor are inconsistent in one person.* As to
" the primacy, I must confess it was not ambition that
" put me upon [oblit.], nor any perticular benefit, for I
" was well enough before, and my advantage was not
" considerable thereby; but for reasons referring to
" the publicke it was thought fit that I should be re-
" commended to the see, which I submitted to, though
" with greater reluctancy then is supposed or will be
" beleiued by some. But as to the inconsistency of them
" together, there is doubtless no other argument then
" for the inconsistency of the chancellorship with the " Archbishoprick of Dublin, against which I heard no
" objection all the time that I was Archbishop of that see.
" Nor is there any difference in matter; for there lyes
" appeales equally from both unto the king in chancery,
" and it euer hath been so where the Great Seal hath
" been comitted unto either of those Archbishops,
" which hath been very frequent; and this satisfaction
" I haue to my selfe in that particular of apeales to the " delegates (for the appeale is not to the Chancellor
" himselfe, but to such delegates as shall be apointed
" for the cause, who are usually constituted of some of
" the Judges, and of some eminent divines and civill
" lawyers, and those are to be named by the consent of " both Chiefe Justices, of the Master of the Rolls, and
" of the vice-treasurer, or of any two of them, whereof
" the vice-treasurer to be one), that euer since I had
" the honor of serueing the king in the condicion of
" Chancellor, which is now about tenn yeares, I euer
" yet had any complaints against the proceedings of " the delegates, for all matters of [illegible] nature are " managed by persons of quallity [illegible] publick employment
" and in publick places. Madam, I am much out of " countenance that I haue drawn this letter into such
" a tedious length, but I presumed to doe it for your

* On this subject Secretary Coventry writes to Ormonde as follows from Whitehall, April 8, 1679:—" I doubt not but my Lord of Ossory
" hath acquainted you what hath passed in the Lords' House concern-
" ing Ireland, and I haue severall advertissements there are intentions of " bringing in complaints into our house. Theyre open complaints are " against my Lord Chancellor, but you haue your share by consequence.
" Amongst theyre complaints none is aggrauated more, and that by men
" of consideration, then his endeavouring to engrosse the greate charges
" of Church and State in his owne family. They think Primate in the " Church and Chancellor in the State to bee to much in his own person,
" and if to this the prime place of judicature in the law bee given to his
" sonne-in-law, the whole gouernement of spiritualls and temporalls is
" his, in that the present aduancement of Sir W. Davis would make that " flame that already smoakes, and it is the opinion of all your freinds
" heere it will bee of greate preiudice both to my Lord Primate and your
" Grace, and for the reason I told you in the enclosed note vpon this
" subiect some posts agoe. I do not beleeue the Kinge in a disposition to " agree to his promotion, though you should persist in it. But else I
" beleeve who euer you shall nominate will take place, though at present
" hee approoue of the two named in my letter. My Lord of Essex is not
" onely Commissioner of the Treasury, but is of the Cabinett councell
" and seemeth to be in very good grace."

" Ladyships satisfaction, and for the satisfaction of such " who shall discourse to your Ladyship upon that subject; " and I cannot doubt but since your Ladyships goodness " gaue me that occasion for it, your abundant charity " will pardon it."

Michael Boyle to Ormonde.—" Ap. 30, [16]79. I " think it would be a difficulty vpon your Grace to write " vppon any subject and not to write all that the subject " would beare. Your Grace's letter to Mr. Secretary is " so full to your purpose that very litle may be added " to it, or substracted from it, except in that one " particular which refers to me; wherein vpon the con- " sideration of present circumstances I must presume " to differ from your Grace's opinion, and humbly " propose that my Lord Arran may be named single as " Deputy if my Lord of Ossery doth not come, against " which there can be no other exception but his relation " to your Grace, and if that be looked vpon as an argu- " ment of any force, then it must follow that whosoever " shal be named by your Grace will be disalowed there, " so that your Grace doth vpon very good considerations " leaue his M^tie to his owne choyce for Justices. But if " your Grace should think fit that my Lord Arran " should have a colleague, perhaps my Lord Granard " may be now more acceptable, or free from exception " because he was once justice then many others. As to " my owne particular, I must acknowledge that I haue " not the least inclinations vnder the present juncture " to appeare more to the world then of necessity I " must, vnless it may be for your Grace's service.

" Pardon me, My Lord, that I do not vnderstand the " conexion of those wordes in the fift line of your letter " —And it hath so falen out that vppon my arrivall I " haue stil bin sufferd to be quiet—I beleeue the tran- " scriber hath omitted some wordes which render the " meaning somewhat difficult.

" Your Grace's letter to my lord of Orrery is mightily " obliging, and will certainly beget your Grace a whole " volume of acknowledgemts."

Michael Boyle to Ormonde.—" August [1679]. I " haue receaved a lamentable letter from Sir Brewster " from Dingle; he complaines mightily that the people " in that place are so apprehensiue of the Turkes that " they haue quit there houses and the cuntrey in a " greate degree; and if your Grace will not recover " them there heartes againe by sending a company into " Dingle to countenance them against the attempt of " that formidable enemy, he doubts that parte of the " cuntrey will be vtterly forsaken.

" Your Grace as I remember did promise them a " company; and that Corporation vppon your Grace's " promise have raysed 20^l to fit vp that castle for the " receipt of the souldiers (as he tels me). I humbly pre- " sume to become your Grace's remembrancer in that " particular, for certainly there is not a place in all " Kerry that stands more in need of a company then " Dingle.

" I begin my jorney towards Droghedah vppon Munday " next, and hope to be returnd vppon the Saturday " following. If I may receaue the honnor of your " Grace's comands, there shall not any person living be " more punctuall in observing them."

The letters of Sir Robert Southwell are among the most important and interesting in this portion of the collection.

Southwell was born at Kinsale in 1635, and was distantly related to Ormonde, by whom he was much trusted and consulted in confidential affairs. Through the Duke's influence, he was appointed in 1664 one of the Clerks of the Privy Council. In England, and by continuous letters he communicated to Ormonde when in Ireland all the important political and general intelligence of the day.

Intimation of the statements made by Oates to the Privy Council, on the 28th Sept. 1678, as to the alleged plot and intended assassination of the King and Ormonde, was despatched to the latter by Southwell on the same night in the following letter, still extant, in this collection:—

Sir Robert Southwell to Ormonde.—" 28 Sept. 1678. " Tis now after 11 at night, and till now almoste the " Councell haue been sitting and I dispatching away " 6 warrants to seize soe many Jesuites for a design to " take away the life of the King, to beginn rebellion in " Scotland, and the like in Ireland, which was to begin " with the death of the Duke of Ormonde, contrived by " the A. B. Talbott and 4 Jesuites imployd therein.

" All this information when the Councill satt on it in " the morning looked ridiculous, when one Dr. Tongue " gave in the informations he had gott from one Oates, " who from Protestant had turned Jesuite and now " lately repented and flew off to discover these things.

" But when he himselfe came this afternoone to tell " his tale, with all the particulars of it, the Lords stood " amazed, and could doe noe lesse than send for those " he vppon oath accused as comrydes, Pickering, Ire- " lond, etc., and Dr. Fogerty.

" And Sir George Wakeman is alsoe wanted to attend " the board to-morrow, for the councell will sitt on the " Sunday.

" By the next post I may haue time and better foun- " dation perhaps to enlarge on this subject to your " Grace."

Among the letters connected with Southwell's retirement from office in England, in 1679, and the arrangements with his successor, are the following:

Southwell to Ormonde.—" London, 6th Decem^r [1679]. " The enclosed letter from Mr. Francis Gwyn is to " accompany the news of my surrendering to him " yesterday my place of Clerk of the Councill. I did " acquaint your Grace this last summer of my [oblit.] " therein, and I have sinse been casting about with " some care to find a man devoted to the Crown, and " who would be obliged to be my rival in zeall to your " Grace, which were two indispensible points that I " sett my heart upon; and having lately mett with this " gentleman, whom I knew well fixed in the first point, " I soon discover'd that no relation to my Lord Conway, " nor acquaintance by that meanes with my Lord " Ranelagh, had the least impression upon him, but " that he was full of acknowledgments to your Grace " of favour done him, and resolved to do all things that " might merit the continuance thereof. I did not know " untill Wednesday night whether his Majesty would " gratify me and accept of him. But the joint applica- " tion of my Lord of Ossory and Mr. Seymour his kins- " man had an [oblit.] and as to me with a circumstance " [oblit.] very fond of. For I was on my own account " unwilling to be thought a deserter in this cloudy " time, and as little willing to cast any reflexion upon " the service by what I did herein, and therefore my " first request was, that his Majesty would vouchafe " me some imployment in his service abroad, and in " the mean time to lett me sell what I had bought " towards the discharge of my debts. And his Majesty " was pleased accordingly to acquaint the Board that " he designed me for imployment abroad. So that I " am still as a candidate to his service, and many wish- " ing joy to the promotion that is intended me. I beg " pardon that I do so particularly acquaint your Grace " with my private case, but having now for more than " fifteen year labour'd with fidelity, I was willing to " withdraw without reproach; and I thank God my " enemys at Whitehall are as few as my friends, which " is some good fortune, and I go with a resolution to " be always ready at his Majestys call, at home or abroad, " whenever he shall think fitt.

" I purpose about March to convey my family to " Kingsweston, to step myself from thence to Kinsale, " and soon after to kiss your Grace's hand at Dublin. " And his Majesty has allowed me, when I depart from " hence, to transfer the care of my place in the Excise " Office to Mr. Blaythewayte; and now my principal " care must be how to extricate myself from debts, ffor " till those be overcome my mind can not be at rest.

" Mr. Gwyn gives me 2,500*l*. But the place is much " better than when I bought it.

" I have the honour of your Grece's of the first instant, " and observe how the plott begins to ferment, or at " least the informations to encrease on that side.

" Certaine there are printed here in one forme a " multitude of petitions dispersed into the several " countys [oblit.] confided to certain gentlemen therein, " to go from parish to parish, and not onely to gather " hands, but to set down those that refuse, that their " good qualitys may in convenient time be made known. " The hands to these petitions in each county are to be " cutt off and pasted to one copie, and brought up by " ten gentlemen from each county, and so presented. " That in Essex there are already neer [oblit.] thousand " hands, and I am told that to-morrow the Confederate " Lords, under the character of councellors by birth, " will address to his Majesty, after coming from chap- " pell to sett forth in a few settled words the danger " his royal person is in from the Papists, and to advise " him to ascertaine the meeting of the Parliament. " Wee shall see what to-morrow will produce. In the " mean time it is now in every bodys mouth that these " Lords have not onely the concurrence of the Duke of " Monmouth, but the interest of the Prince of Orange, " that all cry allowd for a Parliament. And Penn told " me plainly this day that he saw plainly so much " extremity intended on this syde, as well as on that of

" [oblit.] that he resolved to withdraw himself from all " manner of meddling, since things to him appeared " violent and irreconcilable.

" This day the Irish Committee met, and having some " foresight how the Bill of Confirmation would by some " good friends of your Grace be called the Bill of un- " settlement [oblit.] was. I gott Mr. Secretary early " there with your Grace's letter, to testify how little you " were concernd in the fate thereof. The Lord Chan- " cellor also came there, who shewd those notes your " Grace had formerly seen, and when your Grace's " letter was read after the Bill, it was observd there " was no great difference between your Graces judge- " ment and theirs. So that they have aggreed to [oblit.] " that this Bill be layd in the chest, and that it be left " to the Parliament when they meet there to propose " what they think fit.

" I confess I rejoyce much in that fortunate letter of " your Grace's, which was the same formerly shewn " by me to the Lord Chancellor, and Lord [oblit.] as I " told your Grace.

" As for the other Bills, copies, [oblit.] appointed to " be made thereof, and given to the Lords, and for " such Bills as are taken from the pattern of England, " the difference, where any is made, is to be shewn; " and this is all that past.

" I thank your Grace for remembering my Lord " Courcy, and on Monday I hope to meet Sir Cyrill " Wyche about Rincorran."

Francis Gwyn to Ormonde.—" London, December 6th " 1679. After my allegiance to his Ma^tie, it was made " an indispensible article that I should be an humble " servant to your Grace. And vppon these termes, soe " suitable to the Rules of honor and of my owne inclina- " tions, I come to succeed Sir Robert Southwell in his " imployment of Clerk of the Councill.

" His zeal for your Grace's service I shall indeavor " to make my patterne, as your Grace is the great one " of all good subjects. Thereffore I doe with a perffect " and steddy resolution devote my selfe to your Graces " commands, and shall allways approve my selfe you " Graces most humble and most obedient servant " FRANCIS GWYN."

Southwell to Ormonde.—" Spring Garden, 17 Feb. " $167\frac{9}{80}$. It was agreed at the Cabinett on Sunday " night that I should goe in quality of Envoye Ex^ty to " the Duke of Brandenbourg, and that with all speede, " in order to some allyances in those parts, to knitt in " some better understanding the interest of England " with them, and Holland together.

" Thus much I heare without dores, having not yett " entered into the knowledge of my instructions. But " I perceive the thing arises from the Prince of Orange, " and that I must goe thither, and from him derive a " good part of my instructions.

" This expedition overthrowes all my private concernes " for the time it will last, and altho they tempt me with " a dispatch of all in 2 or 3 monthes, yett I know what it " is to reckon without myne host. My Lord Sunderland, " who moov'd the matter to me, would not lett my owne " concernes stand in the way; nor did I much struggle " when he once told me that his Ma^tys service required " me, to which I must ever be devoted and will sacrifice.

" The Treasury here seeme at this time a little pro- " pitious to me in considering what service I did in the " recovery of the Qveene's portion, and I think they " will doe me some good turne.

" I have not any thing more to enlarge vppon at " present."

Ormonde to Mr. Gwinn.—" Dublin, 24 Dec^r 1679. " Yours of the 6 of this month informes me in a very " oblidging manner of your comeing into Sir Robert " Southwell's roome in the kings owne immediate " service, and the particular advantage I recieve by " gaining one and not loosing another worthy friend. " I imbrace the offer and profession you are pleased " to make of your friendship, which I shall no longer " expect you should continue to mee then whilst you " find mee in all events stedy to the service of the " Crowne and just in my returnes to you. To your " letter of the 12 imparting transactions on that side " you will expect no other answer then my thanks, and " yet I shall pray the continuance of such informations, " because they do not barely divert, but may often " guide mee in my station. I will giue order that you " shall be constantly informed of all that shall passe " here of moment; for what has past no body can better " informe you then Sir Robert Southwell; and I hope " you will be appointed to attend the Com^ee for the " affaires of this kingdome constantly, which I conceive " will more facilitate dispatch then that your fellowes " should take their turnes and be put to spend a good " part of their quarter in lookeing over and under- " standing what past in the former. If I shall giue " this as my opinion to Mr. Secretary, I know not " whither I am to ask yours or your brethrens pardon " for it.

" As Sir Robert Southwell is caution for the per- " formance of your part of the friendship hee has " contracted betwixt us, so let him be for mee that on " all occasions I will bee your very affectionate, humble " servant "

Ormonde to Southwell.—" Dublin, 24 Decemb^r 1679. " Yours of the 6, 9 and 13 came all in one post barke, " so long wee were kept from knowing these trans- " actions on that side which must produce some great " change. God send it may be to the better.

" At my first reading the beginning of yours of the 6, " where you acquaint mee with your demission to Mr. " Gwin, I began to cast up what I was like to loose by " the change; for such thoughts will naturally have the " preceedency, lett us pretend to as much generosity as " wee please. But by degrees equitable considerations " began to take their proper place, and I now find it " is not just I should be sorry for what my friend " finds ease and conveniency by. So that I can hartily " congratulate your satisfaction, and that my sonn " had a part in obtaining it for you. I haue returned " what I think I ought to two of Mr. Gwin's letters, " and proposed not onely to him but to Mr. Secretary " Couentry that hee might be assigned to the attendance " on the Irish Com^ee; my reasons you will be made " acquainted with by both. I aske no more of Mr. " Gwin then the first caracter you giue him, of a man " thorowly devoted to the Crowne, for I haue ill luck " and worse conduct if I do not make such a man my " friend euen against the [oblit.] stations of allyance or " former acquaintances.

" The letter of mine you put Mr. Secretary in mind " to produce at the com^ee was very seasonably read; " and if speeches against the Bill of Confirmation shall " be made at the Report with implyed reflection on " those that sent it, I hope it may there be read againe. " It is hard that any of those Lords should not allow " any body but themselues to haue a worse opinion of " and lesse kindnesse for Papists since the discouery " of the plott then they had before; the oppertunity of " manifesting mighty zeale against the Papists by " declamations against the bill that seemes, and but " seemes, to do some of them some justice was too visible " to be [oblit.] when private interest came into the " ballance also. If wee haue a Parlament here, it is " most like to be about the time you propose to passe " ouer and see this place. In that case I suppose you " may without inconvenience be chosen for Kinsale, " and giue mee leaue to send for a letter to haue you " sworne of the Privy Councell."

Southwell to Ormonde.—" 24 Feb. $167\frac{9}{80}$. The Duke " and Dutchesse arriued this day at Whitehall; both " very well, and received with all demonstrations of " joy. But the king did forbid any expression to be " made in the Citty by my Lord Mayor, yett at this end " of the towne the Bells are ringing and the Bonfires " numerous.

" Monday next is assigned for my day of departure, " but before that time I hope to write to your Grace, " as his Ma^ty I think alsoe will in my favour, being " thereunto incited by the Lords of the Treasury, who " are so convinced of my care and meritt in the matter " of the Queenes Portion, that they advise his Ma^ty to " forgiue me 75*l.* per ann. of my Quitt Rents in Ireland, " which it seemes is the onely method left whereby I " can haue any gratification, and altho I am sensible " this will not sound well in Ireland, yett if I stay till " I offend noe body I may continue to labour 15 yeares " more, and never be the better for serving his Ma^ty. " I doubt not but your Grace will concurr with a power- " full warrant and authority for the thing, and obserue " to those that oppose it, whether they haue not in soe " many yeares of equall service beene better gainers " by his Ma^tys bounty then this amounts unto.

" I have soe long lookt after Sir James Shanes " deduction about the 12,000*l.* that I was even tyred " with a vague sollicitation before this Brandenboorg " adventure tooke me off; but I hope if your Grace doe " but enlighten the Lords of the Treasury in it, their " dilligence and authority will bring it to a period."

William Blathwate to Ormonde.—" Whitehall, 6th of " March $167\frac{8}{80}$. I humbly take leaue to acquaint your " Grace that Sir Robert Southwell sett saile for Holland " on Wednesday the 3d instant, towards the Court of " Brandenburg, and that before his departure he had

" left with me all the papers that were in his hands " relating to your Grace's affairs, which according to " his directions I shall keep and dispose as your Grace's " commands and your service shall require.

"The great hurry Sir R. Southwell was in upon his " departure hindred his giving your Grace this ac- " count."

Francis Gwyn to Ormonde.—"London, Jan. 27th " $167\frac{9}{80}$. Upon my comming to towne last night I re- " ceived the honour of your Grace's ffavorable reception " of the tender of my services, which I have intirely " devoted to your Grace; and although with great sub- " mission I must acknowledge my want of experience, " and a great many other good qualiffications which " my predecessor was master of, might render him " more capable, yet I must beg pardon to vy with him " in a steddy resolution and ready obedience to your " Grace's commands.

"I most humbly thank your Grace ffor the good " opinion you have been pleased to entertain of me in " designing me to attend the Comitte of Irish affairs. " I have already wayted on my Lord of Ossory to beg " the ffavor of his discoursing with Mr. Secretary " Coventry in order to it; and I hope in a little time to " giue your Grace a ffarther account, being very am- " bitious of being imployed in an affair where I may " more ffrequently expect your Grace's directions and " commands.

"I cannot give your Grace any perffect account as yet " of the proceedings; but I ffind there hath very litle " been don (except giving out orders), since the last I " presented to your Grace, in the Committee ffor sup- " pressing popery, the Comissions to the severall countys " being yet in hand and not perffected till there is a " regulation made of the justices of Peace in each " county, which is likewise now under consideration.

"I have inclosed His Ma$^{ty's}$ speech uppon the prorо- " gation of the parleament, and the successe and " answeres to the petitions ffrom severall places your " Grace will meet with ffrom other hands.

"The arrivall of his Highnesse suddenly out of Scot- " land is much talked of, and there seems some ground " ffor it.

"By the next I shall be able to give your Grace a " more perffect account of the proceedings of Councill. " And humbly beg this addition to your Grace's ffavors, " that you will please to believe that the profession I " have made is with all the sincerity, and the resolution " of resigning my selfe to your Grace's service shall be " kept with all the strictnesse that any man is capable " of."

From the present part of the collection it appears that the Duke of Ormonde and Sir Robert Southwell entertained the project of having published under their supervision a history of the affairs of Ireland from the year 1641, and on this subject we find the following in the correspondence:—

Southwell to Ormonde.—"[London], 9th October 1677. " I hope your Grace received the paper I sent relating " to the Prince of Orange. His Majesty read it here " with great attention, saying that, in the lump, hee " had heard of some dissatisfaccions towards his nephew, " but the particular sources of it were never made " plain to him before, and he fear'd that even his " nephew was not sensible of all that did concern him " therein. The paper was drawn by one Mr. Hill, who " has been, for some months, lately on that side. It " was he that writ the Zealander's Choice, being then " minister to the English at Flushing, for which the " States ordered his banishment, as a thing judged by " them of too much service, in that conjuncture, to " England. But, since his late returne, hee was en- " joyned to correspond with his friends on that side, " and especially to find out the general opinion touching " the Prince's coming over. Whereof, what his advices " amount unto and what is put down to his Majisty at " Newmarket your Grace has here in the inclosed " paper, which I hastily took, having his allowance to " communicate the same to your Grace, for whom " (though vnknown) hee has a great estimation, as you " will see. But first, as to the Prince's coming over, " when we heard that the States made some kind of " pause thereupon as a thing altogether new, and they " not consulted therein till the day before the arrival " of the yachts from hence. It was said by Mr. Secre- " tary [W.] that the whole business of the Prince's " coming arose from himselfe, and without any invi- " tacion from hence. And as to the point of the mar- " riage, it is a matter altogether as yet in his Majesty's " brest. A little time will now explain the whole.

" I suppose your Grace has heard of this Mr. Hill I " mention, and has seen his book of the Zealander's " Choice. He is a man of very good learning, and one " that is often with mee, and knows very well how the " world goes. And being a man acquainted with books, " and with the press, and meeting (among many other " things) with a manuscript writing the affaires of " Ireland, from 1641 to 1660, in about 24 sheets of " large paper, and pretty close writ, hee told mee hee " had never met with soe great a viudication of the late " King, in reference to the affairs of Ireland, or of your " Grace's government, as in those papers, which he " left with mee to read. But I, doubting my own " capacity, did think Peter Walsh would be much a " better judge. And hee, having read them over, does " assure mee that 'tis an excellent history for the truth " of all those transactions. And hee could heartily " wish, for your Grace's sake, that it were put in print. " Vpon this testimony thereof I discoursed farther with " Mr. Hill, and was in hopes that Mr. Walsh would " have dined here with him this day, or have conferred " vpon this subject. But hee was hindred to come. " However, this is the result of my conference with " Mr. Hill: hee says he has leasure and good will, " and if your Grace think fit, he will take upon him " to draw forth, in a more proper and acceptable " stile, the whole matter contained in those sheets. " That as he draws forth every sheet the same shall be " sent to your Grace for approbation and amendment " before he goes to the next. And hee will first alsoe " consult here with Mr. Walsh as hee goes on. And " finaly that he will take care to see it printed as it " ought to bee. And, says hee, when this is done, all " I shall expect for my recompence shall bee only his " Grace's recommendacion and good offices for mee " with his Majesty. I told him, as to this part, I would " be answerable if the work went on, that hee should " not be a looser. Hee does not tell mee who writ " these papers, but says it was a person of Ireland who " is now dead, and that in time I shall know his name. " I guess the papers came casualy into his hands, but " soe as that they are now his owne. Thus your Grace " sees what I here represent. And 'tis left in your own " choice freely to say what you think best. I will only " add thus much, that Mr. Hill is master of a clear and " perspicuous stile, and a man indefatigable in whatever " hee is to doe. And I conceive your long life and " many years of imployment, and variety of fortunes, " will deserve a little care, even from your selfe, to see " that justice be done. Since every man is a debtor to " his family, and 'tis not enough to leave great heaps " of materials behind, if they must be left to the mercy " of those who shall not imploy them aright; there- " fore I am soe far in the other extreme that I would " even press and importune your Grace to have sombody " capable of the work, imployd in nothing else (while " you are in the Government there, and have all papers " about you), to write the memoires of your whole life, " and if not to the world, yet to bequeath them to your " family. I know your Grace will pardon my presump- " tion herein, as being assured that I doe it with a " faithfull mind and for your Grace's service."

Southwell to Ormonde.—"[London], 16th October, 1677. " Your Grace will here inclosed see how far beyond my " last motion touching Mr. Hill and the peece I told " you off, Peter Walsh does go. Tis surely a matter " worthy of your consideration, and as such I will " attend your answer in it."

Friar Peter Walsh to Southwell.—"[London], 16th " Oct. 1677. I am right sorry it was not in my power " to meet Mr. Hill according to the appointment you " had made. For I must confess that brief history of " the main affairs or rather intrigues of the late warrs " of Ireland, which you had from him, would in my " opinion be more for the vindication as well of his " late Maiesty as of his Grace the Duke of Ormond " then any papers I have yet seen. It wants nothing " to make it extraordinary fit for the press but the " castigation of the phrase or style by a man of so " much leasure, affection, and mastery of the language " as Mr. Hill is. You tell me he hath both the former, " that is, leasure enough, and good inclinations also to " the thing, if encouraged; and I know myself, by what " I read of his some few years since, that he is master " of an excellent stile. Besides, I remember you haue " told me that he is a healthy, strong man, and of " indefatigable labour. All which when I had con- " sidered, I thought this also further, that he might be a " very fit man, and perhaps the fittest of any, all circum- " stances considered, to undertake a far greater worke " of that subiect; I meane the history at large of that

" whole unfortunat war, both as to the military part and " politic designs, and all transactions relating to it. " This I haue the more seriously reflected on, because " I see there is nothing of that nature to be expected " from Doctor Floyd, though otherwise the most ex- " cellent and fittest man I know to undertake it, if he " were not infinitely slow, irresolut, and weary presently " of composing. He hath, tis true, prepared all the " materialls, that is got together all the books and " papers necessary to begin and goe through with such " a work—nay, he has in his own cabalistic short hand " even a diary of that whole war—but after all, I haue " no kind of hopes that he will put pen to paper so " much as to begin the work itself. Which is the " reason I could wish with all my soul you would " effectually represent to his Grace my opinion of this " whole matter. First, of that small tract of four and " twenty sheets in writing, (peraduenture in print it " would not much exceed twelve or thirteen sheets), " that I doe think it a very fit and necessary fore- " runner of the history at large; and no time to be lost " in keeping it from the press. It will be euery man's " money, because so short and clear. Besides, it will " the much more be valued and sought for by reason it " goes through all the years and main affairs, from the " very beginning of the war to the ending of it by the " surrender of Galway to the Parliament forces. As " for the design I conceiue the author of that piece had " in writing it (whoever he was, and I am sure he was " in that work an honest, iust man to all sides), an " indifferent person would thinke it was no other all " along than both to iustifie and magnifie the Earle " and Marquis of Ormond as he descrued. Next of the " polishing and refining the style of it by him who is " the proprietor, Mr. Hill, as one that can doe it " exactly according to the mode of this age, in the " shortest and clearest periods: and of his abilities, " fitnes, and readiness to vndertake the larger work, if " his Grace approue of it, and command me to put the " materials into his hands, for Doctor Floyd will be " content with all his heart, as hauing no leisure nor " hopes indeed to make the intended or designed vse " of them himself.

" Lastly, that his Grace cannot purchase at too deare " a rate the time and abilities of such a man as were " qualified for so necessary and so much desired a " work.

" This is what I pray you to represent by this very " poste of my opinion of this matter. To which also " if you will add, that I heartily wish his Grace may " get into his own hands Mr. Bellings history as soon " as may be, and, if it be possible, the Protestant " Bishop of Meath's too, I shall heartily thank you " for it, and his Grace will take the speediest and best " course may be to speed in both. I think there can " be no more desired, besides what we haue already, to " begin and promise the exactest history that could be " wished."

Southwell to Ormonde.—" [London], 10th Nov. 1677. " Yesterday P[eter] W[alsh] and Mr. Hill dined with " mee. I returned him the manuscript, and hee will fall " to work vpon it, in the manner I have already men- " tioned; and they are to dyne with mee once a fort- " night at farthest, for the better comparing of notes. " I did venture, with Mr. Hill, into a discourse of the " whole subsequent history, as mentioned to your " Grace, for in this point nothing had been said vnto " him before; but he was not prepared for any other " answer in that matter, though I gave him prospect " of requital, than that hee would first goe thorow " with this small piece, and, if therein hee could acquit " himselfe to your Grace's approbation, hee would " then better know how to frame his thoughts to the " greater book; and I think his answer is not much " amiss."

Southwell to Ormonde.—" [London], 31 June 1679. " Our Zeland friend is invited over againe to be a pro- " fessor at Leiden. He is very well bent to pursue " that worke I sent your Grace so long agoe touching " the Irish transactions, and hath read many things " since uppon the same subject, soe as to be able to " enlarge what he hath already done. If your Grace " can haue any leisure to see those sheets, so as to say " whether the thing be worth your encouragement or " noe, I shall be glad to give him answer, for he seames " willing to goe on, and gett the whole printed on your " syde when it is done."

Southwell to Ormonde.—" The 5th July. I am told " that now the press is at liberty that one Dr. Burlace, " who lives about Chester, is actualy printing that " narrative of the Irish Rebellion which I sent your " Grace, and which Mr. Hill intended to file over. " This I had heard before, but saw it verified by some " epistle writ by one Mr. Piggot, who is chaplain to " the Earle of Darby, that corresponds with him, send- " ing a long fustian appologie by way of answer to the " libell in February last against your Grace, which " the said Dr. on the other side advised him to put in " print; but I have desired Mr. Mulys to obstruct it, " for that it excuses the matters that are objected, and " disproves none, tho' they are notoriously false."

Southwell to Ormonde.—" [London], 10th Jan. 1679. " I had lately a visit from P[eter] W[alsh], who desired " me to peruse a long letter he had writ to f h. [Duke of " Ormond], wherein he bemoaned the not having heard " any thing since his being on that syde, and the com- " fort he should have to receive a few lynes, but " acknowledging in the mean time that he did receive " the effects of former favour punctually continued " unto him. I did upon discourse so convince him of " the inconvenience that might happen either by his " writing or receiving of answers, that he presently " flung his letter into the fire. And further, to prevent " any inconvenience that might fall out in this busy " time, he promised to search over all his papers for any " letters he could find, having of himself, a year ago, " burned all, as he thought, but one. Yesterday morn- " ing he came to me again, shewing me two, which he " had found, leaving them in my hand to burn or dis- " pose of as I thought fit, resolving to extinguish every " shadow of inconvenience that way.

" The first of them is dated from Whitehall, 21 Nov^r " 1668, where somewhat is toucht of the forged autho- " rity of J. T[aaffe] (who was brother to the Earle of " Carlingford), also of the malice of mn. and the " Papists then raging against him.

" The next letter is from Clonmell, 30 Aug. 1674, " touching upon the recommendation of a certain writer " to Sir John Duncomb; then of his kindness to the " Remonstrators, who have been constant, and pittying " those that were compell'd to retract, enlarging upon " the interest of the English government, to support " those that were well affected to it. Then mention is " made of a large letter sent to the Lord Lievtenant, " etc.

" These two letters he has left with me to dispose of " as I thought fit, not thinking in his own opinion, nor " I much in mine, that they deserve the fire. However, " I keep them in my hands for a time, and to do him " right, he was heartily concernd to do everything " that I thought advisable in that point.

" I suppose your Grace has seen the Irish History " put forth by Dr. Burlace, which, being a quite " different thing from what Mr. Hill had under his " hand, P[eter] W[alsh] was very inquisitive to know " whether your Grace would never think more of that " matter, for if you thought the continuance of what I " sent worthy of the labour, Mr. Hill, though now fixed " in Holland, would be content to carry it on."

A key to cyphers used in the correspondence between Southwell and Ormonde is furnished by decipherments in the Duke's hand in some of the letters from the former. From these the following are extracted:—

Ormonde to Colonel Cooke.—" Dub., 20th of March " [16]78. According to our new way in correspondencyes " of this nature, let vs leave out the formalityes of titles " in the beginning and subscriptions at the end of our " letters. I doe not wonder that yours of the 8th in- " stant is the first I had from you a good while, or of " intelligence which you can best judge when it is most " usefull to your friends. You were in the right when " you supposed some of those papers you sent me would " be omitted by others, as that remarkable one con- " cerning Whitebread was; he seems to be another " Clancy in divinity, and like him is comeing towards " his proper period. In all your long letter I find not " one word of horse, hawke, or hound; not that I be- " lieve you have reformed your course of life, but other " things fill your head, and, perhaps, will doe till buck " hunting comes in, but then your old road will take " place. I am here in my old station, pelted at on all " hands; time was I was some where beleeved too " much an enemy to French and papists, now I am said " to be absolutely at their service, but I feele my selfe " just as I was."

Colonel Cooke to Ormonde.—" Wednesday, May 14. 79. " The Committee of both houses being mett, insteed " of theire proceeding to adjust the methods in order " to the tryalls, the Commons desyred an exposition of " theire last nights resolue in the case of the Bishops, " that they might playnely and cleerely vnderstand in " what cases they should, and in what cases they should " not sitt and vote. The Lords there present gaue theire " sense, deriud from the debates of the houses and words " of the resolue, but for their conclusue satisfaction " promis'd to report theire doubt to the house, and did " so, where the vnanimous interpretation was, that in " all cases relating to law the Bishops are to sitt and " vote, but when judgment on life and death is to be " given, then they would withdraw. The rest of the " day the Lords spent in perfecting and finishing the " Bill for tryall of Peeres in the intervall of Parliament, " which they ordered to be sent doune, and so adjornd, " it being too late to begin any new busyness. The " Commons seemd at first to answer the King's spur " with greate metle, in relation to setting forth a fleete; " but after the Lords had made and declard the inter- " pretation, they coold on a suddaine, adjorneing that " important debate so necessary for the nations safety, " and so remote a day. For althings else relateing to " that house, I humbly refer your Grace to their paper " of votes.

" Thursday 15. When the Committee of both houses " mett, that pertended expeditious way of dispatch " proved a delatory one, for the Commons not haueing " reported the Lords declaration of theire sense in " relation to the Bishop, which for want of time was " omitted, instructed they were tyed vp by their in- " structions not to proceed in any other matter till full " satisfaction was given in that of Bishops, which ad- " vantag my Lord Privy Seale presently tooke to ar- " raigne this new expeditious way of a Committee, when " had they trod in the old track of conferences all had " bin quickly adjusted. But since he saw no prospect " of such a settlement of affayres as was proposd, he " moud that they might appoynt a day for the tryall " of the 5 Lords. For it had no small reflection on the " Supreme Court of Judicature that they should be " ignorant of formes and methods they ought to ob- " serve in Judicature; but the whole nation greedyly " expected the tryall, also the Lords themselves had " petitiond for it, nay, the Commons had told them " they were reddy for prosecution, so that the fault " wovld singly lye at their doore, and how could they " answer it to Magna Charta that the King's free " subjects should be vnder so long a durance without " being tryed? But his Lordship hapned to be interupted " by a Bill of the Commons sent vp for reingrossing " the Records that had bin burnt in the Temple, which " being read and orderd for a 2d reading, my Lord " Privy Seale resumed his discourse, pressing for a day " to be fixt for the Lord's tryall; but the Lord Per- " sident, after he had magnified the greateness of that " Lord's parts, his courage and zeale for justice, craue " leaue at this time to differ, considering how impor- " tant a thing it was to setle that doubt of the validity " or invalidity of the pardon, which though he should " allow to be duly obtayned, and in it selfe without " exceptions, yet considering it was granted, depending " on impeaching, the whole frame of gouernement turned " on that single thing, for if that could be such a king " might be that would thereby shelter all criminalls " from justice, nay, and tho' there was but one pardon " now appearing, yet who could tell but that might be " the case of all the other Lords when this should be " alowd, the same Lord replyd, That could not be, for " had they pardons by them, they had made a plea of " inocence, and so disound their pardons. Therefore " moud for their tryall, where there could be noe such " rub, but the house seing euer one sett for the " debate, and it being late, adjornd both debate and " house till next morning. Amongst the Comons pro- " ceedings of this day, the most remarkeable was " (and possibly a more remarkeable one never did " happen, nor (I hope) euer will againe) that Bill to " disinable the Duke of Yorke from inheritting, etc. " It loades him with the guilt of holding correspondence " with the Pope and Cardinals (for the subversion of " our religion), nay, and to be consenting to the death " of the king, etc., not onely disinheriting him, but " vtterly banishing him, and make it treason so much " as to correspond with him, nay, to oune him the right- " ful heyre, etc. Munday is the next day (as I vnder- " stand) for the second reading. Some strugled to haue " delayd the first reading, vrgeing the thinness of the " house, occasioned by a dog match at Hampton Court, " and a horse match at Bansteed downes; but no argu- " ments could stem the tyde, but read it was. Now one " word of sporte. At Bansteed 12 horses run for 3 " plates, a plate a heate, where Roger Pope's horse " threw and bruisd him, and Tom Wharton threw him, " and he was taken up for dead, yet is alive againe, but " much battered, and this they call sport. The Duke of " Monmouth escaped narrowly; there was so vast a " crowde, no other could be expected. My providence " (to which success makes me sachrifise) kept me from " being a jocky, to avoyd which I avoyded the very " place.

" Fryday 16. The Lords receaud another report " from their members of the Committee of both houses, " that the Commons did adhere, and would not enter " upon the debate of any other methods till they are " fully satisfied as to the Bishops withdrawing at all " the tryalls. Some looked on this as too much im- " poseing on the Lords, and against the ingagment " of the Commons, an intermedling in judicature; " others (according as their judgment lead them) ad- " vocating for it; but this brought on the adjorned " debate again, it being vrged that if the Commons " would be resty that could not excuse a fayler of " justice in the Supreme Court of Judicature, nor " could they be so ignorant of theire oune methods in " such tryall as to need consulting the Commons. " Therefore it was moud that a day of tryall ought to " be appoynted, and at the debate of this contro- " versie there was mutuall caleing to the barr be- " tweene the two great Lords, the Lord persidant and " privy seale. The latter tooke (it seemes) offense at " two expressions, the first that the Earle of Danby's " pardon was cald an arbitrary pardon; the other, that " in agrauateing the crimes of the Earle of Danby be- " yond those of the other 5 Lords, this expression " hapned, that the Earle of Danby is a great man still. " This was wrested to asperse the king, and had bin " so construed, had not my Lord Hytesburys notes " cleard my Lord Shaftsbury, by whom he sate, that " the words only were, he may be a great man still; " some observd, that was one sure way to make one " less, by the head, and that the same was a sure way " to preuent greatness, which it seemes was the great " crime. But my Lord Essex would not allow that all " the crimes of which my Lord Danby stood impeacht " of, tho neuer so true, could equall theires, who " sought the murther of the king, the chang of re- " ligion, and subversion of the gouernement. After all " the struglings and fencings by the greate masters " of that art, came that common end of all debates in " parliament, the by which it was carryd by " fower to one, that on Thursday next the 5 popish " Lords shall come to theire tryalls, and so adjornd. " The Commons (as theire votes and former resolutions " shew) did litle; nothing of importance. I forgett, " that as soone as the was ouer ruld for the " tryall of the 5 Lords, the Bishops desyrd leaue to " withdraw at the tryall, which was granted accordingly; howeuer, they lodgd theire clayme of right. " This day the Lords began with priuate bills, till in " a fuller house they receaud the report from theire " part of the Committee of both houses, that the Commons were not satisfied with the order for the tryall " of the 5 Lords, nor the Bishops withdrawing in theire " case, but expected it; they also expected it should be " ownd that the Lords had no right to sitt on any of " the tryalls, the contrary being implyed from theire " lodging their clayme to it; they also expected the " Earl of Danby should first come to his tryall, becaus " they had demanded judgment against him alreddy, " and that till they were satisfied fully in that perticular relateing to the Lords Spirittuall they would " not proceed to adjust the methods of the tryalls. " This inflamd the and made the Lords not " only adhere to their resolution of trying the Lords " on Thursday next; but they also ordered theire Committee of privilidges to sitt this afternoone to debat " and consider former president, in order to the methodeizing the tryall; and that they might haue the " more time, they rose the earlyer. The Commons " I leaue to speake for themselues in their votes. What " I infer from both houses is, that we are almost run " a ground, for the Commons are determind to trye " the Earl of Danby first, the Lords haue ordered (as " they conceaue they had right to doe) the tryall of " the 5 Lords first. Again, the Commons are not content that the Lords spirituall should withdraw and " lodg theire claymes, but would haue the Lords confirme their vote, that the Lords haue no right to sitt " in such judicatures. And I realy belieue the Lords " are determind to yeald in neither. We are on the " very brinke of confusion. I haue sent your Grace the " copey of the bill against the Duke of Yorke. I wish " it were better written, that it might not create a " double trouble."

Colonel Cooke to Ormonde.—" Hignam, Aug. 4, [16]79. " I receaued your Graces of June the 7, by that slow " but sure messenger, Will: Fleetwood, the end of last " month, on whose account, as also his brother Gustauuses (besides the numberless numbers on my owne), " I humbly acknowledg my selfe vnder many obligations, yet do presume on your Graces goodness to " repeate my addresses for the continuance of your " fauor to them both, chiefly the latter, as most helpeless, and consequently the greater object of charity. " I shall remitt to Will: Fleetwood when his infirme " carcas reaches his Irish home againe, to be accountable to your Grace for my melancholly expense of my " time betweene my brother's parke and Deane Forest, " and how euery meale your Graces health floates in " good briske small beare. I realy designd to haue surprizd your Grace with an Irish visit, and had done it " had not a double misfortune and obligation obstructed " me—first, Jack Howes death, and next, my Lord " Poulett's, both leaueing me as executor, and though " both left a plentyfull, yet a distracted fortune behind " them. I question not her Graces managery at Kilkenny and Dunmore, no more then I do that the " splendor of each place is enough to tempt an envious " Irish rebell to destroy, and an ambitious French " monsr to injoy; but hope I shall neuer liue to see " the proprietor changed, no, not for my Lord Ossory " himselfe, as well as I loue him. I can not sufficiently " express my brother's gratefull reesntment of the " honour he receaues by your graces remembrance of " him; but as for the Cambrabrittane at his welch " enchanted Castle, and his Redbrest wife, I shall next " weeke trye how they can undergoe so great a load of " honour as your grace hath bin pleasd to lay on them. " If my next letters giues an account that either or " both, which is probable enough, haue remoud their " lodgings from Llanoyhangell-killcornewell, near vnto " Skenadvaure, in Lindithobatholy parish into Newbedlum, persume pride is the caus, and your selfe the " causor. To your Graces wishes I owne my protection; " my sport hath bin great, my falls few and soft. For " my other satisfactions your Grace hath added to your " charitable wishes, 'tis in your owne power to make me " most happy, since I am not capable of a greater " honour or satisfaction then to be ownd by your Grace " as absolutely your owne to all intents and purposes, " and as so freely to be commanded and disposed of by " your Grace."

ColonelCooke to Ormonde.—" London, Nou. 18, [16]79. " A monsterous nationall concerne of a greyhound " match between the D: of Albemarle and Sir Ralph " Dutton, obligeing my judgship to appearr hear, giues " me a specious pretence of addressing to your Graces, " That if any jorney worke of any sort is cutt out I " may have your Graces custome. As for newes, some " is too dangerous and some too doubtfull to be written. " Of the former sort, I darr not so much as thinke; of " the latter, the two maine poynts are, whether a parliament or no parliament, or whether a League " offensiue and defensiue. They say that my Lord Esex " last wednesday moud in Councill that his Majesty " would be pleasd to satisfie the longings of his people " by some assurance of that kind, and that Roberts, " Cauendish, Sir. H. Caple, etc. seconded it, but the " king should answer, he had not yet thought of it. " As to the other, the two riuals for our strict allyance " are France and Holland. We belieue the former are " the franker chapmen, and consequently will carry it; " and the greater the allyance the greater the sum; so " that it comprehends all enemys, both domestick and " forraigne. And some resolue the niceness of touching French money to be the reason that makes my " Lord Esex squeasy stomach, that it can no longer " digest his imployment of first Comr of the Treasury, " who certainly is quitting his seate in that chambers, and " Mr. Hyde (now makeing Viscount Killingworth) is to " step out of his owne into it, being next to it, and that " Sir Steph: Fox makes up the number of 5. One " passage I must repeate, whose truth was affirmd to me " yesterday, that Lord Hollyfax, at his comeing lately " to towne, sent for his excuse why he did not wait on " Lord Shaftesbury that he had a seuere fitt of the " strangury, who sent him back word he mistooke his " desease, that it was Ormond lay very heavy cross " his stomaik, and he could neither gett it up nor " downe. But to leaue these constrained forced discourses, I craue leaue to returne to what is more " naturall and easy to me. Yesterday the two great " antagonists for the lawrell of being the best greyhound master (Albemarle and Dutton) have matchd " fiue greyhounds for 100*l.* each dog, and one more, the " odd match to be run the first day the weather will " permitt. The iudg for both, I haue backt my countryman with 55 ginys. Of the sucesse your Grace " may expect a perfect account heare after; as also of " all things else dureing my stay heare that shall happen to my knowledg, and be judgd worthy your " Graces. And becaus Lindsey house is lett, as I " greedyly couet your Graces comands, so I humbly " beseech, for the future, that they may be directed " to my new correspondent, my Lord Oxford's porter, " at his Lordship's house in St. Jame's Square; as " also your Grace's beliefe that as they shall be joyfully receaud, so they shall be reddyly obayd."

The letters and papers of the commissioners and lawyers entrusted by Ormonde with the arrangements connected with his lands and properties in England and various parts of Ireland abound in details illustrative of progress and social economy in the 17th century. While absent from Ireland, Ormonde's chief confidential adviser on his affairs was his step-brother, George Mathew, of Thomastown.

Of the woollen manufacture and trade in Ireland much information is derivable from the letters here of Colonel Richard Lawrence, who was appointed manager of a factory established by the Duke of Ormonde near Dublin. The following paper, submitted by him to Ormonde in 1677, gives the heads of a treatise which he subsequently published with modifications in 1682, under the title of " The Interest of Ireland in its Trade " and Wealth stated:"—

" Irelands Improver,

" Or the interest of Ireland, in its trade and wealth " discussed in two bookes.

" 1st Booke.

" Cap. 1st. From the policy of its Government, so " far as it relates to the advantages and disadvantages " of its trade and wealth.

" (2.) Of its forraighne trade, with some expedients " for its regulation and increase.

" (3.) Of manufactureing, the growth of the country " to the highest improvement.

" (4.) Of the fishings of Ireland, with the great benefit " other countryes makes thereout, that wants the " advantages Ireland hath for the same.

" 7 Chapters.

" 1st. Of the husbandry of Ireland, both in the im- " provement of land and stock.

" Of planting of timber and fruit trees, with the art " of gardening, wherein observations are made of the " differing nature and soyle of England, and directions " accordingly.

" 3. Of experiments not common, as the planting " and propagateing of woad, mader, liquorish, hops, " saffron, with observations of the difficultyes attending " those attempts, proper to Ireland, above England.

" 4. Of country recreations, as hawking, hunting, " fishing, and fowling.

" 5. Of good huswifry, in the right ordering of butter, " and chees, bacon, wax, and honey, for forraighn " markets.

" 6. Of distilling, preserving, and conserving, with " the right ordering of syder, perry, metheglin, wines " of plums, currants, strawberyes, goosberyes, etc.

" 7. Of physick and chirurgery, both for man and " beast, of the common known simples of the country, " with some receipts for cookery, and curiosity in " entertainments.

" Being the experiments of many approved authors, " and most of them relateing to trade and husbandry, " proved by the authors 28 years practise in Ireland, " abstracted from their impertinacyes and tautoligies, " and corrected as the nature of the climate and quali- " fication of the people of Ireland requires.

" By

" A well wisher to Ireland's prosperity.

" The contents of the first booke.

" 1st. Chapt. Of the generall and common principles " from whence all kingdomes and states act, in order " to the improvement of their trade and wealth.

" 2dly. Of the policyes of severall countryes, as " England, France, Low Countryes, Florence, and the " Hance townes of Germany, in order to increase their " trade and wealth, observ'd out of their laws and " customes injoyn'd for that end.

" 3d Ch. That the advantadges of Ireland are far " greater than many other countryes, who from small " beginnings have attained to great riches by increasing " their trade and manufacture.

" 4 Cap. Shewing the reasons why Ireland, not- " withstanding all its advantadges for trade and wealth, " is so weak and low in both at this day, in four sections: " 1st, from the unsettledness of the mindes of the people, " the Irish envying rather then imitateing the English " in their improvements, and the English jealouse of " disturbance from the Irish, discourageth their in- " dustry in improveing. Some expedients proposed for " the removeing of these animosityes. 2d Sec. treats " of Ireland's poverty, proceeding from the great ex- " pences it is at in maintaining forraighners, to its " peculier interest, in the most profitable imployments " of the kingdome, wherein is computed the vast sums " of money that have been drain'd from it since the " year 1660.

" (First.) By speciall grants upon the Treasury.

" 2dly. By the Commissioners and officers of the " Court of Claimes.

" 3dly. By the severall setts of farmers and contrac- " tors, with their Commissioners and officers of " the king's Revenue.

" 4thly. By the severall changes of the hands of the " Chief Governours, their attendants, and dependants " upon them; computeing so great a summe of " money drain'd from the kingdome hereby would " make a rich country poore, much more keep a " poore country low.

" 3d Sec. containes some reflections upon the Duke " of Ormond's government, wherein is observ'd the " condition his Grace found this kingdome in, at his " arrivall in the year , and the state he left it in in " the year 1669, and the condition he found it in at his " returne 1677, as to trade and wealth. 4th Sec. treats " of other causes of the nation's poverty, as the bad " payment the gentlemen makes to the tradesmen; the " universall liberty people of all ranks takes of wearing " silk and other forraighn manufactures; the multitude " of idle unprofitable people, that, like drones in the " hive, consume the honey others brings in, with ex- " pedients for remidyes.

" 5th Chap. reflects upon the ancient policy of the " Crown, in governing Ireland by noblemen of Eng- " land, rather then English noblemen of Ireland, and " considerations whether the reasons first moveing to " that policy in the government be not alter'd on the " other hand; wherein is observ'd how much the in- " terest of the Chief Governour sways in all govern- " ments, and consequently whether it be not his " Majesties interest, as well as his kingdomes, to " farme his revenue to his subjects of that his kingdome, " or at least to injoyn his farmers to manadge their " farme by such Commissioners, who are interested for " its common good, and better understands the con- " dition thereof then strangers, who hath no interest " but their sallary and profits by the farme, which they " will squees out of the people, without respect to future " good or hurt, for when they have made themselves " never so odious to the people, and ruin'd the trade of " the kingdome, they are gone with their gaines, and " hears no more of it, which persons of estate and " interest in the country, when they must abide, would " dread to doe."

In connexion with the attempts to establish woollen manufacture in Ireland are the following:—

Doctor Desfontaines, Physician General of the Army of Ireland, to Captain Mathew at Kilkenny.—" Dublin, " ye 28th of March 1671. Being in London about a " yeare agon, I had the honeur to see his Grace the " Duke of Ormond, who made me understand that he " had a great desire to settle french Marchants in " Carick, to sett up a manyfacture, and to bring in " trading to that contrey, which I have indeauoured " so to do, having a very great passion to serue his " Grace, and to that purpose haue engaged seuerall " french Marchants to go and abide att Carick, being " induced to it by the protection and generosity of my " Lord Duke of Ormond, who promised and sett out " aduantageus Articles and pruileges unto me and " them strangers that would go settle in Carick; so that " having written my designe unto his Grace my Lord " Duke of Ormond, and y^t^ there was Marchants re- " solved to go and take houses and land at Carick, as " well as tradesmen who have ingaged themselfs by " bond to come with me there, his Grace hath been " pleased to send me a letter directed unto your worship " for to treate with me and the others, and did lett me " know that his desire is that wee should settle the " trad'smen in Carick sooner then elsewhere. Therefore, " Sir, I do humbly intreat you to send me by the first " opportunity a note of all the houses and land that may " be disposed of in the s^d^ Carick, or in other places fitt " for trading, vid., att Rosse, Clonmell, Waterford, or " of any toune fitt for forwarding the trade. My Lord " Duke promissed me a dwelling place in y^e^ Castle of " Carick, and five hundre acres of land belonging to " the sayd place, which I hope you will grant me, ex- " pecting att y^e^ soonest an answer to this, and an " account of the scituation and being of houses and " land. Having designe as well as all the other " gentlemen to settle in the contry this springtime, " we do intreat you to give us notice where we shall " meet with you for to conclude an agreement, or to " order som man or another to do it in your stead. " You shall direct your letter, if you please, unto " Docteur Desfontaines, Phisician gñal of the army of " Ireland."

Edward Nelthorp to Ormonde.—" London, Octob^r^ " the 8th, 1674. Having allways (since I had the " honor of being aquainted) made it my cheife buisness " to contrive how I might be most servisable to your " Grace, obliges mee at this time to make these fol- " lowing proposalls. Being encouraged by some in- " telligent clothiers to sett up a considerable manu- " factory in Ireland, in which at least twenty thousand " pounds or a greater summ will be constantly " employed, for the making of the finest searges and " cloaths, and finding sufficient invitacion from some " other great persons in Ireland, I thought it my duty " first to give your Grace the preferrence. I humbly " conceive nothing would more conduce to the advance- " ment of rents and encouragement of tennants, and in " process of time to the great advantage of trade in " generall, and an employment for a great many idle " poore people, for they must spinn most of the yarne, " and by degrees be taught the whole mistery. Soe " that I leave your Grace to iudge the great benefitt " must necessarily ensue upon such an undertaking, " especially if it may have the kind influence of your " Graces asistance, which neither I cannot doubt of " from one that is soe great a patron and lover of " his countrey. And that which I humbly begg is " that your Grace would assigne this bearer, Mr. " Humphry Hill, such convenient worke houses and " dwelling houses in Clonmell as may be most proper " for carrying on this affaire, without paying any rent " for twenty one yeares save one piece of ffine searge " yearly, as an acknowledgment, I meane, for his owne " house and worke houses.

" And whereas severall ffamily's will remove out of " England as dyers and others, proper workemen to " carry on this affaire, that such convenient dwellings " may be assigned them at reasonable rents, as thereby " they may [sic] encouraged. That your Grace would " please to vouchsafe letters of recommendacion to the " Cheife Magistrates in Clonmell, That Mr. Hill and " other manufacturers that come out of England with " him may have their freedomes and libertys in Clon- " mell as denizens of the place without charge, and " have all encouragement. Allso that there may be " such by laws made as may compell such refractory " idle begging poore people to worke, and due punish- " ments ordered for neglects and spoyling of worke. " That the cheife manufacturers be exempted from all " publique offices for the terme of seaven yeares, the " better to perfect the manufactory. These being the " cheife things in memory which I have to crave of " your Grace, and what other things may further " be nesessary shall be intimated, not questioning but " your Grace will favourably grant your kind assistance " for the promoting of soe propitious a designe, and " that Mr. Humphry Hill may att all times have your " Grace's encouragement and protection, being the " cheife mannager, and who will more fully discourse " with your Grace concerning this matter, to whom I " refer your Grace."

Edward Nelthorp to George Mathew.—22 June 1675. " That which most nearly concernes mee, and conse- " quently soe highly oblidges mee, are your frequent " fauour and kinde assistance to Mr. Hill in promoting " the manufactory in and about Clonmell, and I must " intreat you convey my thankefullness to your worthy " brother, whoe hath shewed soe great a forwardness as " Mr. Hill informes mee, and since I am resoliued, god " permitting, to promote this affaire with all possible " vigore and industry, which I doubt not in time will " be very benyfitiall to all those partes, and espetialy to " his graces concernes, and I hope you finde such pro- " ceedings at Clonmell, as may amount to more then a " probabillity of a futuare sucsess, but wee cannot goe on " chearfully without your kinde influence in our futuare " progress. My lord Duke freely assuares mee the " grant of all I can reasonably dessyre, and that which " occurrs at pressent is the want of some wood out of " Carrike, if it weare but 10 or 20 trees being [sic]; the " other place you have assigned wood from is soe far it " will not quitt the coste in bringin home, and I hope " soe few trees will not dammage Carrike, being to " incorrage an affaire that may promote the reuenue in " time of all my lord Duke's concernes. I have allsoe " writt Mr. Hill to branch out the manufactory to Care " [Cahir] . . . Collen, but I must intreat you to " afford uss the contenuance of your kindness in letting " uss haue convensant houses and some ground for " incorragment. The Fryery at Caricke is very con- " uenient, and in time I doe intend small vessills to " saile upe and create a traid there; but I am very " loath to displace Mr. Smith againe, and yet I doubt " shall not be otherwayes accomodated to cary on soe " great a bussiness.

" His grace tells mee has writt to you concerning the " oppositione the Corporation of Clonmell giues Mr. " Hill, as allsoe howe to prevent other little manufac- " toryes that may be sett utt on purpose to distroy oures. " Your assistance in these things will giue me the " highest instance of your freindshipp and fauoure, but " the greatest satisfactione is that all you can doe in " this affaire will be as high a piece of searvice to his " grace and all the familly as it can be an obligation " upon your most affect. and humble servant, ED. NEL- " THORP. If his grace cannot spare trees of timber out " of Carik, I doe understand hee may by a letter pervail " with Mr. Hall he accomodated uss out of his wood."

Michael Boyle, Archbishop of Dublin and Chancellor of Ireland, to Ormonde.—" Blessinton, Aug. 17. [16]78. " I haue received the honor of your Graces of the 14th " instant; and I have read over all Sir Peter Pets " papers vpon this project of hemp and flax. I am " thus far of Sir Peeter Pet's opinion, that by a pru- " dent manadgement of the Act of Parliament which " wee haue already ,in this kingdom vpon that ac- " count, a very considerable benefit may arise thereby, " both to the king and kingdom; but Sir Peeter Pet " hath certainly very much mistaken his measures in " makeing his computations according to the proportion " of acres within this kingdom, wherein it is very " well knowne what a vast number of acres wee have " of bog and mountaine, and of such a sorte of lande " (viz., boggish and mountaineous) which may pass for " profitable lande and yet will not beare hempe or flax. " Nothing in my poore opinion hath given a greater " discouragement to the linning manufacture then Coll. " Lawrence fayline in his workes at Chapel Izod. " Eyther he must not haue vnderstood the trade, or " else he must be a gross hypocrite; for from his fay- " line the argument is thus drawne to the disadvan- " tadge of that manufacture. If Coll. Lawrence could " not support that small vndertakeing with all the " advances that he had of money from the Government, " and the continuall help of takeing of his linnen in " very great proportions for the vse of the army, how " can it be expected that any greate or considerable " benefit may be raysd by that manufacture? But not- " withstanding the force of this objection, I must yet " beleeue that exceeding much more may be made by " the linnen trade in this kingdom then yet hath bin " done, and very considerable advantages by the " cordage of the hempe; but I cannot as yet aproue " his proposition of shakeing any setled establishd " branch of the king's revenue for what is yet onely " in prospect and imagination. But, as your Grace " obserues, there will be time enough to consider all " these difficultyes before the 2d transmission.

" What your Grace's observes makes vpon the state " of the farmer's account I shal, according to your " Grace's directions, remit to Sir Charles Meridith and " vnto Dr. Topham; but I shall not presume to inter- " pose betweene them, for I must confess my vnskil- " fulness in figures.

" This last packet will carry your Grace an account " of a sharpe engagement for the releefe of Mons; but " I finde by letters from Whitehal that they have not " as yet any true relation of that matter, and it is " written doubtfully whether Mons be releeved or no. " But by all letters I finde that my Lord of Ossory had " a large hande in that dayes business, and it is sayd " that he is come off very safe, but they write that he " was taken prisoner, but released, and I do not in the " least doubt but he found the danger if there were " any. I pray God in heauen bless him and pro- " tect him. What disadvantages this discoursed of " peace may bring vs I shall not presume to foresee; " but this certaine advantadge it hath I hope brought " your Grace, that you have secured a sonne by it.

" Dublin hath very little news, but what is brought " by packet; and your Grace have all that to the ful, " it would be rude to repeat it. Our Lord primate " continues much as he was; rather worse then better. " I heare nothing of the Deane of Armagh; so that I " presume your Grace may haue some time to con- " sider vpon those matters. The bishop of Kildare hath " bin ill; he is now gon to Dublin for physick. I " doubt he is not long liued; he is an honest gentle- " man. My Lord Conway and my Lord Granard are " gon togeather to the North, as I do heare, for I saw " neyther of them."

Earl of Anglesey, Lord Privy Seal, to Ormonde.— " London, August 5, 1678. Haueing in concert with my " Lord Chamberlain fully considered of what moment " it may be to all the King's dominions, and to our " common safety and aduantage, that the designe of " planting of hemp and flax and makeing of cordage " and sailcloth may be improued in Ireland, and in- " couraged by the King receiuing some of his reuenue " and dutyes in those speties, your grace will receiue " from Sir peter pett, a person long versed in the study " and examination of that affaire, such measures thereof " as may incline your Grace to giue a rice to the " worke by the transmission of some bill from thence " in this concerne, wherein by a subsidy of sailecloth " and linnen yarne his majesty may be invited to ex- " pend the value thereof in money imployd to pur- " chase Eastland Hempe seed and flax seed to send " into Ireland to stock that country therewith, and " artificers for the trade from Flanders and Germany " and other parts, with their engines and loomes and " tooles, and to be discharged of the penaltyes alleady " incurred, the people will be the willinger to such a " subsidy.

" I doe now only introduce my thoughts to your " Grace in this affaire; if it relish with you I shall " second it with further notions for the promoting of " it and obviating obiections."

The following letters supply some new particulars in connexion with two important Roman Catholic ecclesiastics, Oliver Plunket, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, and Patrick Tyrell, Bishop of Clogher, and subsequently of Meath. Friar John Moier, or Mac Moyer, the writer of the first of these letters, was a member of the Ulster family, which, till the seventeenth century, had the hereditary custody of the ancient manuscripts known as the Canon of St. Patrick, or Book of Armagh. He was one of the principal witnesses on whose testimony Plunket was found guilty of treason at London and executed, in 1681. Plunket declared that Moier had made most false statements; that he was under ecclesiastical censure; and that he had been found guilty by a jury for "giving powder and shot to "the rebels." Moier, in his evidence, alluded to the informations he had furnished to Sir Hans Hamilton, to whom the present letter is addressed.

"Aprill the 15th, 1678. Hon^ble^ S^r^. The loyaltye of "a naturall true and reall subject towards his Royall "King, his fidelitye to his noble prince, his obedience "towards his heavenly Creator, his zeal and homadge "towards his earthly soveraigne, causeth mee to ex- "hibitt and shew my dutifull respects and sincere "obligacon vnto his Majestie, beeing altogether bound "with the rest of all his loyall subjects to the preser- "vacon and safetie of his peacefull realms and domi- "nions, as likewise beeing oblidged both by divine, "naturall, and humane law (wherever wee should "vnderstand the least touch conniueing to the ruine "or distruction of either king or commonwealth) to "informe his Majestie's officers and magistrates therof, "that they might the sooner prevent any evill event or "bad effect that thence after might succeede, which, "Hono^ble^ Sir, caused mee to make this my applicacon, "now secondly in this particular vnto your Honour "concerneing some more than wicked persons who "hath both by private letters to fforraine countryes, "clandestine operations, and private viewings of all the "fforts and castles of the moste partes of this king- "dome, done theire best endeavours to draw vs all "into a thraldrome and perpetuall bondage, regarding "neither God, King, conscience, or Comonwealth; for "first after as I did informe your Honour about a "yeare and a halfe agoe (which I seriously craue you "to consider how things as if by him just procured "did thence even happen), haueing really spyed this "realme, and worked in writeing to Rome, and last "summer beeinge a twelve-mouth, haveing alsoe tra- "velled and taken his course over all Leinster and "Munster, he trusted vnto many as true and faithfull "coadjutors in spyeing this province of Vlster, whereof "I doe certainely know one Byran Ma Poirke [sic], "titulated Deane, and now Vicar Generall of Ardmagh, "vnto whom hee wrote severall tymes, and had many "conferences concerneing these iniquous proceedings, "and especially he sent (I meane Doctor Oliver Plun- "kett, Primate of all Ireland, soe called) one letter "inclosed into Thady Fallon of Ardmagh, saddler, "desireing him to deliver it secreatly, and with all "secresye, to this Bryan Ma Goirke [sic], wherein hee "greatly blamed him that hee did not write to him "more than vsuall, and that he was very glad hee "spoke to my Lord of Glanawly soe stoutelie, and also "that he himselfe should then shortly keepe a Pro- "vinciall Councell, wherein hee was to confirme all his "cruell intentions to bee sent over seas, which now "hee intends to performe, his tyme being come to "fullfill his desire, as evidently by his papers your "Honour may judge; but the heavens may preserve vs "from all mischief, and if this M^c^Goirke [sic] bee "brought to question, your Honour will thereby know "these peoples wicked policy, for the Primate desired "him earnestly to doe his best whenever hee should "write to him to alter and change his name, and that "with a strange character, least theire letters should "bee surprized or intercepted, which they haue done "herevnto, for then hee did not subscribe Oliver "Plunkett, but Michaell ffletcher, and now hee vses, "beeing of that name discovered, to write his name "Thomas Cox, which likewise I desire your Honour to "consider. Secondly, haueing a chapter last all Saintes, "beeing a twelvemonthe, att George Bleerkes, his [sic] "the Primate went thenne to Kinard, where hee kept "another, and haveing stayed there two dayes, there "came one Patrick Tyrell, Byshopp of Clogher, a more "dangerous man then Dr. Plunkett in every way of "policy, who both went thenne togeather to the ffryarye, "beeing as they thought very private place to comu- "nicate with ff^r^ Shean o Neile, Guardian, then made "over the ffryares indeede against theire whole con- "sent, feareing these persons proceeding by Dr. "Plunkett's perswasion, judgeing Shean o Neill to "bee sonne to Owen Roe o Neill, Generall of the "Irish army in the late warre, made him his trustie "instrument in Tyrone to perswade the poore gentrye, "beeing much prone and inclined, as your honour may "really know, to be released, and very desirous of "being delivered from any thraldome, leaded by such "great persons of qualitie, one being Lord Primate of "Ireland, the other Lord Bishopp of Clogher; one "sonne to Owen o Neill, whose relations were Earles "of Tyrone, Religious and Guardian of Ardmagh, "whose teaching, incouradgement, and instructions "the common thinkes to bee very serviceable to God "and pleasant most vnto men, regarding noe justice, "peace, nor tranquillity of either King or Country (I "might suspect that this man vnder pretexte of "preaching doth privately sollicite when he thinkes to "bee more secrett and private to his faction); the "other Deane and Vicar Generall of Ardmagh. And "verilye I doe much suspect one Luke Plunkett, made "Vicar Generall of Raphoe, who vsually keepes in the "county of Derry; and Patrick Burne, of late made "Vicar generall of Downe, Connor, and Drumore, by "Dr. Plunkett. And moreover Guardian Shean o Neill "before his comeing to Vlster stayed in Dublin two "yeares or thereabouts, keeping correspondencie with "Captain Conne o Neill in ffrance, and Captain Bryan "o Neill in Spaine, both his brothers and bastards to "the aforesaid Owen Roe O Neill, who expects nothing "else but to gett their fortune by the sword here after "the ffrench peace with other nations, all which they "thinke to performe in getting this provinciall coun- "cell's answere, which last yeare was hindred by the "discovery of the afore related letter of Dr. Plunkett "to Bryan Mc Goirke, and now, shortly to bee kept, as "they judge haveing the greater libertie, and especially "because hee did informe many of the peers that it "was purposely to bee kept to cause his cleargie to "sweare fidelity to his Majestie, which is but meere "policye to gett libertie to further his wicked intent, "and make open the way to destroy both King and "Country to his vttermost; but God give vs peace and "defend vs from all cursed operations ffurthermore. "Hono^ble^ Sir, Dr. Plunkett sent an agent last yeare to "Rome concerneing these matters, who caused a deale "of monyes then to bee collected for that agent over "all the country, as he did this same yeare against the "Provinciall Councell, whose letters were then kept "with ffr. Phelemy o Conogan and Murtagh o Kelly. "And likewise ffr. Shean o Neill sent one of his ffryars "with a packett both from himselfe and the Primate to "fflanders about this tyme twelvemonth. All which "your Honour may as you are wonte always gravely "consider and piously endeavour to protect, defend, "and save him from these emulous and overseene "[sic] persons darts and mortall venome, who as "your Honour now, the Lord be blessed, did their "best to putt him out of date, and passe him away, if "not by God, your Honour, and truth protected, for "partely vnderstanding, knoweing, and manifesteing "these theire maledicted proceedings onely, who alsoe "deservedly will spill the last drappe of his blood for "your Honours creditt, reputation, and meritorious "glory, and am to death, Honourable Sir, your "Honours most obedient and most faithfull servant "to command, John Moier. To the Hono^ble^ Sir Hans "Hamilton, Knt. and Barrt., one of his Majestie's "most Hono^ble^ Privy Councell for the Kingdome of "Ireland, these. This is a true copy, examined by "mee, Wm. Davys."

"1st no^br^ 1679. May itt please your Grace,—Your "Graces of the 28th 8ber I received, in obedience to "which I will leave noe means vnatempted to obey "your commands. I am confident iff do[ctor] p[lunket] "coms to this countrie I shall heare off itt; butt I was "about 4 daies agoe tould by a popishe-priest, whoe "sume fewe daies beefor had gotten induction to a "parishe from him, that hee had left him at a certaine "place within sevn meiles off dubline; that hee had "cutt off his beard and haiere, had gott a leight cullored "wigge, and went by a fained nam, which I haue for- "gott, for then I had not had your Grace's comands. "I haue sent for the same preist, and will gett by dis- "couery ffrom him the name off the place hee resided "in then, and (as hee said) for severrall weeks beefor, "and will by the next giue your Grace an accompte off "itt. I am confident hee keeps much (iff not) in "dubline, yett neer to itt. I asuer your Grace if hee "comes within his owne pretended diocesse, I shall "meett withe him. I have laied out alsoe ffor Tirell, "whoe iff in this cuntrie or comtie off Cavan will alsoe "bee found, butt his absconding places I know not so "weell as the others. I humbly begg your Grace to "beelive thatt none will bee more cordiall or ffaithfull "in your sarvice then your Graces most humble and "obedient sarvant, Hans Hamilton."

"3d no^ber^ 1679. May itt please your Grace,—Seince "my last off the 1st instant, I mette the priste I men-

" tioned, to whoem I tould that I hadde a deseire to " send a letter to doct[or] pl[unket] in favour of the " popishe prieste off the parishe I live in, whoe the " said doctor was turning out, iff I might know weere to " send itt to him. Itt is possible hee may bee there " still, unlesse hee have been alarumed ffrom dubline. " I am resolved to send my parishe priest with a letter " about his owne concern to feind him out, for such " can best doe itt; butt I have laied out att all his " haunts in this wholle diocesse, soe thatt I am confident " hee can nott come thither butt your Grace shall have " a good accompte off him from your Graces most " humble and most obedient sarvant, HANS HAMILTON. " I have alsoe laied for him in the countie of donegall, " where he often lyes privett at a papist's house of my " name."

The following are specimens of the letters and papers connected with the movements of the Presbyterians in Ireland and Scotland, relative to which much apprehension was entertained by Government:—

Thomas Otway, Bishop of Killala and Achonry, to Earl of Essex, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.—" May it " please your Excellencie,—Though wee are far from " your Excellencies eye, yet we are neere your care, " and we with all thankfullness acknowledg in your " Excellencies appointing us a marshall to reproue the " insolencies of the Tories. I am forced to be a petitioner " to your Excellencie for the few protestants of these " parts, that they may be saued from Scotch Presbyters " who ramble up and down to debauch the people in " their relegion and Loyalty, which are as much more " dangerous then Tories, as our souls are more pretious " then our goods. It seems the Scotts in Ulster haue " their classes (or, as Hugh Peters more aptly desipherd " them, their Cl-Assizes), who like the Jessuites haue " their missions to gaine people to there presbittery, as " they to the papacy. Two of these Geneva calves " (Cleveland's Bulls is too bigg a tytell for these " suckeing presbiters) ware lately sent stragling into " these parts, one named Hendry, of Gragstown, in the " county of Donegall, the other Hallyday, of Rapho. " Hendry held forth within two miles of me to the " greate perrill of the apron-strings, which were much " endangered by the deepe sighes of the wastcoteers. " At this distance from the scheen of affaires I know not " what tolleration his Majesty allowes them; but I was " confident that no part of it permitts them to wander " up and down to peruert his subjects; whereupon I " apprehended Hendry, and found about him many " scandelous papers against prelacy, the common " prayer, and the ceremonys, which I thought un- " worthy of your Excellencies view, being but there " old crambe. I found one mallitious paper against his " Majesty, which I have, with a letter likewise found " with him, sent to your Excellencie, by which your " Excellencie will se some of their employers, agents, " and harborers with their pockett instruments. They " ride up and down the cuntrey like martiall Euan- " gelists with sword and pistolls, as if they came not to " prate down but storm our relegion. They are impudent " beyond sufferance. Hendry after he had left me to " be his silly herd—that he would not only come to the " assizes, but preach their. Halliday told the minister " who questioned him for his convenicle in his parish, " that he might preach anywhere, and that he would " goe to Dublin and preach in your Excellencies eare. " I know I shall be rayled at lustely for what I haue " don, but let them talke on, I will take care that they " shall neuer justly charge me for betraing Episcopacy " to presbitery, or the English interest to the Scotts, " the ruin of both which is aym'd at by this faction. I " most humbly beg your Excellencies commands for " prosecuting of Hendry if your Excellencie thinks it " fitt, and to know whither I may not indicte hime for " sedition, for his rambling preaching contrary to law, " and for his seditious papers. I subscribe my selfe, my " Lord, your Ex^cies most obedient serut., THO: KILLALA " and ACHONRY. Jan. the 22^th [16]7⅘."

[Enclosure.]

" Reuerend and deare Sir,—I could not get occasion to get an answere from Mr. Vause as to your desire so soone as you desired, but I partly know that cuntry as well as he. This is a very short day for those godly men to take such a jurney in hand; saueing your owne wisdome, it had been better advised that they should have gone aboute the beginning of March. Its a sad matter for godly men to trust their poore fraile tabernacles in such a season of the yeare, to goe among a people that is so litle acquainted with pure ordenance (but for this I pas); for the way they haue to goe I make no great doubt but they will be guided. The first stage is Mr. Crawford in Sleigo; if they get employment there it is well, but the four miles beyond Sleigo they must part at a place they call Ballesedarah, one of them to goe to Tirreragh, where he will be kindly welcome to a gentleman that lives in a place called Donaghoy, L^t Leuan by name; he was once married upon a sister of Mr. Temple's, and he will direct him to this ffrancis Allexander whose lettre I have here sent you; but for the other that goes to the County of Roscommon he hath 40 miles to goe from Sleigo, before he comes to ye people that lookes for a vissitt. He must haue directions from Mr. Crafford where he shall lodge the first night of his journey; but the next night he will reach to the place where he will be welcomed in the County of Roscommon, in a place they call Lisnavaly, where a very discreet man dwells that they call Corporall Thomas Michell, who will order his dyet there; its hard by the place where the gentle- woman lives that will kindly entertain him. The way is very good in this road if he can get any company, which is all ye account that I can giue, desiring the good Lord to be with them in there jurney. I have a great could which keeps me in a feavor, otherwise I had seen you myselfe: this is all with my harty loue re- membred to you and yours. I remayne, Sir, your most obliged servant, JON. BOYDE. December 2, 1676."

" Superscribed ffor Mr. Robert Campbell, minister of the Gospell at Raigh. Copia vera. THO: KILLALA ACHONRY."

Michael Boyle, Archbishop of Dublin and Chancellor of Ireland, to Ormonde.—" Dublin, Feb. 10, [16]76. " May it please your Grace,—The encloased, which are " copyes of papers sent vp by the Bishop of Killalla " (and taken out of a presbyterean preachers pocket), " with a letter of his owne, will enforme your Grace of " the continued practises of that sort of people against " the King and Goverment, notwithstanding any thing " that is pretended by them to the contrary, and not- " withstanding the many favours extended to them by " his Majestie. It is not for me to take occasion from " hence to offer my weake thoughts upon this subject, " since I am more then confident that his Majestie takes " his measures in these cases from the best counsaile " in the world; but I must needes acknowledge to your " Grace that it sticks mightily with me how they can " be credited in any thing they promise for his Majesty's " safety and advantadge, since by the Articles of their " beloved covenant (which is the Greate Charter of " there Religion, and unto which they seeme as greate " bygots at present as ever I knew them formerly) they " are ingaged by a relligious vow to advance there " covenant by all the industry they can, and that the " most famous treators amongst them have positiuely " declared, and published in print, that the covenant " being a public and a nationall oath, all persons that " shall succeed in publick places and publick capacityes " in the Kingdom are obliged to pursue the thing " covenanted for, and that obligation is for ever to re- " mayne and abide, and by no humane act to be obsolved " or made voyd. And how destructive that covenant is " to the very being of the king and of our protestant " Government I need not paraphrase. What may " be further discovered out of this matter I am not yet " able to foresee; but I am well assured that our Lord " Lieutenant will pursue it as far as it will go. The " two missionary presbyters are sent for already into " Conaught, where I hope the Bishop of Killalla hath " secured them; and vpon the first intimation of there " being being in custody I know his Excellency intends " to send for those classical prebyters in the North " mentioned in Boyde's letter. Your Grace shall receiue " a farther accompt thereof if it comes to any thing. I " should haue acquainted your Grace with this matter " by the last packet, but that I did not think it good " manners to prevent our Lord Lieutenant's accompt " thereof unto his Majestie in the first place. I pray " God preserue the King and bless your Grace and all " yours. I am your Graces most faythfull and most " humble servant, MICH: DUBLIN, C.

Ormonde to Archbishop Michael Boyle, Chancellor of Ireland.—" 27 Feb^y, 167⅘. My good lord,—Your " Grace's of the 10^th, with the inclosed lettre from the " bishop of Killalla to his Excellency, and the Presbiterian doctrine taken out of the preachers pocket, I " received on the 17th inst, at a time when the businesse " of the house of Lords concerning those lords now in " the Tower was at the hottest, so that I could not well " till now acknowledge the receiveing of them or my " obligation to your Grace for communicateing them " to mee. I am since informed that those seditious " fellowes have upon the matter made their escape, the " penalty of the bonds taken for their appearance being " inconsiderable, as perhaps the partyes to them may " be. I wish the good bishop had been lesse witty and " more wary. It is plainely observable that since the " committment of the lords and the prosecution of the " pamphletts which asserted that this Parlament was " dissolved, the Nonconformists of all sorts have been " disappointed in their expectations and that a proportionable dejection of spiritt hath seised them; " and wee have a very hopefull prospect of a good " session of Parlament, not I thinke to be endangered, " unlesse wee think our selves too sure and so grow " negligent, or too strong and so presume too farr upon " that. I hope this calmenesse here, if wee carry it to " the end, will have good effects there, as I presume the " contrary expectation made those itinerary presbiters " so busy at that time. The ordinary transactions of " this time and place your Grace receives from other " hands. When any thing shall happen worth your " knowledge of another nature, it shall be imparted to " you by your Grace's most faithfull and most humble " servant, Ormonde.

G. Montgomerie to Hugh Montgomerie, Drogheda.— " Edinburgh, ye 17th of Decembr 1677. Deare Sir,— " My constant company since I came hither has been " br [sic], who gives this following account of affayres " here, vizt., that things being come to that height in " ye west and elsewhere here in Scotland as to build " meeteing houses, and meet in great numbers (though " not neare soe great as was reported then in Ireland), " and well appoynted, as they say for theyr own defence " and theyr preachers, who are onely a pack of insignificant rebellious persons never taken notice of " when Presbytery was in its strength. Some where " of being denounced rebells for Pentland Hills, and " the rest noated for keepeing conventicles in ye field, " it being here capitall ride usually with a gard of 10 " or 20 horse, and sometimes incognito only with a " boy. His Majesty has now sent down a letter to the " Councell to know whither they will rather chuse " theyr own Highlanders, the English, or ye Irish, or " all to suppresse the insolence of that people. Though " it is not at all feared that any of these partyes, if they " doe come, should meet with any publiq resistance, " the Councell has determind to send downe commissioners to ye severall shires, my Lord Rosse to Renfrew, my Lord Loudon and some other to Kyle and " Carrick, Broughton and Baldune to Galloway, to see " if it be possible to quiet the minds of the people. " On Thursday they goe hence; the event of this is " feared will be unsuccessfull, for the people are extravagantly zealous for the liberty they have in Ireland, " &c. Yesterday the Councell sate and turned out all " the clarks, which is not usual, and the oath of " secrecy was read to them all upon some particular " message from ye King, which cannot yett be known, " but it is suspected by some that they designe to send " downe the standeing forces to disarme and ly upon " the west (this suspicion). There is one Dr Lesly " primas of the new Colledge of Aberdeen, who wrote a " letter to the Bishop of London, informeing him that " the Church of Scotland was in a very peaceable and " settled condition before ye comeing downe of Duke " Lauderdale, but that now he took such courses as " would ruine the affayres of both Church and State, " which letter was sent by the Bishop of London to ye " Councell here, and immediatli an expresse sent to ye " sheriff to apprehend and bring in the body of the " said Lesly, who is reported to be but a simple man; " if he be caught it is thought he will be hangd, for " the Chancellor will be much his enemy, least he " should be suspected to have had a hand in it. There " is noe possibility of communicateing from hence but " by London. I have got a friend of Broughton's who " is a man for the purpose. I hope you heard from " the west. I designe to leave this within two or " three days. My duty and love to all to whom dew. " I am your most dutefull Sonne, G. Montgomerie."

Ormonde to Viscount Massareene.—" Dublin, 12 " Janry. 77/8. My Lord,—What I write to you now is not " in the capacity of the King's Leivtenant in this " kingdome, but as I am your lordship's friend and " servant, and desirous so to approve myself when I " have ye opportunity. I have been told, not by way of " information but discours, that in the towne of Antrim " there is a legall and orthodox minister, and a Church " for him to celebrate divine service in, but that throughout the yeare there are not aboue halfe a " duzen of the inhabitents or neighbours that on any " Sunday or festivall of the Church assist at that service, " though a meeting house, erected and frequented " without and contrary to law, is very frequently and " much better filled, and this in some measure is attributed not onely to the want of your lordships good " example, but to your contrary practice, for it is suggested that you never go to the Church, and that you " constantly are present at a conventicle held and publiquely resorted to in your owne and your mother in " lawes house. I hope this may not be true; if it be " not, I would be glad to be able to say you do deny it; " if it be, neither your lordship nor I shall be well " able to excuse, much lesse justify it to the king, " considering how you are trusted by him. Whatever " the case is I desire to be informed in it by your selfe, " that I may thence consider what I have to do as the " King's cheife Governor, and, my lord, your lordship's most affectionate, humble servant, Ormonde."

Viscount Massareene to Ormonde.—"Antrim, Jan. 18th. " May it please your Grace,—The honour of yours of the " 12th inst. comming on Monday last when I was from " home, as I was also the day after, I could not till now " returne my most humble acknowledgments. And " however any by way of discourse may have acquainted your Grace with what you are pleased to " mention concerning me and ye inhabitants of ye " parish of Antrim, I shall, having your Grace's command for it, as neare as I can recollect, and with all " ye duty and humble submission imaginable, give " your Grace an account of both. This vicarige beeing " in ye gift of our family, I did (when it last fell " vacant), with ye advice and desire of the then bishop " of this diocess, bestow upon Mr. George Evans, hee " having other small livings contiguous which without " this scarce afforded him maintenance, and besides " what these yielded, I otherwise (not inconsiderably) " gratifyed him. That he is a legall orthodox minister " as your Grace hath heard I never doubted; neither " did I ever present any but such where I am patron. " That he does in our Church sometimes celebrate " divine service I can affirme, for I have often heard " him. As to ye number then present, I have seene " divers times as I judged them about one hundred at " divine service, and more at ye sermon, both in the " time of one Mr. William Dowdall and Mr. Evans, " besides whom there was no other incumbent since " ye kings restoration, which makes me wonder that it " is otherwise represented. One reason possibly may " bee because our late domestick chaplaine, who used to " preach in ye Church, removed into England, from " whence he came, and there being a great difference " betweene him and Mr. Evans, ye one an able preacher " of good expression, ye other not so cleere and to " some little intelligeable. And as to my selfe, Mr. " Evans (who I had so gratifyed) in some respects disobliged me, for which causes I have neyther heard " him so oft as I did formerly, nor as I did others in " ye same church who were here before him; neither " did I thinke my selfe bound to give him ye same " countenance, yet did not withdraw what I formerly " gaue him as additionall to ye parish allowance. This " so falling out at present is ye ground I humbly conceive of what hath been told your Grace, by what " author or upon what designe I am not curious to " inquire. It is I hope without offence no way disallowable to make some difference in my carriage to " persons, which yet hath been but to a very small " degree, if any at all, observable in this case. It hath " indeed been my great care, both by argument and " example, as much as I could in my capacity to keep " up ye assembly in ye Church, and free from all manner " of differences, but, my lord, this is not in my power. " I can rather heartily wish than throughly effect it. " I have my satisfaction in that I have indeavoured to " discharge my conscience in all things that may conduce to union, which I take to be ye duty of every " good Christian, As to that perticular of a meeting-house, I did all I could prudently (in my circumstances) to prevent its building in this parish, but " there is one without ye towne, and I have at a distance " from ye high way seene a thatcht house they call so, " to which I never went, so know not what number " resort to it: I am certainly informed it is not used in " ye time of ye morning or evening church service, but

"betweene 12 a clock and about 2 a clock. As to that "of hearing sermon in my lady Massareene dowager "her house, with whom I have ye happiness and leave "to reside, she being unable to goe abroad, I have "heard ye same minister in her house; she does, and "so doe divers of our servants and tenants who choose "so to doe, they beeing not prohibited by her ladyship. "Whatever trust I have been honoured with, I have, "according to my best skill and knowledge, as well as "ye purport of ye oaths taken on such occasions, faith-"fully performed ye duties which in ye place of a "justice of peace and member of ye privy Councill lay "upon me. I have had no imployments save these, "civill or millitary, but that commission to be governour "of ye County of London-derry in my Lord of Essex's "time, which at your Graces last access to ye govern-"ment I humbly tendered to you, and you were pleased "to renew, by all which I have no proffit accruing but "ye opportunity of serving ye king and country, and "that indeed I doe value before all other. Now if "after all my faithfull and continued desires to serve "ye king and your grace, and my knowne practice in "religion (which I had rather actions than words "should demonstrate), some present discourses or "remarks concerning me by those who do not, it may "be, wish or know me well, should create thereby an "opinion in your Grace that I am not fit further to "serve in these capacityes, I submit them to your "Graces pleasure. And as nothing but your injunction "can excuse ye trouble of this long letter, so next to "his Majesties and your wonted favour extended to "those who serve him faithfully, I humbly pray my "constant loyalty to ye king and steddy adherance to "the reformed establishd religion may justify mee. I "have now (may it please your Grace), with all ye "cleerness, I could obserued ye contents of your letter, "and submitted this to your great judgment. Whether "any thing on this account be worthy your further "notice, or in my deportment unsutable to a good "Christian, a loyall subject, and your Graces most "humble, obliged, and most obedient servant, Massa-"reene."

There are also in the collection some documents connected with Douglas, a Presbyterian preacher mentioned in the following letters:—

"Belfast, 26 Dec. 1677. My euer hon^{d} Lord,—On munday last I had notice given me of one Mas-Douglas, an eminent preacher and co-partner with Maj. Welsh in the great conventicles laterly held in Scotland; and that night Mas-Douglas came vnto this towne, of which I had present notice. I presently had him in my chamber, where after spending some heavy sighs and groans with him, and promising unto him kindnes and friendship, and that he should be provided for in this kingdome, provided that he would disclose what was truth to his knowledge of the designs now on foot in Scotland, he did condescend unto it. I went immediately and acquainted my Lord Granard therewith, and brought him unto his Lordship, and after my Lord had a while discoursed with him, he commanded me to take Mas-Douglas out with me, and to try what I could gett out of him, for he could not gather anything out of him to purpose. I took him to my chamber againe, and after renewing my promises unto him, he has related unto me—

"That there is a full purpose in the phanaticks of Scotland to take the sword in hand, and that the covenant is there renewed.

"That there is (as Mas-Douglas calls them) papers past and subscribed throughout the greatest part of the kingdome, and the greatest noblemen and gentlemen therein concernd.

"That Mas-John Welsh is at this time in England and has promisd faithfully to the people to returne againe unto them by the 30th of January next, and that in the mean time he has left orders that they should not meet in any great numbers. Mas-Douglas doth expect within two or three dayes to haue some letters out of Scotland, whereby to confirme what he has now declared, and much more, and has promised me that if I will but keep him here secret, that he will in short time doe very eminent service for God, his King, and country. My Lord Granard would haue confined him, but I haue prevailed for his liberty, and have taken his parole that he will not stir from hence; and since he has declared that if he had bin confined he would thereby have bin made uncapable of doing the service he designs, by some words that fell from him, I doe heartily wish he were with your Honor for some few hours discourse; and if the letters he expects out of Scotland doe arrive there before my Coll. comes away for Dublin, and that I find in them any thing of moment, I will, if I can prevayle, perswade Sir William to take him along with him to your Honor.

"My Lord, he has discovered and named to me a very eminent statesman, whome he says they are affered off, and two more of the greatest seers of that kingdome, which by my Coll. I will give your Honor an account of, and what further I can gett out of him. My Lord, I am your irrevocable obliged and obedient serv^{t} att command, ROD: MANSELL. For the R^{t} hon^{ble} and my ever Hon^{d} Coll. Richard Earle of Arran, Coll. of his Majestie's Regiment of guards in Dublin."

"Belfast, the 29th X^{bris}, 1677. My euer honored Lord,—Ther has not any boeatt come from Scotland vnto any of these partts since my last vnto your Lordshipp, for that the gent is now in my custody and charge has not receiued the papers hee dayle expected from thence, as alsoe letters how the state of affayres goe one ther; which makes mee that I cannot giue your honor that accoumpt I promised in my last. But, how euer, I haue obtaynd from him to putt downe in writting the names of those pahnatick preachers, and whatt thayer dayle preachings vnto the people haue bin and are; alsoe howe and by whome thayer damnable and deep treassons haue bine a laying for this two yeares past, and whoe haue bine the chife instruments there in, whoe is to lead them and whoe was employed to treatt betwixt them and him, whatt answers he receiued and whatt incouragements giuen; alsoe whatt numbers of armes they haue had bought out of Holland, the seuerall marchants names that bought them, by whatt ways they wear conuayd into that kingdome; alsoe whear they now ley hid to the number of tenn thousand fyer armes, and the perticular townes and places alsoe whear the papers and engagments that are subscribed doe ley att this tyme; and much more. The perticulers att large your honor shall receive by my Co^{ll}, whoe comes from hear one Munday next; but I humbly begg that your Lordship would haue Mr. Douglas up to Dublin, to discourse with his Grace and your Lordshipp, for reasons which I shall giue your Lordshipp by my Co^{ll}. I am siure that I need not press your care that nothing of this come vnto an Scotchman's knowledg, but Mr. Douglas presses mee to giue your honor that cawtion. Craueing your honor's fauor to persent my humble diuty vnto his Grace my Lord L^{t}., I begg leaue to bee, my Lord, your faithfull, affectionatt, obedyantt searvantt att command, RICH: MANSELL."

"May it pleas your Grace,—I this day receiued this enclosd from Mr. Dowglas, and I perceiue by his leter vnto mee that hee is in greatt fear of his life. Hee beggs ernestly that I would take care to send vnto your Grace an express, and not to trust it by the poste, which I haue accordingly don. Hee for my encouragment soe to doe, asiures mee that besides letters and subscribtions which hee will produce vnto your Grace, and that vnder the hands of those your Grace doeth least suspect, hee will furthar disclose vnto your Grace the hole contryuances of affayers now on foote in Scotland, which shall be greatt seruice vnto his Maiesty and the good of his kingdoms, which I thought fitt, as in diuty bound, to acquaint your Grace. Humbly begg leaue to subscribe my selfe your Graces most diutyfull and obediant, humble searv^{tt} att command, RODK: MANSELL. Belfast, January 7th 10th, att six of the clock in the morning. For the Moste Hon^{rble} James Ducke of Ormund, his Grace Lord Lieu^{t}. Gen^{ll}., and Gen^{rll}. Gouernor of Ireland, for his Maiesties speciall seruice: att Dublin humbly persent."

(Enclosure.)

"These are the perticulers hee promisd mee to disclose and deliuer vnto his Grace when att Dublin.

"(1.) that hee would certaynly deliuer vnto his Grace the subscribtions of the nobillyty and gentry.

"next that, to confirme them, hee would alsoe deliuer the severall letters boeath of the nobilytie and genttry concernd in this designe.

"Alsoe whatt sumes of moneys was collected, and by whome, boeath in England, Scotland, and Ireland.

"Alsoe produce two letters from two Knights out of Ingland concernd heerin; and that hee had receiued those letters from the Earle of Quinsburrow's owne hands.

"Alsoe seuerall letters from my Lord Granard. Hee said that to the beast of his memory he had seauen of his; but that one of them was but a little bitt of a note vnto the Dutches of Laderdale, and one that was datid the 2nd of October last.

"Alsoe that they had ceartaynele risen in armes in October last, all things being fully perpard; but my Lord Ducke Laderdall aduised the contrary.

"Alsoe that ther is now money collecting in Scotland, and to be payd inn by the first of March next; whoe the collectors are; as alsoe 4,000*l.* which is to be collectid in Ireland and payd in Scotland by the first of March next.

"Alsoe hee bid mee be assured and obsearue that in case that the parlyant of Ingland would declare a warr a gainst france, that then Ducke Lauderdall would sone leaue these kingdoms.

"Alsoe that ther was yearly payd vnto the chife of the Presbyteryans' minister 40*l.* per anm., and that by my Lord Granard vnto them, and that ther was more of those ministers that came out of Scotland into Ireland; but before they wear placed or prouided for thay behouft to haue my Lord Granard's approbation, and without it wear not prouided for.

"Alsoe that ther was at this teyme, within six miles of Belfast, a kind of a unyversity sett vp for the teaching of younge men to be ministers, as alsoe for the instructing of gent. children, that they meight not larne vnder any episcopall tiutors, least they should be drawne that way."

Endorsed by Ormonde:—"Giun mee by Live^tnt Coll. "Mansell, the 19 of January 167⅝, and in the presence "of the Lord Chancellor and Sir William Flower."

"That he was a fidler's son of Chepstow, that some "time (not long before) he had been in that town, in "a very handsom habit and equipage, where some of "the gentlemen of the town (according to the hos-"pitable humour of the place towards strangers) enter-"tain'd him with a great deale of ciuility and respect. "From thence he went into Carmarthenshire, and "there to Sir Rice Rudd's house, where he enquires of "a seruant of Sir Rice Rudd's whether his master "were at home; he told him yes, and desired to knowe "who would speak with him, tell him (says Mr. "Bedows) God Allmighty is here. The man (not a "little wondring at the answer) went in and told it "his master. All this while the stranger sate on "horseback at the gate. When Sir Richard came to "the doore, Mr. Beddoes told him that he had heard "he was an honest hospitable gentleman, and that he "was (though a stranger) come to wayte upon him. "Sir Richard desired him to alight and walk in, which "he did. After some time and discourse, wherein he "made frequent mention of Middlesex, Rochester, and "Tidley, with such a familiarity, and giueing them noe "other addition to their names, as if he had been some "great man of birth, chardg, and education. In the "midst of their discours, Sir Rice Rudd receiues his "post letters, and with them a gazzett, wherein there "was an advertisement of the losse of a horse, with a "description of the person who was suspected to haue "stolen this horse. While Sir Rice was reading this "advertisement, he sometimes cast he eye upon his "guest, then reads, then again takes of his eye, and "obserus how the character and the stranger agreed. "Mr. Beddoes obseruing this, makes an apology to "goe out of doores, calls for his horses, and away he "goes that night (as they heard) towards Pembroke-"shire. But they neuer heard of him after till he was "in euery body's mouth for the great discouery. And "the gentlemen at Brecon were well laught at, and "frequently ralley'd for the great entertainment they "had given this piece of errantry, when they came to "understand his quality." Hono[ble] "Mr. Secretary Coventry doe forthwith signifie to the "Lord Lieutenant of Ireland that he take all possible "care for the seizure of the said Walsh, as also to "prevent and suppresse all disorderly conventicles of "the phanaticks in those parts, from whom any danger "may be apprehended; and that the Armes which are "licensed to be imported do not fall into the hands of "such dangerous and suspected persons. And whereas "this day Mr. John Tasburgh, of Bodney in the County "of Norfolk, hath had a passe to goe with his family "into Ireland, there to remayn for a year, and to followe "his lawfull occasions, hauing an estate in Conoght "and some law sutes to prosecute: The Lord Lieu-"tenant at his arrivall in Dublyn is to cause security "to be taken that nothing shalbe don by him to the "disturbance of the peace. Whereof Mr. Secretary is to "giue notice accordingly. Robert Southwell."

30. Order of Council respecting children of Lady Dunkellin.—"After our very hearty comendations to "your Grace: The Lady Dunkellin having obteined a "passe to go with her three children into Ireland, "whereof one of them is a son, and grandchild to the "R[t] Hono[ble] the Earle of Clan Ricard: Wee do by his "Majestie's comand pray and require you, on the child's "arrivall there, to cause security to be taken from the "said Earl of Clan Ricard, and such other neer re-"lations as you think fit, as may hinder his being sent "to be educated beyond the seas, and thereby prevent "the inconveniencies that have befallen some other "families of quality whose children being sent young "abrode have not returned back, altho' his Majesties "letters of Priuy Seale have been sent to summon them "on their allegiance to returne to their natiue country. "And so wee bid your Grace very heartily farewell. "From the Councill Chamber in Whitehall, the thirtieth "day of May 1679. Your Grace's very loving frends, "Anglesey, C. P. S., Shaftesbury, Pr., Worcester, Win-"chester, Lauderdale, Arlington, Salisbury, J. Bridge-"water, J. Fauconberg, Halifax, H. London, Russell, "W. Temple, Robert Southwell.—For our very good "Lord the Duke of Ormonde, Lord Lieutenant Generall "and Generall Gouernor of his Majesties kingdome of "Irelande."

Order of Council in England on education of Lord Dunkellin's son.—"After our very hearty commenda-"tions to your Grace: Wee did formerly by our letters "of the 30th of May last recommend it to your Grace

MARQUIS OF ORMONDE

" to take such security from the Earle of Clanrickard
" as might hinder the education of his Grandchild, the " Lord Dunkellin's son, in the parts beyond the seas, in " regard of the many inconveniencys that might happen
" by his being sent abroad so young, and takeing into " consideration that the said child is now arrived to an
" age capable of being instructed as well in the prin" ciples of religion as in other good learning, and that
" the neglect thereof may give occasion to his said
" Grandfather to take him from his Mother, and to
" bring him up in the Roman Catholique Religion,
" which his Ma^{ty} being desirous by all means possible
" to have prevented, hath commanded us to signify the " same to your Grace and the Lords of His Ma^{ty} Privy
" Councill there, and once more effectually to recom-
" mend it to you (as Wee do hereby) to take care that
" the said child be educated in the Protestant Religion,
" and in order thereunto that you cause him to be " placed in the house of one of the Bishops of that " kingdom, to be carefully instructed and bred up in
" the doctrine of the Church of England; and to use your
" utmost endeavours with the said Earle of Clanrickard
" to make such allowance for the support of his
" said Grandchild and charge of his education as is
" answerable to the relation he hath to his Lordship.
" And so nothing doubting of your more than ordinary
" care in this affair, Wee bid you very heartily ffare-
" well. From the Court at Whitehall, the 20th day of " February $16\frac{7}{8}\frac{8}{0}$. Your Graces very loving friends,
" Finch, C.; Anglesey, C. P. S.; Radnor; Bridgewater;
" H. London; Henry Coventry; L. Hyde; L. Jenkins;
" Fra: North; S. Goddolphin; John Nicholas. To
" our very good Lord, the Lord Duke of Ormonde,
" Lord Lieutent. of his Majesties Kingdome of Ireland,
" and to the Lords of his Majesties Privy Council

MARQUIS OF ORMONDE

26. Petition of William Martin, lately shipwrecked on north coast of Ireland.

1679–80, March.

3. Report to Duke of Ormonde on petition of Mabel, Countess Dowager of Fingall.

CIRCULAR OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMISSION.

Rolls House, Chancery Lane.

Her Majesty has been pleased to appoint under Her Sign Manual certain Commissioners to ascertain what MSS. are extant in the collections of private persons and in institutions, which are calculated to throw light upon subjects connected with the Civil, Ecclesiastical, Literary, or Scientific history of this country. A copy of the Commission is inclosed, which will best explain the object Her Majesty has in view.

The Commissioners think it probable that you may feel an interest in this object, and be willing to assist in the attainment of it, and with that view they desire me to lay before you an outline of the course which they propose to follow.

If any nobleman or gentleman express his willingness to submit any paper or collection of papers within his possession or power to the examination of the Commissioners, they will cause an inspection to be made by some competent person, upon the information derived from whom the Commissioners will make a private report to the owner on the general nature of the papers in his collection, such report will not be made public without the owner's consent, but a copy of it will be deposited and preserved in the Public Record Office, to which no person will be allowed to have access without the consent of the owner of the papers reported on.

Where the papers are not mere insulated documents, but form a collection which appears to be of Literary or Historical value, a chronological list or brief calendar will be drawn up, and a copy thereof presented to the owner, and to no other person without his consent, but the original of such calendar will be deposited for preservation in the Public Record Office, to which no person will be allowed to have access without the consent of the owner of such collection.

The Commissioners will also, if so requested, give their advice as to the best means of repairing and preserving any papers or MSS. which may be in a state of decay, and are of Historical or Literary value.

To avoid any possible apprehension that the examination of papers by the Commissioners may extend to or include any title deeds or legal documents, I have to call your attention to the fact that nothing of a private character or relating to the titles of existing owners is to be divulged, and to assure you that positive instructions will be given to every person who examines the MSS. that if in the course of his examination any title deeds or other documents of a private character chance to come before him, they are to be instantly put aside, and are not to be reported on or calendared under any pretence whatever.

The object of the Commission is solely the discovery of unknown Historical and Literary materials, and in all their proceedings the Commissioners will direct their attention to that object exclusively.

In no instance will any MS. be removed from the owner's residence without his request or consent, but if for convenience any MSS. be intrusted to the Commissioners, they will be deposited in the Public Record Office, and be treated with the same care as if they formed part of the Public Muniments, and will be returned to the owner at any time specified by him.

The cost of inspections, reports, and calendars, and the conveyance of documents, will be defrayed at the public expense without any charge to owners.

The Commissioners will feel much obliged if you will communicate to them the names of any gentleman who may be able and willing to assist in obtaining the objects for which this Commission has been issued.

I have the honour to be,
Your obedient servant,
